The Skippers kept it going Monday morning, as Doonan potted a pair, Queenan a solo tally and goalie Johnny Wade stopped 20 shots.

Skippers 7, Carver 0

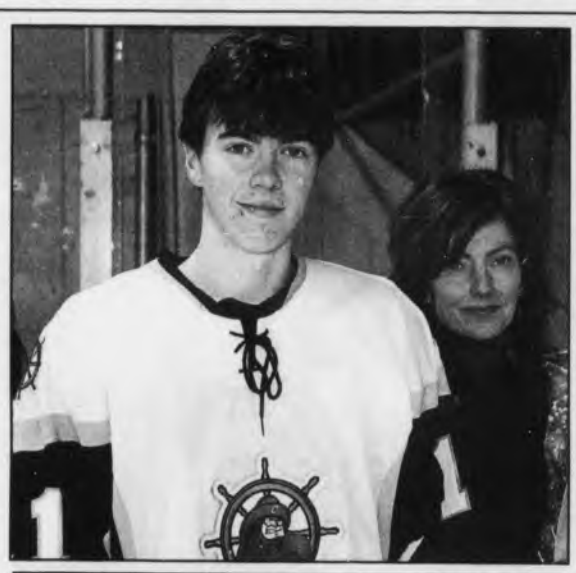
Tuesday's clincher started badly, as the bus scheduled to pick the team up at Cohasset High at 6:30 a.m. for the 8:30 start in Bridgewater was late.

Once the bus did arrive, though, that was forgotten. Nothing would interfere with the mission of the day.

"This one was for the seniors," said Walsh. "All we talked about was making sure this would not be the last game for our seniors."

Despite having only 10 minutes to get dressed and on the ice after the bus arrived, the Skippers hit the Bridgewater Arena ice flying. They scored three goals in the first and three more in the second to put the game out of reach and avenge a painful early season 3-3 tie with these same Crusaders.

Queenan scored the game's first goal three minutes later. Doonan finished with a hat trick, and senior Paul Pozniak closed out the scoring on the first shift of the third period.



Walsh emptied his bench after that, and few regulars for back on the ice.

Johnny Wade, named to the South Shore League all-star team earlier in the week, stopped 19 shots to record his fourth shutout of the season.

Hey now, you're an All-Star

The Skippers had five players voted to the SSL all-star team, finishing second in that pursuit to only unbeaten league champ Norwell (six all-stars).

Joining Wade in Sunday's all-star game will be Queenan, Doonan, Goetz and senior defenseman Ian Lyster.

score 39-13 Cohasset.

Robbie Mahoney (six points, six rebounds) played big on the defensive end coming up with a couple of boards in this quarter.

Mike Monaco ran the offense for a bit, coming up with two big free throws. By the end of the half, the Skippers were on top 47-21.

Cohasset had the ball to start the second half and kept up their strategy of precision passing, tough defense and fast break points. By the end of the third frame, the hometown team was on top 64-33. The quarter ended with a technical foul against Marian and Jones sank both.

Coach Bo Ruggiero cleared his bench in the fourth quarter and there wasn't much change in the strategy of the game. Cohasset continued to play focused, patient, disciplined basketball. Twelve Skippers in all scored in the game. Kevin O'Connell (one-for-two from the free throw line) had four rebounds and one of the best assists of the game. O'Connell drove to the middle of the paint, drew the defense into him and dumped the ball to a waiting Mahoney who got the bunny shot from underneath. Drew Cobin (two points) and Sam Richardson (two points) helped the Skippers hold the Mustangs to just 10 points in the quarter.

Friday the 13th went about as well as the kids in the movie for Cohasset as Lynnfield came to town in a non-league matchup. Lynnfield needed to win to make it into the postseason. And in order to make that happen they brought a busload of active and loud fans.

A 68-64 Lynnfield win welcomed the visitors to the Tournament.

Cohasset won the tipoff and scored off a Sturino (18 points) jumper. The game was fast paced and precise. Sturino hit for two more buckets and fed Maher underneath for another. The first quarter ended with the Skippers down one, 19-18.

The second quarter ended also with Cohasset down one, 35-36. Jones had 10 points in the half, 14 in the game and six assists. Martin finished with 13 points and 13 rebounds. The highlight was a very well orchestrated and timed alley oop dunk on an inbounds play to Martin from Jones that got the crowd on their feet. Sullivan gym was rocking on its foundation.

Cohasset slipped in the third quarter, ending that frame down by 10, 56-46.

The Skippers, the team with come-from-behind experience, battled back.

Marcus Charles (nine points, five rebounds) hit for three that got the Cohasset contingent on their feet. Jones then fed Martin off a missed shot who hit Charles again for two, cutting the lead to five..

Lynnfield countered with a three of their own before Charles hit Sturino underneath. Lynnfield turned the ball over on their next possession, still leading by six.

Maher cut the lead to four off a rainbow jumper on a pass from Jones. But on the next possession Maher fouled out defending a three.

A few minutes later, after trading buckets, the Lynnfield lead was still four and Martin came up with not only a block shot but the ball as well and Cohasset had the chance to cut the lead to two, but missed the layup. Lynnfield failed to score, committing a foul, but still not in the penalty. Cohasset had another chance to cut the lead to two. They passed the ball around the offense patiently, Lynnfield defended well. The shot clock was ticking down. Jones drove into the paint and pulled up for a jumper and nailed it. Cohasset was down by two with less than two minutes to go. With 45 seconds to go, the lead was back to four, but Marcus Charles came back, stole the ball and hit a three to get the Skippers within two with 20 seconds left. Lynnfield answered with a pair of free throws to ice the win.

The Skippers will know their fate today when the MIAA Tournament pairings are announced, and will be back in action soon.

Global Hockey goes worldwide

Global Hockey, a youth hockey organization headquartered in the Mark Bavis Ice Arena in Rockland MA is not kidding when they call themselves Global. This summer this regional hockey program will go international when two of their coaches will travel to the Philippines to help coach 3 Philippine hockey teams in an international ice hockey tournament in Manila.

Global Hockey currently has teams in all the youth hockey age groups from ages 6 to 18. Each team is coached by qualified professional coaches and unlike town hockey organizations almost all games are played in the Mark Bavis Arena, a state of the art 2 rink facility, located on VFW Parkway in Rockland.

During a recent visit to the Philippines, Coach Mike Condon, of Cohasset, had the opportunity to meet with several Philippine hockey coaches, in Manila. "These guys have a passion for the game", said Condon, "they love it". There are currently three ice hockey rinks in Manila, a city of 12 million people. "They have ice, they have dedicated players and they have dedicated coaches, what they really lack is equipment and a complete development program', added Condon. "After talking to these guys I knew if we could bring the Global Hockey model to the Philippines we could really help them build a complete program, like we have at Global", concluded Condon.

"We understand what it likes to start a youth hockey organization from scratch", said Matt Smith, GM and Head of Hockey Operations for Global Hockey. "When Mike spoke to me about this I thought it was a great opportunity for us to help them grow their program", Smith added. The Global hockey program is designed to advance players from each level, having learned a core group of skill sets necessary for success at the next level. "Unlike other programs, our principal concern is player development", stated Smith.

Global Hockey is seeking donations of useable hockey equipment for use in this summer program. "In addition to preparing these Philippine teams for their tournament we also want to offer a learn to play hockey program", said Mike Condon. "The cost of equipment is a major hurdle for these guys, we hope to bring as much equipment with us as possible to allow those kids with their noses pressed against the glass a chance to get out on the ice with us", he added.

If you would like to donate equipment or have any questions about Global hockey, please check out their web site at www.globalhockey.org or call them at 781-982-7070.

Steve Faber and Lisa Evans enjoy the CHS Hockey Boosters third annual Winter Extravaganza.

Hockey fun(d)-raiser a winner!

On Friday Feb. 6, the CHS Hockey Boosters held its third annual Winter Extravaganza fundraiser at the Red Lion Inn Barn. Over 250 Hockey supporters spent the evening listening and dancing to the music of The Gratefuls, participating in a silent auction that included over 45 items donated by local merchants and hockey enthusiasts including a signed Bruins hockey stick, Patriots, Red Sox and Bruins tickets, weekend stays at luxury hotels, fine dining at local restaurants and items including jewelry, clothing and gift certificates.

This event is a major fundraiser for the CHS Hockey team with the proceeds going to fund a wide variety of team necessities including the Junior Varsity season, Assistant Coaches salaries, scholarships, uniforms and team events throughout the season. The event was a huge success for the third year in a row eclipsing the previous year's achievements.

The CHS Hockey team would like to say thank you to: All of the people who attended the event and showed their support, all of the merchants who donated items for the silent auction, The Gratefuls for putting on another stellar performance and the Red Lion Inn for their generosity in supplying the venue. See you all next winter.

Guests enjoyed dancing to the music of The Gratefuls at the Red Lion Inn Barn.

Got Turf?

Join us Saturday, February 28 at Atlantica at 7:30 pm as we try and reach our "goal" for the new Town Turf Field at the Clark Chatterton Athletic Complex. The clock is ticking – we're past the 50 yard line but need to raise the remaining $230,000 by March 31 to make opening day this September, 2009 a reality.

A new turf field solves the field shortage problem in town allowing our youth more athletic and recreation opportunities.

The Best & The Brightest

Braintree Forum, Cohasset Mariner, Duxbury Reporter, Hanover Mariner, The Hingham Journal, Kingston Reporter, Marshfield Mariner, Norwell Mariner, Old Colony Memorial, Pembroke Mariner & Reporter, Scituate Mariner, Wareham Courier, Weymouth News

We know there are many bright, talented and caring young adults in our communities. Coming the week of May 24th, a special section entitled "The Best & The Brightest" will appear in the COHASSET MARINER to celebrate their accomplishments.

Please help us find these remarkable teens and young adults by filling out the nomination form on this page. You can nominate an individual between the ages of 16 and 21 who, you believe, deserves to be honored, whether it be for academic achievement, volunteerism, athletics, artistic acumen or the pursuit of excellence in another field. Here's your opportunity to get involved.

You can bring the form to the Community Newspaper Company office at 182 Standish Ave., Plymouth, MA 02360; mail it to Beth Doyle at the same address; or fax it to 508-591-6601.
Ballots are also available online at www.wickedlocalspecials.com/best/cohasset-mariner.pdf

All entries will be considered by a selection panel. One winner from each town will be interviewed and photographed for inclusion in "The Best & The Brightest," a CNC special section devoted to sharing the stories of these outstanding individuals.

Alzheimer's Caregiver Support Group

Cohasset Elder Affairs is seeking individuals caring for a loved one with Alzheimer's disease to attend five 90-minute weekly group sessions, with approximately five to 10 other family members. The sessions will offer information on AD, its symptoms, tips for improving communication and interaction, and strategies for reducing caregiver stress. The program is under the direction of Dr. Maureen O'Connor, Boston University Alzheimer's Disease Center. The person with AD is not involved in any way.

Call Cohasset Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112 to register or for morer information.

Astronomy Festival at Wompatuck Feb. 27

Celebrate the 400th anniversary of Galileo's invention of the telescope by bringing your family to Wompatuck State Park to learn about the night sky in winter! The South Shore Astronomical Society will have telescopes set up for visitors to view the moon, Venus, the Orion Nebula, and more. There will be a warming fire in the Visitor Center along with some fun activities and a storytelling presentation.

The Astronomy Festival will take place on Friday, Feb. 27th, from 7 pm to about 9 pm. Please join us at the Wompatuck State Park Visitor Center located on Union Street in Hingham. Program will be cancelled in the event of inclement weather. Call Wompatuck State Park for more information: 781-749-7160.

Program is free and open to the public. Sponsored by the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation. See the DCR Events Calendar at: www.mass.gov/dcr/events.htm.

Choral Arts Society to present 'Cabaret au Chocolat'

The Choral Arts Society will present its fourth annual "Cabaret au Chocolat" fundraiser on Saturday, Feb. 28, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., in the St. Mary of the Nativity Parish Center, Scituate Harbor. The celebration will feature wine, music, and chocolate; a silent auction; lots of edibles courtesy of local vendors and from the kitchens of chorus members; a 50/50 raffle; and an interlude of music presented by the Choral Art Society.

Tickets are $20 in advance and $25 at the door, and can be purchased at Front Street Book Shop in Scituate, Buttonwood Books in Cohasset, or from any Choral Arts Society member. Visit the Web site at choralartsociety.org or call 781-545-8295 for more information.

Choral Arts Society is a non-audition community chorus of the South Shore, celebrating its 50th anniversary year. The spring concert, May 30 at the new Thayer Academy Performing Art Center, will feature Mendelssohn's "St. Pauloratorio" with an orchestra and the Braintree Choral Society, all under the direction of Danica A. Buckley. As part of its anniversary celebration, the Society will present a scholarship to a local student pursuing music studies. A portion of the proceeds of the Cabaret will go toward the scholarship, and a portion toward the costs of the spring concert.

Civil War Camp meets monthly

Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War Satuit Camp 3188 meets at 7 p.m. on the second Wednesday of the month at Grand Army Hall, 353 Country Way in Scituate.

The Sons of Unions Veterans of the Civil War (SUVCW) is a patriotic and educational organization.

Membership is open to males, ages 14 and older, who are direct descendants of a solider, sailor, or Marine who served during the Civil War. Junior and associate memberships are also available.

The camp will help prospective members with the paperwork to determine eligibility. Members do not have to be Scituate residents.

For information contact Conley Ford at cfordcon@comcast.net or call 781-545-0054.

Scholarships from Garden Club Federation

The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts makes Scholarships available for high school seniors, college students, and graduate students whose field of study is related to gardening or environmental concerns. The applicant must be a resident of Massachusetts and be sponsored by a Garden Club. The deadline for applications is March1st.

Continuing Education Scholarships for Primary and Secondary School teachers are also available. Teachers who wish to further their education by taking courses or participating in workshops in ecology, conservation, horticulture, environmental studies, or related subjects can receive help with tuition. The applicant must be a state resident and be teaching in a Massachusetts elementary, middle or high school. Applications will be accepted any time during the academic year.

Anyone interested in one of these scholarships can obtain more information and an application form by contacting the scholarship committee of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset by phone at 781-383-1446 or 781-545-5914 or by e mail at clcardelle@comcast.net.

Spring Fling!

Save the Date: Spring Fling Auction, Saturday, March 21, from 6:30-9:30 p.m.

Often described as "the most fun you can have in a church" Second Congregational Church's Spring Fling Time and Talent Auction is an evening of great food, terrific auction items, and fabulous company. The evening begins at 6:30 with gourmet appetizers, and the silent and live auctions begin promptly at 7:00 and continue along with periodic raffles until 9:30. Auction items include sports and theater tickets; vacation homes; private baseball, sailing, and riding lessons; photography and artwork; and gift baskets. No admission fee - but to reserve a table (up to 10 people) and/or tickets, please RSVP to the church office at: scc@2ndcc.org or 383-0345.

Pilgrim Arena offers scholarships

Applications for ten $5,000 scholarships are available at the Pilgrim Skating Arena, 75 Recreation Park Drive in Hingham.

Interested seniors must pick up and sign for the application in person at the arena pro shop. Completed applications must be returned by Wednesday, April 15.

Applicants will be judged by members of the Scholarship Committee of the Board of Directors at Pilgrim Arena.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF FEB. 16, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Some unsettling facts about a past situation could come to light. And while you'd love to deal with it immediately, it's best to get more information to support your case.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A straightforward approach to a baffling situation is best. Don't allow yourself to be drawn into an already messy mass of tangles and lies. Deal with it and move on.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Don't be discouraged or deterred by a colleague's negative opinion about your ideas. It could actually prove to be helpful when you finally get around to finalizing your plan.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Ignore that sudden attack of "modesty," and step up to claim the credit you've so rightly earned. Remember: A lot of people are proud of you and want to share in your achievement.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A financial "deal" that seems to be just right for you Leos and Leonas could be grounded more in gossamer than substance. Get an expert's advice to help you check it out.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Don't ignore that suddenly cool or even rude attitude from someone close to you. Asking for an explanation could reveal a misunderstanding you were completely unaware of.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Unless you have sound knowledge, and not just an opinion, it's best not to step into a family dispute involving a legal matter, regardless of whom you support. Leave that to the lawyers.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An awkward situation presents the usually socially savvy Scorpian with a problem. But a courteous and considerate approach soon helps clear the air and ease communication.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A calmer, less-tense atmosphere prevails through much of the week, allowing you to restore your energy levels before tackling a new challenge coming up by week's end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your approach to helping with a friend or family member's problem could boomerang unless you take time to explain your method and how and why it (usually!) works.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Someone who gave you a lot of grief might ask for a chance for the two of you to make a fresh start. You need to weigh the sincerity of the request carefully before giving your answer.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Too much fantasizing about an upcoming decision could affect your judgment. Better to make your choices based on what you know now rather than on what you might learn later.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Interim Director of Religious Education: Jim FitzGerald. Music Director: Allegra Martin. Interim Organists: Carolyn Bates and Maureen Hague. Parish Administrator: Sandy Bailey. Parish Committee Chair: Mary Parker.

We welcome all to our inclusive spiritual community. We affirm our Unitarian Universalist Principles and put them into action by worshiping together, caring for one another, and working for a safe, just, and sustainable world.

Saturday, Feb. 22

• 8:00 AM – Circle Ministry (group led by Bill Baird & John Kornet) and meeting on the 2nd & 4th Sundays.

• 9:50 AM – Childcare for our youngest. Children and youth are invited to join their parents and caregivers in the Meeting House for intergenerational worship.

• 10:00 AM – Intergenerational Worship in the Meeting House – "Each of Us a Star" - with guest Ben Tousley, folksinger and storyteller. Susan Hobson will serve as lay leader.

Ben Tousley returns to First Parish with this service of songs stories and readings for all ages. The focus is ordinary people who do extraordinary things. A graduate of Harvard Divinity School, Ben has appeared in concert and has led worship for over 100 Unitarian Universalist congregations. His Community Music programs for schools and libraries received the 1989 Boston Beyond War award "for communicating a clear sense of our richly diverse human family through music."

Join us for refreshments and fellowship in the Parish House directly following the service and RE classes.

All are welcome as we worship and learn and live our faith together! To learn more about First Parish Unitarian Universalist, please come by the Parish House and pick up or sign up for the current monthly newsletter, The Common, or visit our website at www.firstparishcohasset.org or contact Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull, Minister, at 781-383-1100.

In Lent we also offer the following programs:

• Bach and Spirituality: The St. John Passion with Dr. John Whiteside, Director of Music Ministries

Wednesdays March 4, 11, 18 & 25, from 6:30 – 7:00 pm (dessert and fellowship), 7:00 – 8:00 pm class

Johann Sebastian Bach was a deeply spiritual man who developed a musical language that was representative of his spirituality. Using St. John as a background, join our new director of music ministries, John Whiteside, for this exploration of how music and spirituality work together to deepen our experience of Lent.

• The Meaning of Jesus: Two Visions

Sundays March 1, 8, 15, 22 & 29 in the Rectory, from 12:00 – 1:30 pm

Marcus Borg and N.T. Wright are two well-known and highly respected Biblical scholars and Anglican theologians. Good friends and colleagues, they represent two very different perspectives in the church: Borg considers himself a "progressive", Wright is more "orthodox." Together they wrote The Meaning of Jesus: Two Visions, in which they offer their divergent interpretations of some of the most fundamental issues of our faith.

• Show Me the Way: Lenten Meditations by Henri Nouwen

Wednesdays March 4 – April 8 from 10:30 – 11:30 am

Journey through Lent with this spiritual classic by the great Catholic priest, monk and writer Henri Nouwen. We will use this book in our daily devotions at home, and meet on Wednesday mornings to share our thoughts and reflections with each other.

Award-winning 'Blackbird' opens Feb. 20

Scituate's Bates Wilder takes lead role

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Bates Wilder, of Scituate, and Marianna Bassham star in the SpeakEasy Stage Company production of "Blackbird," running thru March 21 at the Calderwood Pavilion at the Boston Center for the Arts. Tickets and information, 617-933-8600 or www.SpeakEasyStage.com

Actor Bates Wilder can afford to be picky when it comes to the parts he plays.

After all, the Scituate resident has a full-time job as stage manager for the Boston production of "Shear Madness" and part-time teaching gigs at Emerson College and Boston University, so when he decides to take work as an actor he chooses carefully. And, if his most recent stage work in not one but two award-winning roles is any indication, Wilder makes some very wise decisions. He may now be looking to extend that winning streak with "Blackbird," which opens this week at Boston's SpeakEasy Stage.

"These days, I'm not chasing acting roles. I've been with 'Shear Madness' since 1998 and I've been stage managing the show for the past seven years," said Wilder, 47, by telephone last week following a performance of the comedy murder mystery that has been at the Charles Playhouse since 1980. "We do eight shows a week, so that keeps me busy and then I have my teaching jobs. I have five kids and, in all humility, I just don't chase down auditions anymore."

That doesn't mean that the Weymouth-born Wilder — who won back-to-back IRNE awards from the Independent Reviewers of New England in 2007 as Best Actor in "Frozen" and in 2008 as Best Supporting Actor for "A Streetcar Named Desire," both at the New Rep in Watertown — doesn't answer the phone when it rings.

Scituate resident Bates Wilder returns to the stage Feb. 20 in the SpeakEasy Stage Company production of "Blackbird."

"I was called in to read for 'Blackbird,' and I only had to look at a few pages from the script, which is filled with interesting rhythms and musicality, to realize that this project was very appealing to me. It just looked delicious and like something I should do. There is an oddly staccato rhythm and some of the words seem choppy on the page, but in the scenes a real picture is painted of these two characters that makes this play a truly riveting piece of writing."

A 2005 play, by Scottish playwright David Harrower, "Blackbird" depicts a meeting between a young woman and a middle-aged man with whom, years earlier, she had had a scandalous sexual relationship. The drama was commissioned by the Edinburgh International Festival and premiered there in 2005. It has since been produced in London's West End — where it beat out "Frost/Nixon," "Rock 'n Roll" and "The Seafarer" for the Olivier Award for Best New Play in 2007 — off-Broadway, and in San Francisco. At SpeakEasy, the play is being directed by Elliot Norton Award winner David R. Gammons and will feature Wilder and his "Streetcar" co-star, Marianna Bassham.

A 1979 graduate of Scituate High School who earned a degree in musical theater at the Boston Conservatory, Wilder has appeared in multiple episodes of the Showtime series "Brotherhood," and in feature films including "Mystic River." This fall he will share the big screen with Leonardo DiCaprio in Martin Scorsese's "Shutter Island."

Although his current project is recommended for mature audiences, Wilder expects that at least his oldest child, Ian, 15, will be in the audience, while Isabel, 12, Hannah, 9, Evangeline, 3, and 18-month-old Benjamin will have to wait to see their father in something else.

"I want my children to experience art and culture on a deeper level than 'Disney on Ice,'" says the former singing waiter at Stoughton's Starline Room. "My oldest son will definitely come to see me in this piece. It's a disturbing story and yet it is also wonderful and poetic. The play is so powerful that it creates a riveting communion between the actors on stage and the actors and the audience. Harrower has written it in a way that facilitates the actors getting the audience to lean in and really listen.

"If we get it right, audiences will be so engaged with this journey that, when it comes to a close, they'll be shaken out of their boots."

Speakeasy Stage Company will present "Blackbird" at the Nancy & Edward Roberts Studio Theatre at the Stanford Calderwood Pavilion at the Boston Center for the Arts, 527 Tremont St. Boston, Feb. 20 through March 21. For tickets and information, call 617-933-8600 or go online at SpeakEasyStage.com.

David Newsam and the Back Bay GuitarTrio will perform on Sunday, Feb. 22, 3 p.m. at Thayer Public Library, 798 Washington St. Braintree. The concert will be held in the library's Logan Auditorium, is free and open to the public. For information call 781-413-1327.

Memphis Rockabilly Band celebrates life of founding member Jeff Spencer

The lively Memphis Rockabilly Band will perform at the Old Ship Coffeehouse off the Square Saturday, Feb. 21, at 8 p.m. in celebration of band member Jeff Spencer's life. Jeff, who grew up in Hingham, died unexpectedly earlier this month.

"Everyone is invited to this musical celebration of his life," said Bill Coover, who formed the band with Jeff in 1978. "His family and some former band members will be present. Musicians are invited to bring their instruments and join in with the band."

The MRB quickly became popular in Boston and throughout New England in the late 1970s. The band traveled to Europe in 1981 and 1982. They went to England again recently after a 23-year absence as a new incarnation of the original MRB, establishing themselves at the forefront of the American roots music scene in Europe.

Their repertoire includes original and cover songs drawn from rockabilly, surf instrumentals, blues, rock and roll, hillbilly, and rhythm and blues. For more information, visit www.memphisrockabillyband.com.

The Coffeehouse off the Square is at the Old Ship Church Parish Hall, 107 Main St., in Hingham Square just up from the Loring Hall Theater and on the MBTA's 220 bus from Quincy Center. Admission for this concert is $10 at the door (sorry, no reservations). The concert begins with an open microphone.

Net proceeds benefit the Unitarian-Universalist Service Committee. For more information or to volunteer and receive free admission call 781-749-1767 or visit www.hinghambroadcastnews.com and http://www.bostoncoffeehouses.org/Old Ship/Old Ship.html.

Budget vacation in Iceland

Heather Eng
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

REYKJAVIK, Iceland — Our bus could barely stay in one lane. Furious wind howled and chilly rain splattered against our windows.

My sister Mallory and I had just landed in Iceland and were en route from Keflavik Airport to Reykjavik, about 40 minutes away. It was 7:30 in the morning, but it could have been the dead of night. There wasn't a hint of daybreak in the sky.

Were we crazy to visit Iceland in the winter off-season?

Escaping the East Coast of the United States for a colder, darker destination seemed a bit ludicrous. But since the collapse this fall of Iceland's financial system, this tiny island of 300,000 people has turned to tourism to pump money into its floundering economy, and that means cheap options for vacationers. Icelandair has been offering flight and hotel deals. And Iceland's krona is considerably down against the dollar.

Despite the alluring price tag, we hesitated. Summer is, not surprisingly, Iceland's high season, when the island thaws and basks in round-the-clock sunlight. But off-season Iceland seemed to have some appeal too. There are fewer tourists. Main roads are plowed, making many of the island's natural wonders accessible 365 days a year. You can only see the aurora borealis during winter. And as the official tourism Web site pointed out, Iceland's average winter temperatures are often warmer than New York's.

After arriving safely at the Hilton Reykjavik Nordica (think efficient rooms with minimalist Scandinavian design), we took naps and awoke as the sun was rising at 10:30 a.m. The rain had moved on and the sky was clear.

We spent the afternoon exploring the narrow streets in Reykjavik's cute, compact downtown. We ducked into short, colorful buildings that house hip boutiques around Bankastraeti (the main shopping street), and browsed through shops like Kokka (www.kokka.is), which carries funky kitchenware, and 66 North (66north.com), Iceland's version of The North Face.

The next day, we rented a car (www.hertz.is) — and a very handy GPS — to drive the Golden Circle, a route that contains three natural landmarks.

Downtown Reykjavik is charming and compact.

Hikers dodge crevices at Solheimajokull Glacier.

IF YOU go...

GETTING THERE: Icelandair (www.icelandair.com) flies nonstop from Boston to Keflavik International Airport. Roundtrip fares from about $575.
STAYING THERE: The Hilton Reykjavik Nordica (www.hilton.com) is located 10 minutes from the downtown city center, rooms from about $120 a night.
FOR MORE INFORMATION: Log onto the Icelandic Tourist Board Web site at www.goiceland.org

We were only 20 minutes outside Reykjavik when the scenery took my breath away. People liken Iceland's landscape to the surface of the moon, and it's easy to see why. Snow covered the craggy land and only small patches of rough grass peeked through. Our little rental Yaris took us past lakes, snow-covered mountains, tiny villages, and packs of furry Icelandic ponies grazing by the road. We drove many miles without seeing another car.

Our first stop was Thingvellir National Park (www.thingvellir.is), site of Iceland's first parliament and where Europe and North America's tectonic plates collide. A brief hailstorm passed over us, but we still hiked for an hour along the snowy trails.

Geysir, a rocky, sulfurous site, is home to the geyser that gives all others their name. The original Geysir erupts only a few times a year, but Strokkur, a nearby, smaller geyser, dependably spews out water and steam every five minutes.

Mallory and I reached Gullfoss, a monstrous, double-tiered waterfall and the Golden Circle's third wonder, as the sun started setting at 3 p.m. Undeterred, we walked the slippery cliffside path to see the thundering gray falls from different angles.

We hadn't had our outdoor Iceland fill yet, so we booked a glacier hike with Icelandic Mountain Guides (www.mountainguides.is) for another day. To get to Solheimajokull Glacier, the tongue of Myrdalsjokull, Iceland's fourth largest glacier, our group of eight drove south for two hours along Iceland's Ring Road (Highway 1), an 870-mile stretch that encircles the island. The scenery had a "Middle Earth" appearance with waterfalls spilling over towering cliffs. As we neared Solheimajokull, Mallory asked if hikers ever fall into crevasses.

"I'm not going to lie," our guide replied. "People have fallen in before - but nothing serious has ever happened."

Still, I felt shaky as I tied on my crampons, grabbed my ice pick and stepped onto the glacier with cold rain coming down. The blue and white ice was slick, so I took wide, heavy steps to ensure that my crampons would grip. To my relief, they did. We made our way up the low incline, and my worries dissipated as I took in the gorgeous setting: Green hills flanked the glacier. Ice had settled into sculpturesque shapes in some places, and volcanic ash created swirling black patterns on the ground. We made it up and down Solheimajokull without incident.

The Blue Lagoon (www.bluelagoon.com), our last stop in Iceland, is hot springs set in an isolated volcanic landscape. The spa is the country's biggest tourist attraction, but that's no reason to skip it. The lagoon doesn't feel loud or crowded; an almost reverent hush envelops the pool while bathers relax in steamy, blue 100-degree geothermal water.

Mallory and I treated ourselves to in-water massages and smeared our faces with revitalizing silica mud. Ice formed on our ponytails and eyelashes, but we were comfortably warm. The cold at home seemed a long way away.

Something's Fishy in Reykjavik

Fishing is one of Iceland's biggest industries, so there's no lack of freshly caught fish on nearly every menu. Here are two great — but completely different — places to get a taste of Reykjavik's seafood cuisine.

Saegreifinn (the Sea Baron): You'll feel like you've stumbled upon an Icelandic fisherman's favorite dining spot upon entering Saegreifinn. There's no menu at this tiny seaside shack. You simply order a bowl of lobster stew, and take a seat on a wooden barrel at one of three communal tables. Within a few minutes, you receive piping hot bisque in a Styrofoam bowl, along with a basket of fresh bread. The orange broth is lightly creamy, and the chunky lobster pieces perfectly tender. Fish and whale skewers are also available. (Geirsgata 8, 354-553-1500)

Sjavarkjallarinn (Seafood Cellar): This hip, award-winning restaurant gets its name from its subterranean location in downtown Reykjavik. Outfitted with an icy blue and earthy brown color scheme, the Cellar serves up playful Asian-style twists on local catches. The menu, which changes frequently, offers such dishes as "orange" monkfish with miso and vanilla, "pink panther" Arctic char with truffle and beetroot and lobster tail cooked so flawlessly that it literally melts in your mouth. (Adalstraeti 2, 354-511-1212, www.sjavarkjallarinn.is)

— CITIZEN OF THE YEAR —

An artist with heart

Chittick helps needy women at Rosie's Place

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset may be JoAnne Chittick's adopted hometown – but it would be hard to imagine our small seaside town without her beautiful watercolors of its streetscapes and landscapes.

In fact, when the name "Chittick" is mentioned in Cohasset what quickly comes to mind are JoAnne's paintings or her husband, Woody Chittick's yeoman, long-term service on the Zoning Board of Appeals.

But what many residents may not know is for the past three decades, JoAnne has unfailingly been helping to provide meals for needy women and their families at Rosie's Place in Boston.

JoAnne's community service also includes a term on the School Committee, 10 years on the School Building Committee and involvement with the PSO. Over the years she has also participated in a range of local organizations including the Social Service League, Friends of the Paul Pratt Library and South Shore Art Center.

Pain evident in courtroom

Barrow pleads guilty to MV homicide

By Nancy White

It was a night that forever altered the course of two families' lives.

On Feb. 2, 2008, a truck careened off Route 3A in Cohasset killing a Scituate teenager and leaving another Scituate teen wheelchair-bound.

One family now lives with the pain of having lost a son. Another family lives with the memory of a terrible accident.

On Wednesday morning, the driver of the car, Christopher Barrow, 19, pleaded guilty to charges of motor vehicle homicide. Timothy Mahoney, 16, a sophomore at Scituate High, died in the accident.

Over a year after the accident, the emotion in the Quincy District Court courtroom was palatable, honest and raw. Tim Mahoney's parents gave statements on how the loss of their son has caused immeasurable sadness and spoke of the bright future that was taken away. Friends and families of both Barrow and Mahoney filled the small courtroom to capacity.

A stoic Barrow answered "yes, sir" when asked if he would plead guilty to the charge of motor vehicle homicide by negligent operation. Barrow was sentenced to five years probation and loses his license for 15 years. Barrow will also complete 125 hours of community service where he will speak to other young people about the tragic effects of underage drinking and driving.

Judge Mark Coven dismissed the two counts of being under 21 in possession of liquor and found Barrow not responsible on a speeding complaint.

Noise, flicker, photo simulations discussed

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Armed with a new location for one of the turbines and a corresponding set of revised impact studies, the wind turbine public hearing was packed with information. A full house of interested and concerned residents once again came out to stay informed of the project.

The Planning Board made significant headway as the applicant Jim Sweeney of CCI-Energy plowed through a PowerPoint presentation and brought forth a number of experts to present the technical information from the project. For roughly two and half hours, the Planning Board and audience heard about the turbine's fire suppression system and noise and shadow flicker impacts studies recently completed.

"We think we have the final locations and associated flicker and sound studies...this is the best we can get and I believe you'll be satisfied with the results," said Sweeney to kick off his presentation.

From the outset, Planning Board Chairman Al Moore set the tone for a quieter evening than past public hearings.

"I think you'll all agree we have been more than open (in past meetings)," said Moore. "Tonight we are more or less going to listen to the applicant...I'm not going to allow a lot of questions throughout the presentation."

Moore requested those interested in Fiscal 2010 figures shown

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"The bottom line is this budget is balanced based on our projections."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

On Monday night, Town Manager Bill Griffin laid it all out on the table and gave the town its first glimpse at what the fiscal 2010 budget is going to look like.

A recommended figure of $32,034,308 for the general operating budget was brought forth, which amounts to a 1.29 percent increase, or $408,835, over fiscal 2009.

Early in the budget process, department heads prepared budgets with a 5 percent reduction compared to the current fiscal year. Griffin used those numbers to create a balanced budget for fiscal 2010.

"Some were very painful, others are things departments said they can live with if they have to," Griffin said Monday night. "The bottom line is this budget is balanced based on our (revenue) projections."

The town is facing a decrease in projected revenues from two primary sources — state aid and local receipts. Based on Governor Deval Patrick's state budget proposal, Cohasset will experience a reduction in state aid of $183,000, or a 7.44 percent decline. This could be a conservative number, Griffin said. If the additional one percent increase in the state's meals and hotel tax is approved by the legislature, the town could receive an additional $70,000 in state aid.

Local receipts are projected to decrease by $167,826 in fiscal 2010, or 4.84 percent. Revenues relating to trash fees, licenses, permits and moorings are projected to increase, however there is an even larger reduction in motor vehicle excise taxes and investment earnings.

In spite of the economic challenges, Griffin is recommending the town continue to reduce its reliance on free cash to support the operating budget. Free cash is strictly a Massachusetts term used to help describe a certain type of surplus funds: funds remaining from the operations of the previous fiscal year.

For Cohasset, free cash amounts are the lowest they have been in over 10 years and Griffin expects most of the funds will be consumed by the snow and ice deficit.

"It hurts in the short term, but it is good in the long term," said Griffin.

In developing the budget, Griffin considered a list of priorities and realities. These included ensuring the non-operating budgets such as pension assessment and health insurance budget had to be satisfied, wage increases in collective bargaining agreements for fiscal 2010 had to be budgeted and protecting further cuts to the already stretched DPW and facility maintenance staff. Griffin also noted the School Department budget included agreed upon salary increases and no new staff positions.

A piece of good news Griffin received on Monday morning was that next year's preliminary assessment for the South Shore Vo-Tech would be going down by about $56,000 from last year's amount.

Griffin already had a couple of items in mind to re-allocate that money, including keeping the library open on Sunday afternoons.

Budget talks and adjustments will take place as Griffin presents his budget message to the Advisory Committee and receives feedback from the public. The Fiscal 2010 budget will have to be approved by Town Meeting on Saturday, March 28.

The Board of Selectmen commended Griffin on the balanced budget.

"With families in the community cutting back, (the town) needs to be at least as vigilant as they are being," said Selectman Paul Carlson.

Selectman Karen Quigley proposed the board discuss the possibility of foregoing the selectmen's stipend.

The Chairman of the Board of Selectmen receives an annual stipend of $1500, with the other four selectmen receiving $1,000 a piece. The line item is $5,500.

"It makes a statement to the town," said Carlson. The Board of Selectmen will discuss the issue at their meeting this coming Monday, March, 2.

How will the budget affect town services?

Next year's limited increase in funding will put a strain on the town's services and nearly all town departments had to make sacrifices.

Here are some of the key recommendations for the fiscal 2010:

- All department head wages be frozen.
- All non-union wages be frozen.
- Elimination of one police patrolman position through attrition, a part-time civilian dispatcher, seasonal police officers, and a reduction in hours of the animal control officer. The Police Department overtime budget was increased by $15,000 to help offset the impact of the loss of one patrolman position on manning requirements.
- Elimination of one firefighter position through attrition and a reduction in the Fire Department overtime account based on current expenditure trends.
- Reduction of approximately 15 hours of staffing in town hall among several positions, though no layoffs proposed.
- Elimination of Sunday hours at the library, along with a reduction in hours for pages and small reduction in funding for books.
- While there are several non-staff reductions proposed in the Department of Public Works and Building Maintenance departments, current staffing levels will be maintained. Virtually all employees in these departments will be subject to a wage freeze in fiscal 2010.
- The snow and ice budget was increased by approximately $25,000 to bring that line items closer to a level needed even during a mild winter.
- A restructuring of part-time staffing in the Recreation Department to save money and increase effectiveness.
- Throughout the budget, there are numerous reductions recommended in contracted services, meetings and education.

Police Beat

Reverse 911 used after accident

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset officers, with the assistance from the Scituate and Hingham K-9 units, conducted a 2-1/2 hour search for the driver.

Hingham police are summonsing a 40-year-old N. Weymouth man to court on a host of charges following a police pursuit last week. Hingham police believe that William P. McCobb of 75 Rinaldo Road, N. Weymouth, who is the registered owner of the vehicle, fled the scene following an accident on Jerusalem Road in Cohasset.

Hingham Officer Daniel Leary was on Summer Street in Hingham at 7:35 p.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 18) when he saw a red Jeep Cherokee traveling at a high rate of speed toward the Rotary.

He put on the cruiser's blue lights, got behind the Jeep and followed it along Justice Cushing Highway. The Jeep put its directional on as if to pull over, but then sped up and pulled away. It took a right onto Kilby Street and a few minutes later turned right onto Rockland Street and headed toward Cohasset and Hull. Officer Leary pursued the vehicle that was moving onto the wrong side of the road to pass cars, police said.

The officer in charge at Hingham headquarters called off the pursuit after Leary reported his cruiser was going 65 mph and the Jeep was pulling away. Hingham notified Hull and Cohasset police to be on the lookout.

A short time later Cohasset reported the Jeep had crashed on Jerusalem Road.

Cohasset Lt. William Quigley said the accident occurred around 8 p.m. He said Cohasset Police sent out a reverse 911 call to residents in the area advising them of police activity in the neighborhood. Cohasset officers, with the assistance from the Scituate and Hingham K-9 units, conducted a 2-1/2 hour search for the driver.

Hull Police also assisted in closing Jerusalem Road from Wadleigh Park to West Corner for safety reasons because the roads were snow-covered and slippery and there were police officers and cruisers along that section of Jerusalem Road.

Witnesses described the operator, who fled the scene, as wearing a hooded sweatshirt over a mechanic's jacket. Police were not able to locate him.

Hingham police are summonsing McCobb on charges of failure to stop for a police officer, operating to endanger, operating a motor vehicle with revoked registration (due to nonpayment of insurance), marked lanes violation and speeding. Hingham police said McCobb fits the description witnesses provided of the operator.

Cohasset Police may seek further charges.

Underage drinking

A 17-year-old Cohasset girl is under arrest for being a minor in possession of alcohol and a 20-year-old Hull man was taken into protective custody because he was intoxicated following a report of a house party on Rustic Drive over school vacation. The girl, who was arrested, lived at the house but was supposed to be staying with friends, police said.

Police received a call at 12:33 a.m. on Tuesday (Feb. 17) about a group of kids "yelling and screaming." At one point, the caller said the kids threw something at the residence and said they may have entered a house that was supposed to be unoccupied.

Other partygoers fled the scene but police were able to identify four of them. About a dozen were at the party. Detectives are looking into where the alcohol may have come from. Through the memorandum of understanding with police and the school department, the names of those identified were provided to Cohasset High School. No one was 21, police said.

Liquor stolen

Police are investigating the theft of at least 20 bottles of liquor and an undetermined amount of wine from the bar at the Red Lion Inn last Monday (Feb. 16). The owner of the inn reported the theft. There were no signs of forced entry, police said.

B& E car

A delivery worker at Victoria's in Tedeschi Plaza had his wallet, cell phone and credit cards stolen from his car during the afternoon of Monday (Feb. 16). The 27-year-old Weymouth man had left his 2004 Chevrolet Impala unlocked behind the building. The theft occurred when he went in to pick up an order. Detectives processed the car for evidence.

Accidents

- At 8:03 p.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 18) the operator of 2002 Ford Taurus lost control on a curve near the 200 block of Beechwood Street and slid into a utility pole, breaking it in half. The driver, a 24-year-old Scituate man, had minor injuries but was not transported to the hospital. The car had to be towed and road was shut down between King Street and the ball field for eight hours while workers cleared wires from the road and installed a new pole.
- At 12:33 p.m. on Thursday (Feb. 19), a 2003 Suzuki Aerio driven by a 26-year-old Hull woman hit the high curbing on the island at the railroad tracks on lower King Street resulting in heavy tire and undercarriage damage to the car.

The accident occurred after trains had stopped for the night but the MBTA was notified in case they were moving any train equipment, police said.

- A 64-year-old Cohasset woman, whose Chrysler had faulty brakes, drove into her garage door, Saturday (Feb. 21), at about 10:38 a.m., Police said there was minor damage to the garage. The building inspector checked the garage out and said there was no immediate safety hazard. The car had just been worked on, police said.

A responsible finding on a complaint of failing to wear a seatbelt was placed on file.

The guilty plea was reached after two separate conferences. The first was between Barrow, his family and attorney Robert Jubinville; the second was between the District Attorney and the Mahoney family. If a plea had not been reached Wednesday, the case would have gone to a jury trial.

The District Attorney gave a brief overview of the case they would have presented and the details of the accident, which included witnesses who observed Barrow drinking earlier in the evening. Two cars left a home in Scituate to go to Barrow's father's girlfriend's home in Cohasset. Tim Mahoney got into the truck with Barrow. The two cars took separate routes. Along Route 3A near Pond Street Barrow's truck crossed into the other lane of travel and off the road. The truck rolled over. When paramedics arrived to the scene Mahoney was pronounced dead and medics extricated Barrow from the pickup. He had serious injuries.

Chris Barrow, 19, sits next to his attorney Robert Jubinville, and listens as the Mahoneys read a statement after he pled guilty to motor vehicle homicide by negligent operation. Barrow was sentenced to five years probation and loses his license for 15 years. Barrow will also complete 125 hours of community service where he will speak to other young people about the tragic effects of underage drinking and driving.

Mahoneys speak out

The Mahoney Family presented the Judge with several photos of Tim and placed them on his bench as they spoke. It was a stalwart Frank Mahoney who spoke first, but his voice quaked as he began to address the courtroom and Barrow.

"Because of your actions and the choices you made, my 16-year-old son is dead," Mahoney began. He faltered as he recalled the last conversation he had with his son: Tim had just received his report card and excitedly told his dad he would be able to continue to play varsity hockey.

"Everyday is a struggle to get out of bed," said Mahoney. "I don't think you are a bad person, but this is all a result of the terrible choices you made and I'd like you to think about that."

Lori Mahoney went into more detail of Tim as he was in life. He was extremely athletic young man who earned a spot on the varsity teams of both hockey and lacrosse. She described him as a "born fighter" who survived two cardiac surgeries as a toddler. He aspired to go to college and play lacrosse; in fact, she said universities were already courting the sophomore. His life's ambition was to own a hotel.

"We'll never know what Tim could have accomplished," she said.

Lori Mahoney described how she received the dreaded knock on the door on Feb. 2, 2008 and the disbelief she had and still has everyday that Tim is gone.

"Every parents' worst nightmare is now my reality," Lori Mahoney said. As she found out more details of the night – how he was supposed to ride in the other car, how his friends tried to talk him out of going with Barrow, how he got into the truck with Barrow so he wouldn't have to ride alone.

"His last act was out of kindness," she explained. "Tim trusted he would be safe…he didn't' know he was taking a death ride."

Lori Mahoney placed blame on Barrow for driving under the influence of alcohol and as a result of that decision he caused "lifelong pain for my family."

Lori did not falter or pause as she read her written statement to the courtroom until she admitted she was envious of Chris Barrow because he was the last person to see her son alive, "I'd give anything for those minutes."

She expressed her hope that Barrow could make something positive out of the terrible situation by sharing his story with others and prevent others from making the same tragic mistakes.

As the Mahoneys spoke quiet sobbing could be heard from audience members who shared in the parents' grief.

Judge Coven extended his sympathy to the Mahoney family for what they have endured and will continue to endure. However, he said he was not going to lecture anyone.

"You have to make amends with yourself and live with it," Coven told Barrow. He said Barrow had to be responsible and accountable for his actions and how they impacted himself, the Mahoney family and the community at large.

He hoped the 125 hours of community service where he would address other young people and talk about the consequences of drinking and driving would be a positive one.

"Maybe it will be beneficial to someone," said Coven.

Barrow's attorney Robert Jubinville did not contest the sentence, but offered a bit of insight into his client.

"(Barrow) has told me on more than one occasion, he wished he died in the crash. Life doesn't give him that choice and he has to live with that everyday."

The Judge allowed the Mahoney family to exit the courtroom first, the Barrow family followed shortly afterward, but both families mingled for a short time in the waiting room outside.

Selectman floats finance committee

During the Selectmen comment period, Selectman Karen Quigley suggested the board consider the formation of an "uber-finance advisory committee" in light of the challenging fiscal times.

"The committee would look at the budget and look at how the town is structured," said Quigley, analyzing to squeeze out more efficiency and develop better ways of doing business townwide.

"It's an opportunity to make lemonade out of lemons…(these items) might not be looked at in better financial times," said Quigley.

Quigley proposed the committee include two members of the Board of Selectmen, two members of the Advisory Committee, two members of the School Committee, two members of the Capital Budget Committee and various town employees involved in budget development (Town Manager, Finance Director, Superintendent of Schools etc.)

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer was the only one to comment at the meeting. He expressed concern in forming yet another advisory committee in the town.

"You know I'm always wary of committees," said Dormitzer, adding a professional audit of the town might be a better alternative.

Board of Selectmen chairman Ted Carr suggested the item be placed on a future agenda for discussion.

Turf field update

George McGoldrick of the Cohasset Sports Partnership came before the Board of Selectmen to update them on the "Got Turf" capital campaign and make a request.

"The fundraising has been difficult, but good," said McGoldrick. To date the Partnership, the private non-profit organization raising the $550,000 in funding for the field construction, has raised over $300,000.

McGoldrick said in spite of the financial times, residents are getting behind the project because they feel the whole town will benefit from it.

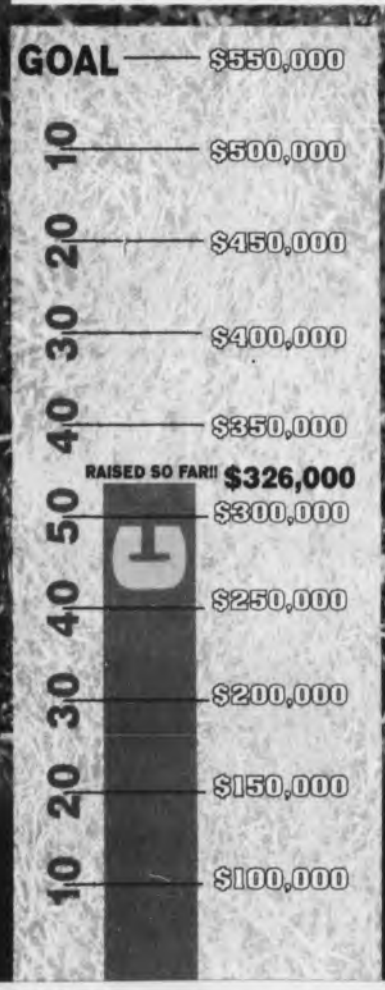
"It's a good, positive thing happening at this economic time," saidMcGoldrick.

The town project was supported with a majority vote of Town Meeting in November. The deal was if the Cohasset Sports Partnership could raise over half the cost of the new synthetic turf field, the town would bond the remaining cost of about $500,000.

McGoldrick said it is his aim to complete the fundraising by the late spring and construct the field over the summer months. To achieve this aggressive timeline, McGoldrick requested the town allow the Partnership to donate engineering services for the field construction. If the preliminary engineering work is done now, it will allow the town to construct this summer. However, if the private fundraising does not reach its goal, McGoldrick said the plans would have a two to three year shelf life.

The cost of the engineering services is about $50,000 and was included in the original cost estimates.

The Selectmen voted to approve the donation of services.



'Healing Field' planned for Memorial Day

The Sons of the American Legion is again planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2009 observances. The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone.

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, www.healingfield.org /cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

asking a question to make a note of it and audience members would be recognized later in the meeting.

"We're going to try to get through some of this tonight," said Moore.

And got through it they did. Near the close of the meeting, Moore said it was possible the public hearing portion of the site plan review/special permit process could conclude at the next meeting. The public hearing was continued to Monday, March 30.

Sweeney started out with a general overview of the project and how it fits into a more global sustainability movement. The PowerPoint took a side trail as Sweeney discussed details of a carbon neutral development project he is involved in Rhode Island. He stressed the importance of lowering the nation's dependence on foreign oil and how Cohasset could become recognized a leader in a environmental consciousness with the turbine project.

But, what the Planning Board and the audience were most interested in was the technical data on how the turbines will impact surrounding residences and businesses.

Noise

According to the applicant's sound engineer, Howard Quin of Tech Environmental, the permitted but yet to be built Avalon apartment complex would be the residences most affected by the turbines' noise. The Avalon property where 200 apartment units are slated is located adjacent to the wind turbine property.

One of the stipulations of the wind energy bylaw, and state regulations, is any new source of noise will not increase ambient noise levels by 10 decibels or more. In addition, the source cannot produce a pure tone, like fire engine sirens or the whistling of a steam from a vent.

Currently, the Avalon property experiences an average of 35 decibels ambient noise level. With the addition of the turbines, the background noise will increase to 40 decibels on the ground floor and 42 decibels on the third floor.

Across Route 3A at the Rose Hill development the ambient levels are less than 35 decibels. With the turbines, the sound consultant expects the background noise to increase to 37 decibels.

Quin further said the numbers he drew up were "worst case scenario" with the locations being downwind from the turbines and the wind blowing at eight meters per second when the turbine is optimal.

"Everything else should be quieter," said Quin.

Moore asked how noticeable the difference in ambient noise levels would be.

Quin said those living at Avalon would definitely hear the turbines, but may or may not find it annoying. Issues typically arise when noise levels get into the 45-decibel range, said Quin.

The town's engineering consulting engineer, John Modzelewski, took some issue with how the ambient noise levels were gathered. Sweeney, the applicant, took the sound levels himself early one morning. Modzelewski suggested a professional engineer, rather than the proponent who is looking for project approval, get the ambient sound levels and sign off on them.

Shadow flicker

With the turbine closest to Route 3A moved approximately 325 feet southwest (away from Route 3A), the applicant had created a revised study of the shadow flicker impacts. Shadow flicker is a strobing effect produced when the sun passes behind the blades of the turbine — and it could potentially affect the residents and business within 1000-meters of the turbines during certain times of the year.

Complicating the process of evaluating the shadow flicker impacts is there is no state or local standard. There is a general industry standard that there should not be more than 30 hours per year, but even that is debatable.

According to the applicant's consulting group, Atlantic Renewable Energy Services, the Avalon apartment complex will experience between six and 15 hours of flicker per year. Rose Hill (Sanctuary Pond Road) will have two to eight hours per year and Sunrise Assisted living will have between 11 hours per year.

"WindPro (the computer program used to generate the shadow flicker model) doesn't consider any obstruction. You will only experience shadow flicker if you can visually see the turbine with the sun setting behind it…we feel these numbers are very conservative in terms of what will actually be experienced," said John Tabaczynski of Atlantic Renewable Energy Services.

The worst-case scenario results (if it were to be sunny and windy everyday) were, not surprisingly, significantly higher. A portion of the Avalon property would be impacted 65 hours per year, Sunrise Assisted Living 45 hours per year, and lot 24 Sanctuary Pond Road 35 hours per year.

The town's consulting engineer John Modzelewski questioned how the applicant determined the percentage of cloudy to sunny days. A website that used data from the National Weather Service was utilized, but Modelewski said he would have preferred the data to come from NOAA or the National Weather Service directly.

Modzelewski also requested the Planning Board be provided with the absolute worst-case scenario so they could better understand the sensitivity of the model.

Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey asked it if was possible to equip the turbine with technology to shut down temporarily to alleviate the shadow flicker concerns.

Sweeney said it was possible, but did not make any commitments.

Photo simulations

The applicant also presented an updated set of photo simulations for the wind turbines from six sites: the new TOD development on Route 3A, Avalon property, Sunrise Assisted Living, Lot 24 Sanctuary Pond, Rose Hill development entrance and Sandy Beach.

Modzelewski had some questions on the technology and methodology and was still working to verify the photos.

"They certainly look like they are really there," said Moore.

Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey asked Modzelewski if he was uncomfortable safety-wise with the new siting of the turbine closest to Route 3A. The new site places the Graham Waste buildings very close to the turbines, "is it fundamentally safe?"

Modzelewski's primary concern with this siting was ice throw, explaining an area 1.5 times the height of the turbine was at risk of ice throw.

"I'm uncomfortable with it, but it is more a structural engineering issue. The solution may be to place conditions on it to mitigate the risk," said Modzelewski. Mitigation could include sensors to determine when ice is on the blades. If ice can form, the turbines can be shut down temporarily to lessen the chance for ice throw.

"I want to know if it is real safety concern or is it statistically moot?" said Ivimey.

Financial benefit

The Planning Board was clear on their desire to see a rough proposal of what kind of agreement CCI-Energy would be willing to offer the town for energy purchase.

Although Moore pointed out that the information was not required, he said it would be nice since the applicant has mentioned it previously to bring some hard numbers to the table so the board and residents can get a better understanding of any financial benefit in store for the town.

"A statement of 'we'd like to be able to send this energy to the town' would be nice to have. I think a lot of people would like to get a handle on the numbers…if the impact will be $100,000 or $500,000," said Moore.

Sweeney said he would provide the rough numbers of how the town could benefit if it agreed to purchase energy from the turbines.

Updated Photosimulation Report (view from Route 3A) . Cohasset Heights Wind Project. Submitted February 19, 2009 and on file at the Planning Board as part of the public record.

Turbine project in brief

The application is a landmark project as it is the first for the town and the first application under the Wind Energy Conversion Facility bylaw passed at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting.

The project application, put forth by a private developer, CCI-Energy, is proposing the installation of two AAER 1.65-megawatt sized wind turbines sited off Route 3A on the hill behind Graham Waste Services and Hingham Lumber. The project is being called the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project.

Jim Sweeney, president of CCI-Energy, is the primary name on the applications.

The turbines will be 100-meters (328-feet) tall from the ground to the hub, or nacelle, where the blades originate. The three blades will extend 41-meters off of that hub making the tip of the structure 462-feet (141-meters) above ground.

Cohasset's BC High, Thayer students top the honors list!

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

WARMING UP

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone doing as we get ready to kiss February good-bye and say hello to the long month of March? I don't know why I am so against the month but it always seems to take so long to get through the month. The good news though is that we have two days that bring us a bit closer to the warmer days of Springtime. Daylight Savings is on March 8 when we can turn our clocks ahead by one hour and then the next nice day to think about is the actual first day of Spring on March 20. What are the chances for us to get to that day with no more cold weather or snow? I know, keep on dreaming Jen. Well, it is a good thought to have and I for one, cannot wait to have it warm up a bit.

Christine Rutledge has been named Villanova University College of Engineering Dean's List for the 2008 Fall Semester. Christine is a senior majoring in Chemical Engineering. Nice Work Christine.

DEAN'S LIST

Jacqueline Chase of Cohasset was recently named to the dean's list in the University of Notre Dame's College of Science for outstanding scholarship during the Fall 2008 semester. Congratulations Jacqueline!

BC HIGH HONORS

The following students from Cohasset earned honors at Boston College High School for the second quarter.

For high honors, a student must have at least a 3.80 quality point average and all grades of C+ or higher.

HONORS: Kyle Thomas DeSisto, Class of 2009; Patrick Evans Hurley, Class of 2009; Paul Francis Guinee, Class of 2010; David M. Hernon, Class of 2010; Anthony J Testa, Class of 2011; Michael Francis Troy, Class of 2011; Matthew Won-Yung Swanborg, Class of 2012; and Matthew T. Troy, Class of 2012.

Students who achieve honors must receive a quality point average of at least 3.2 and all grades of C- or higher.

EXETER ACADEMY

The following Cohasset student was named to the fall honor student at Phillips Exeter Academy:

Sam Game, grade 11, high honors, son of David A. Game and Sally L. Sisson.

Keep up the good work, Sam!

THAYER HONORS

The following Upper School students from Cohasset were named to the first trimester honor roll at Thayer Academy.

Christian W. Allard, freshman, honors, Term 1, honors, Semester 1; Lindsey E. Allard, junior, honors, Term 1, honors, Semester 1; Anna E. Blanken, senior, high honors, Term 1, and high honors, Semester 1; Allison W. BOURNEDALE

Get your grills ready! Spring is right around the corner and to herald in the season for your first cookout, the 5th grade announces that its annual Camp Bournedale Kinnealey Meats Fundraiser through March 18th with product being delivered just in time for a spring cookout on April 4th. If you're a fan of the Kinnealey Meats great products and are interested in purchasing some but don't know a 5th grader, we can certainly accommodate you and your purchase will go directly to support the total amount needed to be raised to send the 5th grade class to Camp Bournedale in Plymouth in September of their 6th-grade year. So please support your 5th grade family or friends or contact Jody Golden at 383-2685 s.shaungolden@comcast.net or Lisa Pratt at 383-1387 lisa.pratt@comcast.net if you don't know a 5th grader and would like to place an order and support this wonderful program for our Deer Hill 5th grade students!

SPRING FLING

Here is another date to save as Springtime gets closer and closer and the calendars get booked. The Second Congregational Church's Spring Fling Time and Talent Auction, often described as "the most fun you can have in a church" is an evening of great food, terrific auction items, and fabulous company. The evening begins at 6:30 with gourmet appetizers, and the silent and live auctions begin promptly at 7:00 and continue along with periodic raffles until 9:30. Auction items include sports and theater tickets; vacation homes; private baseball, sailing, and riding lessons; photography and artwork; and gift baskets. The event is taking place on Saturday, March 21 from 6:30 pm-9:30 pm and fun will be had by all who attend. No admission fee – but to reserve a table (up to 10 people) and/or tickets, please RSVP to the church office at scc@2ndcc.org or 383-0345.

OFF THE WALL

As a follow-up to South Shore Art Center's winter fundraiser Off the Wall, the Art Center will host an open house on Sunday, March 1st from 12-4 p.m.. The public is invited to view artwork by South Shore artists and enjoy a demonstration by Hingham painter Vcevy Strekalovsky. During the Open House, all art and gift counter purchases will be discounted 15 percent. The Off the Wall fundraiser is being held in the Art Center galleries on Saturday evening, Feb. 28th. The party kicks-off at 7:30 on Saturday with DJ entertainment by Boston's best Rich Dimare. At 8 p.m. Richard will draw names of those purchasing Collector tickets and they will have less than a minute to select their treasure! The evening also will feature hors d'oeuvres, music and art sales– all to benefit the education and exhibition programs of South Shore Art Center. Collector tickets are $195; guest tickets are also available for $55. A limited number of Off the Wall tickets are still available and can be reserved by calling the Art Center at 781-383-2787 or visiting www.ssac.org.

SIGNUP MEETING

Spring is almost here! Come train and row with us! All interested 9th through 12th grade students from the South Shore region are eligible to participate. Religious traditions can be fun!

Busy schedules, work obligations, family commitments can make for a very hectic week! Families often feel torn between Sunday morning religious education classes and the multitude of other activities that interest youth and adults alike. First Parish UU in Cohasset's Religious Education Committee acknowledges these difficulties and will offer a fun filled family alternative.

Friday, March 13th will be a lucky day as the Religious Education (RE) program will hold its monthly "TGIF Intergenerational RE program" to begin at 6 pm in Trueblood Hall located in the Parish House at 23 North Main St. A simple pasta dinner will be followed along with intergenerational prayer and music. Dinner will be followed by a World Religions Scavenger Hunt where youngsters and their adult companions will need to use their combined knowledge of various religious traditions to solve puzzles and clues hidden throughout the Parish House.

Whether you are single or partnered, whether you have children or not – all are welcome to bring your busy week to a close and start off your weekend in an engaging way with a welcoming, spiritual community. Donations will be welcome in order to cover associated expenses. For more information, contact Jim FitzGerald, Interim Director of Religious Education at (781) 383-1100 or JFitzGerald@firstparishcohasset.org.

CPT Stephen Bowen talks to Deer Hill students Tuesday morning during his first visit back to Cohasset Schools after serving as a crew member of the STS-126 Endeavour mission.

NASA Astronaut Stephen Bowen presents his old CHS hockey jersey to Assistant Principal Mike Gill at Cohasset Middle-High School on Tuesday. Bowen brought the jersey with him on his Endeavour mission.

Reach for the stars

Cohasset astronaut comes to town

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Work hard, keep your options open and you just might be given a chance to go to Mars.

That was the message from Steve Bowen, Cohasset native and astronaut, given to a group of captivated students at Deer Hill School Tuesday morning.

Dressed in his navy blue astronaut jumpsuit, Bowen, talked easily with the students about his out of this world experience as a crew member of the STS-126 Endeavour mission.

When Bowen was a student at Deer Hill School, he wasn't considered the best reader. He decided to change that, he worked hard and eventually ascended to the highest reading group.

"I thought there's a reason they are teaching these things, maybe if I figure out why I might just be interested," said Bowen. That kind of work ethic served him well as he went on to graduate from Cohasset High, join the Navy, and eventually be accepted as a NASA astronaut.

"I worked hard and kept my options open," said Bowen. He said the keys to becoming an astronaut were to study hard, do well, focus on math and science, find a career where you can be happy and successful, then apply to NASA.

"There is a broad assortment of what an astronaut is, we can't pin down a definition of an astronaut," said Bowen. In his office, astronauts come from varied backgrounds and expertise – veterinarians, medical doctors, astronomers, engineers, pilots and Navy Seals.

Bowen, who is also a highly decorated nuclear powered submarine Captain in the U.S. Navy, went on three spacewalks as he and his crew worked to repair the solar arrays on the International Space Station.

"It is pretty remarkable that in 50 years we have gone from not being able to launch anything to having people live in space."
— Steve Bowen, astronaut

Aided by a set of slides and video of his time in space from the launch to the spacewalks, Bowen described how it felt to launch from space, to look out the window and see earth down below and have a carpet of stars enveloping them.

"There's no way to do the real thing justice," said Bowen, but the photos were pretty amazing.

When the Endeavour docked with the Space Station, the crew went right to work.

"We only have a couple of weeks in space, so they keep us very busy," said Bowen. On three space walks, he and other members of the crew worked to repair the solar arrays that power the space station. The critical repairs enabled the station's solar arrays to property rotate in order to track the sun and generate enough power to sustain a six-member crew beginning this spring.

Despite the high-tech reputation NASA has, Bowen said he primarily used a regular old grease gun to make the repairs, "sometimes it is not really a complicated thing, the simple thing sometimes works better."

Bowen talked about being weightless and how it only took a few hours to get used to the feeling. He talked about bringing the space station a new galley, a new toilet and a new water recycling system. He enjoyed Thanksgiving dinner aboard the space station and spent his only two-hour block of free time looking out the window as the space station made its way completely around the Earth.

"I saw the sun rise, the sun set and rise again; it was pretty amazing," said Bowen.

On his third space walk, Bowen flew over New England and Cohasset covered in darkness. Later he found out as he was looking down at Earth, his sister was looking up at him.

"It was pretty neat…we couldn't see each other very well, it's kinda far," he joked.

Bowen told the students about NASA's plans to go back — and inhabit — the moon by 2020. And he said NASA plans to send astronauts to Mars — just about the time the Deer Hill students would be becoming astronauts.

"The money we spend on space exploration changes the way we live life here on Earth," said Bowen. "Beyond Mars, who knows where we'll go."

Bowen remarked how far the space exploration has come in 50 years.

"It is pretty remarkable that in 50 years we have gone from not being able to launch anything to having people live in space," said Bowen. The International Space Station has been continuously inhabited since October 2000 — longer than some of the Deer Hill third graders have been alive.

When given the chance to ask questions, the students peppered the hometown hero on everything from whether he's seen aliens (he hasn't, unless a meteorite from Mars with a fossil of a microbe counts) to how they took photos from space (thousand of pictures are taken from built-in space shuttles cameras and handhelds) to if he got sick at take off (he didn't, but did the first two days on the Space Station) to what it was like to live in space (after a day or two you get used to floating around).

After speaking at Deer Hill, Bowen returned to his alma mater, Cohasset High, to speak to the students there.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

'Generous, loving spirit'

The Cohasset Mariner is pleased to announce that JoAnne Chittick is the Citizen of the Year.

The town can count itself lucky that JoAnne — who comes from Cleveland Heights, Ohio, went to Smith College and was working Boston in the late 60s and early 70s — decided to move to Cohasset. She and her husband, Woody, whose boss lived in town, saw the town and fell in love with it. At the time, they abandoned their goal of living near public transportation to buy their home at 98 S. Main St.

Over the past 38 years, JoAnne's quiet dedication to Cohasset, coupled with her artistic talent, has earned her many friends and admirers. Her involvement with helping to prepare, deliver and serve a monthly meal at Rosie's Place over the past 30 years (20 as coordinator) has without a doubt help spread goodwill for her adopted hometown beyond Cohasset's borders.

Lucia Woods of 231 Jerusalem Road put it best in her nomination.

"For one person to have chaired this effort for so long is indicative of JoAnne's generous, loving spirit and concern for others less fortunate."

JoAnne was surprised when told about the award and gracious in accepting the honor. She describes her efforts over the years as "small efforts."

"But if I can help in this way, at least it's something," she says.

While nominations were open, dozens of individuals took the time to propose a citizen or group for the annual award, detailing the nominee's contributions to help make this town we all love a better place.

The selection committee consisting of Sarah Murphy, David Farrag, Mimi White, Agnes McCann, Wayne Sawchuk and Martha Hurtig joined editor Mary Ford at the Cohasset Mariner in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday afternoon to review all the heartfelt letters of nomination. The decision to select JoAnne was unanimous but not reached without considerable discussion about all the very deserving candidates

Taffy Nothnagle, 36 Atlantic Ave., said in her nomination that JoAnne's creative side as an artist reflects her deep love for Cohasset.

'Her landscape paintings and house portraits are cherished by many Cohasset residents and are truly a gift to our town," she wrote.

Joan Graham, 56 Wheelwright Farm, simply described JoAnne as "an asset to the Cohasset community."

With this award, the Cohasset Mariner offers recognition for making a difference. In our society too many role models go unrecognized. Too often people today look to the sports, rock or movie stars with envy, when the real hero is the local police officer, firefighter, parent, teacher, church leader or government official.

The annual Citizen of the Year Award is our way of taking our hats off to those among us who go that extra mile without asking for anything in return but the intrinsic reward of helping to make Cohasset a better place.

Will you stop humming "The answer is blowing in the wind"!

Wind bylaw needs to be amended

COMMENTARY

HEATHER PERACCHI

These proposed turbines are not just tugging, but are yanking, ripping, and clawing at Cohasset's landscape.

I care about our environment. Each week the storage room in my basement becomes almost impassable with empty boxes of cereal, pickle and peanut butter jars, and plastic milk jugs. I vote for politicians who take a stance on cleaning up and protecting our environment. I happily schlep my green recyclable bags to the grocery store each week in an effort to reduce my use of plastic and paper bags. When purchasing a car in which to taxi my kids around, I considered gas consumption. And, I do support the use of wind energy in our town.

However, I do not support the proposed, privately developed and managed wind turbine project for which the town's Planning Board will soon approve or deny a permit. Naturalist John Muir once said "When one tugs at a single thing in nature, he finds it attached to the rest of the world." These proposed turbines are not just tugging, but are yanking, ripping, and clawing at Cohasset's landscape. Simply put, these turbines are far too massive as they loom over Cohasset's tree line, clearly visible (tower, turbine, blades and all) from Sandy Beach. They will garner the dubious award of being the two largest turbines in all of New England . Our Wind Energy Bylaw calls for the visual impact to be minimized. Yet, two 460-foot

Shedding light on underground work

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

North Main St. Transition Manhole – This week we will review some not-so-obvious Little Harbor Project work that is taking place underground, out of sight. The first location is in a manhole on North Main Street at the northern corner of the Common. This is a very special manhole because it is the location where the change from a force main sewer system to a gravity sewer system takes place. From this manhole going toward Town, the sewer system will flow by gravity. Going backward from this manhole upstream to the rest of the new system, the flow will be generated by pumps. The worker in the photo and another down inside the manhole are constructing the structure that will permit the transition from pumped to gravity to occur at this location. So, although this manhole won't look different from any other manhole once it is finished, only you will know the real inside secret.

In the interest of full disclosure, there is one other small section of this project on the Highland Avenue end of Beach Street that will also be gravity sewer. This section will connect to a new three home section of gravity sewer on Highland Avenue and will flow down Highland Avenue to the center of Town via Robert Jason Road.

The Little Harbor Project and West Corner – Let us explain where West Corner is for those who may not be familiar with its location. West (or sometimes West's Corner) Corner is the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Hull Street (Route 228). (This corner derives its name by virtue of the fact that there was a store at this cross road owned by Mr. West.) Now, you might ask is why the Little Harbor Project is doing something at West Corner, when this area is clearly pretty far from the balance of the Little Harbor Project.

That's the story we want to tell here. The end of the new sewer main line pipe at Rust Way can be connected to either the North Cohasset sewer system that goes to the Hull treatment plant or to the Cohasset Sewer Plant. By making this connection to North Cohasset, it will be possible to offer sewer service to area homes early in the connection cycle, rather than later. So, if the Sewer Commission wishes, the homes in areas like Deep Run and Rust Way areas could be connected to Hull before the new Cohasset system is completed to the newly upgraded Cohasset sewer plant. This interconnection also gives the Cohasset system an emergency backup capability.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Working on North Main connection.

Metering manhole in Jerusalem Road.

Sewer pipe with metering equipment.

Metering manhole and meter control box.

Now back to West Corner. As a part of the little Harbor Project a manhole has been installed in Jerusalem Road at West Corner to house special metering equipment. This equipment will enable the Town to perform supplemental flow measurements. These measurements will enable the Sewer Department to correlate actual flow with water consumption on which sewer usage is typically based. The meter is actually inserted inside of the main line sewer pipe and is connected to a control box alongside of Jerusalem Road. So, we are once again talking about construction taking place mostly underground out of sight.

The control box is inside a shiny stainless steel box that can be seen immediately to the left of the telephone pole shown in the photo.

The control box contains all of the necessary electronics to support the meter as well as communications equipment to send data to the Cohasset Sewer plant. As we write this article we are working with National Grid and Verizon to find a way to get a power connection from the top of the pole to the control box. As of now, the wires to provide power to the metering station are just coiled midway up the pole waiting for the utilities to reach a consensus on their routing. Clearly, that's not a good long-term solution.

Date that will live in infamy

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Wednesday is a dark day in American history, in some minds a day to be remembered as long as the Alamo, Pearl Harbor and the Patriots loss to the Giants in the Super Bowl rolled into one.

It was on Feb. 25, 1913, that the 16th amendment to the Constitution establishing the income tax became law, permitting Uncle Sam to dip his hand into our pockets even before we bought food, clothing and shelter.

"The Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes on income, from whatever sources derived, without apportionment among the several states, and without regard to any census or enumeration."

The amendment was unpopular right from the start, even among its sponsors.

"As to the general policy of an income tax, I am utterly opposed to it," said Congressman Sereno Payne of New York. "I believe with Gladstone that it tends to make a nation of liars."

Payne was a Republican, of course.

After 96 years, six states still have not ratified the 16th amendment, but the gainfully employed in Virginia, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Florida and Utah have to pay up just the same.

Prior to ratification of the amendment, except for a brief period during the Civil War, the feds performed their meager services on excise taxes and customs duties. But as government grew, so did the bills.

The Revenue Act of 1861 slapped a tax of 3 per cent on all incomes exceeding $800 a year, a pretty tidy sum at a time when most Americans earned less than $10 a week. The act disappeared after Lee surrendered to Grant.

The Congress tried to place a 2 per cent tax income that topped $3,000 a year in 1894, but the Supreme Court ruled it unconstitutional unless it was apportioned according to population as required by Article 1, an impossible task.

The first Income Tax Law hammered out by the Congress under the 16th amendment set the rate at 1 per cent, but less than 1 per cent of all Americans were required to pay it. The law was so complicated that many complained they couldn't understand it.

"I guess you will have to go to jail," said Senator Elihu Root, "and I shall meet you there. It will be an intellectual center, for no one understands it except those who have insufficient intelligence to understand the questions that arise from it."

One drastic change in the Income Tax Law was required in 1916, when someone discovered that the original text allowed the Congress to tax "lawful income," implying that unlawful income was exempt.

"We see no reason ... why the fact that a business is unlawful should exempt it from paying the taxes that if lawful it would have to pay," wrote Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. Dropping the word "lawful" eventually made it possible to the feds to jail Al Capone.

Most of the preceding facts were gleaned from Timothy Harper's "Complete Idiot's Guide to the U. S. Constitution."

Race for mediocrity

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

This week Attorney General Eric Holder said that when it comes to discussing race, America is "essentially a nation of weenies." Although this choice of words may have been a little odd coming from a general, I wasn't offended by his comment. I for one have never been afraid to talk publicly about race, sex, large wind turbines and their potentially calamitous effect on Earth's axis of rotation, or any other highly charged topic. I'm glad Mr. Holder played the race card, because now more than ever this country needs to have a frank discussion about how lame white people are.

We've always been fairly lame, but white people have never looked as pathetic as we do at the moment. What are our marketable strengths these days? Clearly we stink at being president. We can't win a marathon or a hundred meter dash. We're groomed from day one to be bankers and yet we've never been all that hot at banking, as people are now discovering. We can't even dominate golf. What's next? We start fouling up high tea? We are losers, people, and if we want any hope of competing with the Obamas and Tigers and Beyonces of the world we need to take a hard look at our pasty white selves in the mirror and make a few changes. For God's sake, even our best rising star republican governor who talks to us like we're all five-year-olds isn't even white anymore. It's time to regroup here.

We're groomed from day one to be bankers and yet we've never been all that hot at banking, as people are now discovering.

First we need to identify the areas where we excel and concentrate on doing those things. For example I think we'd all agree that white people still make the best Swedes. In terms of sports, hockey is where we should put our efforts. I'm not saying we should abandon caber tossing altogether, but I have to say kilts are not coming back as quickly as we'd hoped. Meanwhile we were lucky to reserve as much ice time as we did so I feel like we should use it. I'm not sure why black people don't like hockey. Maybe they can't see the point of endless fistfights that aren't actually part of the game at hand. Maybe they've never been to Canada. Whatever the reason we have a major head start, and should keep practicing our slapshots and backwards skating while they're distracted by every other sport known to Man.

As far as music goes, we have got to stop trying to sing jazz. Seriously, can we all agree on this? I know we love the spontaneity and the inventive rhythms, but when you need to have the concept of syncopation explained to you over and over again like quantum mechanics, it's a sign you should bow out. We should pull all our troops out of jazz, hip-hop, and funk, and redeploy them into hard rock. I'm convinced we can win in hard rock. It's the NHL of music. Just imagine if we took all the resources we waste on country and electropop and plowed them into good old rock and roll. We could be awesome again, I know it.

White children need to feel that if they work hard and try not to be such dorks they too can be useful members of government and society — perhaps even a decent boxing promoter. But that may take more than one generation to achieve. Right now we just need to achieve something positive. Anything. We need a victory.

I've got it! A dance-off!

Registration begins at 5:30 p.m.

Movie Matinee – Can't get out at night to see a movie? Come and enjoy a free movie at 11 a.m., on Friday, March 6. This month's selection is "The Russians are Coming." The Russians are here! It's every man for himself! There's really no hurry, however, it turns out they're just as inept as we are. Still it's great fun watching a small New England coastal town turn into a bunch of would-be Paul Reveres attempting to thwart the "red peril." Stars Carl Reiner, Alan Arkin and Eva Marie Saint. Not rated; 125 min.; 1966. Free admission and refreshments provided courtesy of the Friends of the Library. Movie site license sponsored by Friends of the Library and Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "Under the Bombs" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, March 19. Arabic with English subtitles. 98 min. Free admission and free refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Art Reception – Meet artist Mike DiRado at an opening reception for his show "The Space Between," presented by South Shore Art Center, at Paul Pratt Memorial Library from 5 to 7 p.m., on Sunday, March 8. DiRado, a resident of Scituate and art teacher in the Town of Abington, graduated from Massachusetts College of Art and the Pratt Institute. "The Space Between" will be on display March 1 through April 30. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Monday, Tuesday and Thursday; 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., on Wednesday and Friday; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., on Saturday; and 2 to 5 p.m., on Sunday. The reception is free.

FOR CHILDREN

Story & Craft – Register online for Story & Craft. The program is for Cohasset residents ages 3 through 6 and is a four-week commitment. It will take place in the Story Room on Thursdays, March 12, 19 and 26, and April 2. Register for either the 10:30 to 11:15 a.m. session or from 1 to 1:45 p.m. Each week a theme will be explored through literature and crafts. Go to the Web site at cohassetlibrary.org, click on Calendar, click on March 12 and choose either the morning or afternoon session, complete the form.

Free Drama Workshops – On Saturday, Feb. 28, at 11 a.m., in the Meeting Room Drama Kids will have a free workshop titled Drama Develops Kids for ages 5 through 8. Register now on the library Web site at cohassetlibrary.org; click on Calendar; click on 2/28/09; click the Register button and fill out the online form. For more information about Drama Kids go to their Web site at dramakids.com/ma2.

MamaSteph – Performances at 10:30 a.m., on Mondays, March 2, 9, 16 and 30, in the Story Room. All ages and communities are welcome.

Drop-In Story Time – Tuesdays, March 3, 10, 17, 24 and 31. All ages and communities are welcome.

Choral Art Society celebrates 50 years

Concert fundraiser Saturday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

They come from far and wide, from varying backgrounds and different stages of life, but when they arrive to rehearse at the Choral Art Society on Monday nights, a shared love of music takes center stage.

About 40 singers varying in age from 30 to 80-plus are involved in the Choral Art Society. The regional singing group draws from across the South Shore from as close as Scituate and Cohasset to as far as Plymouth and Hanover.

"We represent many towns and many years of community effort of the chorus," said conductor Danica Buckley.

This spring, the Choral Art Society, a regional chorus, is celebrating its 50th season. The season will kick off this Saturday, Feb. 28 with "Cabaret au Chocolat," at the St. Mary of the Nativity Parish Center on Scituate Harbor. The evening will be filled with chocolate, wine, silent auction and, of course, singing. The chorus will perform popular tunes from Cole Porter, Les Brown, Tom Lehrer, and Duke Ellington.

The members of the Choral Art Society come from different musical backgrounds — from once professional music careers to church choir members to those who love to sing, but never had the opportunity until now. Some have been involved for decades, while others are more recent additions.

"Some people have musical training and some don't, but all are willing to learn from each other," said Buckley.

The non-audition group has just one requirement of its members, "you have to be able to sing in tune," said Buckley.

Many members of the chorus never learned how to read music or perhaps come to the group with little rhythm. In her four years as conductor, Buckley had tried to teach the members more musical skills like sight-reading, rhythm and healthy voice techniques.

The upcoming spring concert, featuring Mendelssohn's "St. Paul" will be performed on Saturday, May 30.

The concert is a monumental convergence of anniversaries. The Choral Art Society will sing alongside the Braintree Choral Society, which is marking its 85th year. And 2009 is the 200th anniversary of the birth of Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy — the composer of the "St. Paul" oratorio.

"St. Paul when it written in 1836 was as popular as (Handel's) 'Messiah' is today," said Buckley. "It is one beautiful chorus after another."

One of the attributes most attractive about St. Paul is how centrally featured is the chorus, "the chorus does most of the work," said Buckley. In addition, there will be four well-known soloists.

"1809 and 2009 are coming together in important ways, for the choruses, in my conducting career, and in music history," said Buckley.

A community

According to one of the first members of the chorus, Ethel Brown of Scituate, the idea for a Choral Art Society got its start two years before it was incorporated. Founder William T. Adams spurred on the formation of a town-wide singing group in 1956 when he sent out a letter to all the churches, asking if they were interested in creating a group to sing at the annual Art Festival. The group performed at the festival for two summers before the year round Choral Art Society was incorporated.

"The Choral Art Society's success is a result of many, many people participating and really supporting the society and working to make it success," said Brown, who has been involved off and on for the last 50-plus years.

Being a part of the Choral Art Society hasn't always been a cakewalk, she said. The music they have performed over the years has proved to be challenging and over the years, Brown has had the opportunity to be a soloist. The love for good music has kept her coming back.

"There is some wonderful new stuff, but you also need the classical stuff," said Brown. "Nothing takes the place of good music."

Brown has been a part of the Choral Art Society's biggest milestones: she performed at its very first concert in 1958, sang in the 25th anniversary performance and to celebrate 40 years, she raised her voice for Mendellssohn's oratorio, "Elijah."

"It has been a real privilege to sing," said the 82-year-old Brown.

The upcoming spring concert is not only a celebration of her 50-year involvement, but also will be a special occasion for her as a mother. Her daughter, Ellen, will be singing beside her.

"It's very special to me," said Brown.

In addition to the love of good music, the Choral Art Society by all accounts is a welcoming group.

"We welcome people with open arms. We are wonderfully supportive of a new voice," said Brown. "We have got to get some younger people involved."

Buckley agrees many friendships have been created through the chorus, "there's a great social element."

Co-chair of the Society Robin Flint of Hull said a love of music brought her to the chorus. She enjoys the comfort of being a voice among many, but also the challenging pieces of music the Choral Art Society takes on.

"Danica (Buckley, conductor) encourages us to stretch what we even think we can do," said Flint adding the selections run the gamut from easy and fun to interesting and challenging.

Cohasset resident Sally Avery has been involved in the Choral Art Society for eight seasons.

"We share a passion for choral tradition, we work hard but we're not so serious that it isn't fun," said Avery. "We do some beautiful music together."

Like others in the chorus, Avery has sung in choirs and choruses her whole life, including 35 years in the choir at St. Stephen's Episcopal church in Cohasset.

Each concert is a "humongous" team effort that takes every member of the chorus and sometimes their family and friends.

As part of our 50th anniversary year celebration, Choral Art Society will be presenting a scholarship to a local student pursuing music studies. A portion of the proceeds of this weekend's Cabaret will go toward the scholarship, and a portion toward the costs of having a full orchestra for the spring concert.

Historical Society Executive Director Lynne DeGiacomo arranges the main table display of Civil War artifacts now on display at the Pratt Building.

'We cannot escape history'

Historical Society debuts Civil War exhibit

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

What was it like in Cohasset during the most divisive period of time in our country's history?

To find out, visit the Cohasset Historical Society's new exhibit dedicated to the Civil War period.

Historical Society director Lynne DeGiacomo began pulling out anything and everything to do with the Civil War from the thousands of Historical Society artifacts in mid-January. She laid it all out from a gun brought home by a Cohasset soldier to a jacket once worn by an officer to a box of letters sent from Cohasset men battling horrible conditions and the Confederate army in the 1860s.

Calling the exhibit, "We cannot escape history," taken a cue from the closing remarks of President Abraham Lincoln's annual message to Congress in 1862.

The Historical Society will host an open house for the exhibit this Sunday, March 1 from 2 to 4p.m. The event is free of charge and light refreshments will be served.

"We're using what we have to highlight some of Cohasset's Civil War history, we wanted to keep it local," said DeGiacomo. "We have such wonderful things."

From a diorama of a home built by Abraham Lincoln's great-great-great-grandfather to compiling and transcribing letters from Cohasset Civil War soldiers, it turned out the Historical Society had a great wealth of information and items from the time period.

"Most of this has never been seen," said DeGiacomo. The Historical Society had a small exhibit of Civil War and President Lincoln related items during a Civil War centennial event in the 1960s. The items in that exhibit were recently unearthed at the Maritime Museum.

One of the highlights of the exhibit and the portion DeGiacomo hopes people will take the time to read the firsthand letters from Civil War soldiers.

"I hope that some take the time to read the letters and get an understanding of how horrible the war was," said DeGiacomo. The letters talk about how hungry the men are and give a glimpse into the conditions they were forced to live under.

DeGiacomo said the letters combined with the short biographies, some with photos, written up on the soldiers are a way to bring the Civil War to life. She also felt it was important for people to know that when the soldiers returned home to Cohasset, most went on to live our their lives.

"It's a lot to take in but it is fascinating if anyone wants to take the time," said DeGiacomo. The letters, particularly from the three Willcutt brothers who served show the arc of emotion and experience a soldier went through.

While the letters are fascinating, they also posed a challenge for DeGiacomo and a few of the volunteers.

"The penmanship may be beautiful, but there was little punctuation, no capitalization, phonetic spelling and then there's the age," said DeGiacomo.

One of the sobering tales of the exhibit is of the Bates brothers, Caleb and Bela. Bela died during battle and Caleb was severely wounded and later succumbed to his injuries. A small section is devoted to their story.

For those more interested in what life was like in the 1860s back in Cohasset, volunteers have assembled a collection of clothing and textiles to show what the fashion was of the time. Many of the fashions of the day had military or patriotic influences.

The exhibit includes a must see stunning red and white gown in excellent condition. Cohasset resident Maria Barnes purchased the layered dress, which includes ribbon and fringe detail, in Paris in 1865 as she jaunted around Europe on a grand tour to the major cities abroad.

The exhibit concludes with a small collection of photographs and memorabilia from the Grand Army of the Republic, a Civil War veterans group.

Despite DeGiacomo's best efforts, there are outstanding mysteries of the exhibit she would love to have answered. She does not know how the Historical Society came to possess the Civil War uniform jacket and who once wore it.

Excerpts from letters from Cohasset's Civil War soldiers

"I am well and tough as ever, last night we had issued to us two days rations of soft Bread it is the first we have had for a long time, For you know where we are on the move every two or three days it is some trouble to get and then again it is unhandy to carry, when they make supply-trains of the men and stick 8 days rations on their back, but then we do it and go hungry about one third of the time…"

— Letter to Wallace W. Willcutt, Cohasset, Mass. From Elbridge Willcutt, Nov. 22, 1863, Camp at Culpeper

"This is a pretty healthy place but orful lonesome nothing but sand and water to be seen. There is plenty of work to do and but few men to do it."

— Lyman Willcutt, Fort Morgan Jan 15th 1865

"I don't think much of Washington thare is only 2 streets that looks like Boston all the place that is any thing is the Capital our Company went all over it yesterday and I can tell you it is a pretty place and worth looking at a fellow would never get tired looking at the Pictures & Images that is in it we was in the room yesterday…"

— Wallace Willcutt to his sister, Mary from Fort Foote, May 8, 1864

To day we had beans again and two days in a week we get a belly full the rest of the week it is pretty hollow. It is getting cool enough for fires and we keep them a going all day. If we stop here this winter I dont know but we will freeze if we dont have bed sacks

— Wallace Willcutt to his sister Mary from Fort Berry, Virginia, Sept. 18, 1864

"The Cohasset boys are having hard luck some of them and I am sorry to hear George Hardwick is dead and I guess Hen is dead by all accounts."

— Wallace Willcutt to his sister Mary from Fort Berry, Virginia, Oct. 6, 1864

HEALTH NOTES

Getting down to business

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Naturally new developments in septic technology were discussed, but so were windmills, since several Boards had received complaints or comments on wind turbines.

On Tuesday this week, health agents of Southeastern Massachusetts towns assembled at one of several seminars designed to provide an update of the best most current information on the status of health matters in Massachusetts. Attending is a useful learning tool for anyone who wants to learn about those infirmities besetting the population, as well as what the various agencies are doing about them. Not for us, the accounts of miraculous cures or pinnacle techniques to stamp out the latest pandemic, but ho hum talks about which septic system technology will save towns the most money and what a town should do if its drinking water supply is contaminated. We learn about the most frequent complaints to arrive at the desks of health boards and their staffs and what the best, cheapest or most effective actions and responses are likely to be.

Emergency Planning Exercises — Necessarily mundane stuff, but sum and substance of the workload for most health departments. Of course, discussions are not without stories and unexpected turns. For example, one speaker guided the assembled 60 or so conference attendees through a so called "table top exercise" to determine the capability of a local water system to respond to the following fictitious simulated emergency:

On July 7, 2008, at 8:45 AM, after a long, hot holiday weekend, a water department employee inspecting the Reservoir Hill water storage tank discovers 6 empty one-gallon plastic bottles next to a ladder near the tank. Climbing the tank he finds a lock cut and an open hatch on the tank. He radios to report the conditions. The treatment plant operator informs the water treatment plant supervisor of the incident, who notifies the DPW Superintendent. The Superintendent calls the Town Manager who activates the town's emergency response organization.

A discussion followed by the assembled group as to the probable scenario and appropriate response by various elements of Town management. What would the police and others in Town government likely do? Where does the Health Department fit and what are its obligations? By the end of the exercise, most of the participants had sufficient information to alter many of the procedures they routinely practiced in their respective towns. A very useful exercise.

Reporting — Then, there is the health official's perennial battle to respond to those who submit inspection reports certifying correct and healthy operation of septic systems. Such reports, when positive, permit realtors and homeowners to avoid the not insignificant cost of upgrading a poor or failed septic system. Economic factors prompt very innovative interpretation of the results of septic tests to which health officials must respond and interpret State rules that sometimes make shockingly novel use of the English language. This back-and-forth necessitates annual review and upgrade of State regulations, the contents of which must often be explained to local town health officials. The most recent (and bulkier) issue of Title V (septic regulations) was reviewed at this meeting.

New Technology — Finally, there is the unrelenting march of improved technology. Our tools are better now than they have been in the past in medicine, in wastewater, even in power generation. Accordingly the Town must be prepared to respond to better systems in a manner that is fair to our entire population.

Naturally new developments in septic technology were discussed, but so were windmills, since several Boards had received complaints or comments on wind turbines. Cohasset, the Vineyard and Nantucket are not the only towns where wind turbines have been the subject of controversy. Many health boards have received questions as well as complaints about the structures and the State is only now developing its position on them.

And so as 2009 begins to mature, your Health Board now can go forth armed with the newest and best word about maintaining the welfare of our citizens. Let us know your concerns and we'll try to respond to them.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Wind bylaw needs to be amended structures, equivalent to a 38-story office building, on a 150-foot hill (totaling over an astounding 600 feet) hardly meets the requirement to minimize visual impact when they can be seen from all over town. Most of us are now familiar with the many negatives this project will bestow on our town: the flicker effect from the blades passing in front of the sun, the increased noise levels from the turbines and blades, the safety concerns over towers, ice, and blades falling onto nearby Hingham Lumber, the medical building and other properties, and the major visual impact. These negatives have all been discussed, quantified, evaluated, re-evaluated and discussed again. Clearly in this case, there are enough violations of the Bylaw to responsibly, thoughtfully deny this project. We need to balance our efforts to conserve earth's resources with our responsibility to preserve the quaintness and serenity of our town in which we are lucky to live. There are so very few places like it left on this earth.

I am equally concerned that a project of this magnitude is not being done for the economic benefit of the town, but primarily benefits a private developer. Unlike neighboring Hull's turbines, we are not in control of these, and we are not the primary beneficiaries of the project. Additionally, we have not yet explored the very real, negative impact on property values and long-term exposures to additional costs (e.g., lawsuits, decommissioning, etc.). How can the Planning Board possibly permit the development of this turbine site when major pieces of the equation are missing?

Under the language of our Bylaw, the Planning Board is not required to assess the financial benefits to our town. Under the language of our Bylaw, a turbine tower could be built within falling distance of nearby businesses, which is in opposition to industry standard safety setbacks. Under the language of the Bylaw, the largest wind turbine in New England could be erected. How could we the townspeople and our elected officials have let this Bylaw pass the way it was written? Perhaps it was because we wanted to do the "right thing". We supported renewable wind energy, and we trusted our Alternative Energy Committee had drafted a Bylaw that would bring the benefits of wind energy to Cohasset on our terms. I think it's fair to say we thought we would have a project similar to Hull's, a project that was developed by the town and for town. We certainly did not expect a private developer to set up shop, garnish our wind, and profit from it. So, what can we do now to fix it? To quote Aristotle: "Even when laws have been written down, they ought not to remain unaltered". At a very minimum, we should act to amend this flawed bylaw, so we don't run into these problems again.

Our town is certainly noble and forward thinking to support the use of renewable, wind energy, and I glean that much thankless time and effort has been expended by the town's Planning Board and Alternative Energy Committee to explore ways in which Cohasset can do just that. However, I respectfully urge the Board to deny permitting this project and to allow us to explore other projects whose scale is more amenable to our town and where Cohasset is the primary beneficiary of the economics. We will be living with the effects of this project for many years to come. Let us not sell out to the first bidder. Let us look more closely at and learn from other towns with successful wind turbine projects. Let us be patient. Let us find a project which is not only right for the broader environment, but right for Cohasset. We don't want to look back (and up, way up) in a few years and with regret say to ourselves "how did we let this happen?"

Bradley promoted to House leadership post

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, has been promoted to a House leadership position for the 2009-2010 legislative session by newly elected Speaker Robert A. DeLeo, D-Winthrop. Bradley was appointed to serve as Floor Leader of the First Division of the House. In addition, Bradley will serve on the Rules Committee.

As Floor Leader, Bradley will report directly to the House Speaker, tracking all legislation and informing members of the First Division of upcoming votes on the agenda, and shepherding through legislative and budgetary proposals. In addition, Bradley will assist the Speaker with various policy issues that affect the Commonwealth.

"I am grateful for the confidence that Speaker DeLeo has shown me, and look forward to working as a member of his team to pass legislation that will improve the lives of every citizen of the Commonwealth," said Bradley. "Most importantly, this new leadership role will also allow me to better serve the residents of the Third Plymouth District."

Bradley most recently served as House chairman of the Joint Committee on Election Laws. He previously served as vice chairman of the Judiciary Committee and as a member of the Committee on Government Regulations and the Committee on Public Service.

Bradley has served the Third Plymouth District since first being elected in 2000. The district comprises the towns of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, and Precinct 3 in Scituate.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

BACK TO NATURE?
SUMMER CAMPS NEVER LEFT!

Camps are an ideal setting for creating environmental awareness in our children; and camps in New England have been doing so for the last century! Living more closely with the Earth while at camp than at any other time of the year, campers experience nature differently. Campers are the future stewards of the environment. What they learn at summer camp raises environmental awareness and establishes lifelong interest in caring for the planet.

Place-based education is a cornerstone of what summer camps do. Often a camp's location can provide built-in environmental lessons. Organic gardens are planted to catch enough rays of the sun. Overnight trips travel to the island in the middle of the camp's lake; canoers are forbidden to pick the water lilies as they paddle around the pond or lake. Campers return home with an enhanced appreciation of the outdoors.

Children's optimal development continues to be enhanced by such camp experiences. Recent research has shown that NOT interacting with nature has quite a negative influence on child development. Notably the work of Richard Louv, who coined the phrase Nature-Deficit-Disorder and a "Leave No Child Inside" campaign that is sweeping the nation, has validated the importance of camps' crucial contributions to child development by being "nature-centric" and "green".

New Haven deserves respect

NEW HAVEN, CONN. — New Haven, Conn., may very well be the Rodney Dangerfield of American cities.

When I told co-workers I was heading there for the weekend, the reactions were fairly consistent. Eyes flew wide open; chins dropped and voices hit levels almost inaudible to all except dogs.

"New Haven? Connecticut?" was the chorus.

Yes, New Haven.

New Haven may have lost a lot of respect during the 1970s and 1980s when Yale University urged students not to stray from campus into the city itself. But under a newer administration, the school has embraced its hometown and helped revive what was, in 1639, America's first planned city.

Naturally, Yale is New Haven's raison d'etre and a good starting place for your tour. The Mead Visitor Center (149 Elm St.; www.yale.edu/visitor) offers an insider's look at one of America's top universities with free student-led tours seven days a week.

Once we slipped past the gates it was like being transported to the set of a Merchant and Ivory film as we stood in the middle of the verdant Old Campus Yard, surrounded by limestone buildings with gabled roofs and stained glass windows.

Yale, which started out as the Collegiate School in 1701, consists of 12 residential colleges with such Anglicized names as Jonathan Edwards, Farnam and Lanman-Wright.

Students are randomly placed in one of the colleges, where they will spend the next four years living. Each college includes sleeping quarters, dining rooms and even movie theaters or bowling alleys in which the 400 or so other residents of the college socialize.

Although a peek inside a typical dorm room wasn't included, we did get a chance to visit the Commons Dining Hall, which has dark brown, two-story walls and rows of long tables - the setting would not be out of place in a Harry Potter movie.

Off campus, too, there are plenty of places to grab a bite or luxuriate over a five-course dinner, New Haven being a bit of a foodie enclave.

The doyenne of the New Haven culinary scene is Claire Criscuolo, who runs Claire's Corner Copia (1000 Chapel St.; www.clairescornercopia.com).

For more than 30 years, Criscuolo has fed students and townies alike with her vegetarian creations that rely on homegrown and organic ingredients. A salad may include a base of organic spinach topped with succulent pears, pleasingly tart dried cranberries and finished with a flourish of creamy, slightly salty feta cheese.

Criscuolo sees her job as more than satisfying her customers' hunger. She said she wants to fill their souls as well through education on making better food choices and supporting local farmers. Each month, through her Coins for Causes program, all the money placed in a collection jar by the cash register goes to a different charity.

Last year, Claire's customers helped raise $600 to assist New Haven's immigrant community, gave $1,000 to the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society and $200 to the Walk for AIDS, organized by Yale students.

"It speaks to what this restaurant is," said Criscuolo. "We are feeding people, nourishing people and nurturing people. It's a 10-burner stove of social activism."

At Zinc (964 Chapel St.; www.zincfood.com), chef/owner Denise Appel uses Connecticut farm products to whip up dishes like wild boar ragout with orecchiette and seared sea scallops with Jerusalem artichoke butter sauce that would feel at home in any top New York City eatery.

But if you're looking for the real New Haven experience head to Louis' Lunch, which claims to be the home of America's first hamburger.

As the story goes, in 1900 a customer came in and asked for something fast that he could eat on the run. Louis Lassen reportedly stuck a broiled beef patty between two slices of bread and sent the guy on his way.

Today, Louis' Lunch continues to offer its burgers on toasted Pepperidge Farm bread adorned with only cheese, tomato and onion. Ketchup is a four-letter word here.

Although up for debate, Frank Pepe Pizzeria (157 Wooster St.; www.pepespizzeria.com), established in 1925, claims to be one of the first places to sell pizza in the U.S. Try the white clam pie, with or without mozzarella, served on a thin cruise and overflowing with shellfish.

When you're ready for something sweet, flag down The Cupcake Truck.

Basically a mobile bakeshop, The Cupcake Truck (www.followthatcupcake.com) is almost as if the Good Humor man and Sara Lee had a baby.

Choose from chocolate, red velvet, sweet potato pecan or lemon meringue cakes. Then add a different frosting flavor and even more toppings like M&Ms, chocolate chips or rainbow sprinkles.

Once you fill your tummy, take a little time to exercise your brain at one of the city's cultural hotspots.

Catch a Broadway-bound musical at the city's Shubert Theater on College Street. Or try and spot the next Meryl Streep (a famous alum) among the Yale School of Drama students performing at the Yale Repertory Theatre (www.yalerep.org) on Chapel Street.

If you like your art non-performing, New Haven has you covered at one of Yale's free museums.

Check out the Yale Center for British Art (1080 Chapel St.; www.yale.edu) which purports to have the largest collection of British paintings, prints and rare books outside of Great Britain.

The museum, which originated with the collections of Paul Mellon, includes works by some of the most respected English artists, including Thomas Gainsborough and J.M.W. Turner.

Even the museum structure is impressive for its Modernism style, designed by Louis Kahn and completed after his death in 1974.

Across the street sits Kahn's first major commission, an extension to the Yale University Art Gallery (Chapel and High streets; www.artgallery.yale.edu) which is the oldest college art museum in the country. Started in 1832 with a donation from John Trumbull on the condition he be buried with his collection - and he is buried somewhere in the building - the museum now houses more than 185,000 pieces from the ancient world to the present.

There are photographs, sculptures, tribal pieces and jewelry sprinkled throughout the three-story building. Asian and African art share floor space with works by Americans and Europeans. The modern display includes paintings by Paul Gauguin, Pablo Picasso and Andy Warhol.

If you time it right, you can actually hang out with a Yale class. The day I was there, an art history professor was holding court near some of the religious icons while a French class practiced conversations amid the Impressionists.

So when you return home, you can claim you sat in on a few Yale classes. That should earn you some respect from friends and co-workers unless, of course, they attended Harvard.

Cohasset skaters upset Avon

Doonan's five point output leads way in first round tourney win

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

CANTON - It was one of those make-or-break moments you often read about in great literature.

The favored Avon-Holbrook team had just scored a controversial goal with 12:06 to go in the third period of Wednesday's first round state tourney showdown, cutting the Cohasset skaters' lead in half to 4-3. The Skippers, to a young man, were beside themselves, believing that the whistle should have been blown for a face-off well before senior goalie Johnny Wade had been bumped, slapped and jabbed, never mind before the puck trickled across the goal line to make it a one-goal game.

"I had to calm a few players down at that point, and make sure they were still ready to take the ice and stick to the plan," noted Skippers head coach Bob Walsh.

The third year coach need not have worried. In fact, given the way his charges responded, Walsh should probably have been dreaming up ways to get them angry before last night's

Skipper wrestlers make a case at States

Froio qualifies for All-State Tournament

By Emily Toomey
CHS CORRESPONDENT

On one weekend each year, the best Division 3 high school wrestlers from across Massachusetts meet at the States Tournament in order to determine who's truly on top. Through the grueling two days, competitors encounter heartbreak, anxiety, and hopefully, victory. This year, Cohasset went to Pittsfield with four wrestlers-Mike Froio, David Toomey, Jack Murphy, and Andrew Littauer.

Froio, according to Coach Sweeney, started off and ended with the same level of intensity and strength in order to finish fourth place.

"Most coaches agree that the 160 lb weight class is one of the toughest," Sweeney said, "This year, there were four returning place winners from last season: champion Derek Golner, Christian Francois, Joe Mahoney, and Zach Sperling. In other words, Mike faced some tough matches."

In his first match, Froio beat Jon Upton 11-6, and then proceeded to take down Sperling three times to win his second by seven points.

After suffering a hard loss against the determined Golner, Froio wrestled against Upton again and won 7-6. In his final match, he battled against Mahoney, the number one seed, and lost 5-2. However, by placing fourth, Froio has earned a spot in the All-States next Friday and Saturday.

In the 152 lb weight class, fellow captain Toomey wrestled coming from the best sectional tournament of his career, said Sweeney. After placing third in

Norwell duo starting in-home personal training business

By Julie Ann Nevero
JNEVERO@CNC.COM

It all started on a dock at Kings Landing in Norwell.

Two friends looked out on the water and discussed how unhappy they were professionally. Both personal trainers at local gyms Sarah Servant and Julie Stanton talked about how uninspired they were in their positions. They'd seen the ugly side of personal training and realized the job was nothing like what they thought it would be.

Starting their own PT business had been a goal of theirs since graduating from the National Personal Training Institute but it wasn't until that July day on the dock that the pair decided to take matters into their own hands.

Less than a year later, they're ready to launch their new in-home PT business called Strength Training Concepts and encourage you to "Bring Your Strong On" as they offer hands-on training that comes directly into your home. And they're offering their services to you at a fraction of the price of local gyms.

"Grab your sports bras and sneakers because we're coming over," Stanton said with a laugh, sitting on a workout ball inside their Norwell-based facility.

Each the owners of fresh personalities and great senses of humor, make no mistake about it: These women are serious about fitness. Recognizing the statistic that America is perhaps the most obese country in the world, Servant and Stanton say making a workout part of your daily routine is essential.

"I've had so many people tell me 'I don't have time to work out'," Servant said. "We understand people are tired from work and the kids but they really have

Lady Skippers moving on Tournament opens with win over Bishop Connolly

By Susan Franklin

With only one senior and a substantial height differential, 17th-seeded Bishop Connolly had its work cut out against top-seeded Cohasset.

They opened up against Cohasset in a man-to-man defense. Working inside Sammi Lehr racked up 4 points on layups and Kayla Farren hit a long-ball from the outside, but BC did not appear intimidated by Cohasset's height advantage, posting four points in the opening minutes of a 58-35 Cohasset victory.

Cohasset had some early jitters and turnovers resulted, but if this game was to be like others, they would work those out in short time.

A pair of outside hoops aced by Lindsay Davis put Cohasset out front 18-4 at the end of the quarter, but score aside, jitters still plagued the floor.

The opening minutes of the second quarter belonged to Tori Lehr, whose short turnaround jumper proved too perfect to stop. Cohasset pulled out to a 28-11 lead with BC using short, quick passes to create seams to penetrate in Cohasset's 1-2-2. Offensively Cohasset appeared to have found the handle on the ball.

Sammi Lehr hit Carli Haggerty in the seam. She ball-faked and dropped it to Meredith Kelly who put in the scheduled second round clash with heavily favored Medway (12-4-4).

The Skippers response to the chippy Avon-Holbrook squad was four unanswered goals over the game's final 10 minutes.

Freshman Johnny Collins got the Skippers back their two goal edge less than two minutes later off a pass from junior Brendan Doonan, and Doonan (2 goals, 3 assists) netted a much netted an insurance goal not long thereafter on the power play.

Junior Conor Queenan hammered the final nail into the Panthers' coffin with 1:30 to play and senior defenseman Ian Lyster put the exclamation mark on it a minute later with a well-placed slapper from the left point.

"I could get used to this," noted Coach Walsh with a chuckle a short while after the win Wednesday. "I'm not used to be able to relax down the stretch, but these guys definitely gave me a nice gift tonight."

The Skippers (10-9-2) outscored Avon-Holbrook (11-7-2) by a 2-1 margin in both the first and second periods.

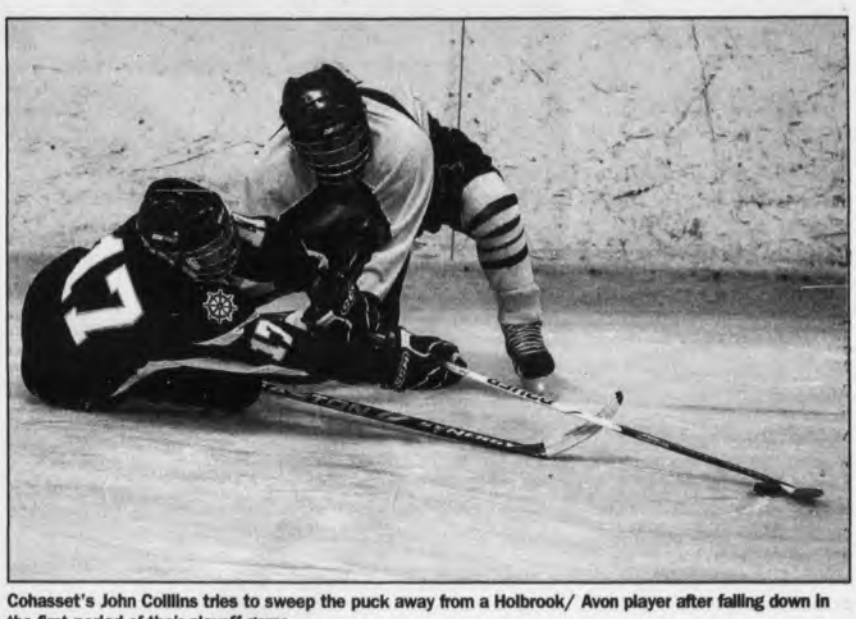
Junior Andy McKenna got things going early, and Queenan followed not long thereafter with his first of two tallies.

Doonan scored his first early in the second period, and sophomore Brian Scott extended the Skippers lead to 4-2 later in the middle frame on a pretty rush in from the neutral zone and well-placed slapper from just above the left dot, making it a 4-2 game heading into the second break.

Though he did not show up on the score sheet, senior checking line standout Andrew Bell was pointed to by Coach Walsh as one of the key difference makers in the game.

"Andrew set the tone all night with his all-out hustle," lauded Walsh. "I just kept throwing three lines out there, and Andrew and his linemates really made Avon work for everything. Andrew, in particular, was pressuring all over the ice, using his speed to disrupt."

Next up



If the Skippers survived last night's quarterfinals match-up with Medway, they'll be facing perennial Mayflower League power Blue Hills (16-3-0) sometime over the weekend (time and place TBA).

"If we play our game, we can be a very tough team for any team to beat," noted coach Walsh. "We're still pretty young overall, but we have some talent. If we play our game, I can't see why we can't be competitive with any team in this section."

SSBC's McGeary schooling at Stanford and pitching in Nationals system

HINGHAM – Former multi-year Seadogs player and South Shore Baseball Club (SSBC) summer camp instructor, left-handed pitcher Jack McGeary, is living the best of both worlds as a Stanford University student and prized professional baseball pitcher in the Washington Nationals farm system.

The 6-3 southpaw hurler was a standout at Roxbury Latin, but he wasn't selected in the 2007 amateur draft until the sixth-round because he was committed to attending Stanford University. The Nationals gambled on McGeary by signing the now Stanford second-year student to a sixth-round record $1.8 million dollar deal that allows him to be a college student and pitch professionally in the Nationals minor league system during summers. Part of the deal is that the Nationals are paying three years of McGeary's schooling at Stanford, where he is taking a course load of 20 hours a week, putting him on pace to graduate in 2010.

The 19-year-old McGeary led the Gulf Coast League in strike-outs last season with 64 in 60 innings pitched for the Nationals rookie-level team. He was 2-2 on the mound with a 4.07 ERA before moving on to strike out five in a four-inning stint for the short-seasoned Vermont Lake Monsters of the New York-Penn League.

In a recent Baseball America magazine story, "Schooling the GCL," McGeary was quoted as saying, "There's a lot going for Stanford, so I wanted to come here no matter what. I saw about 10 of the (team's) baseball games or so last year and I'm sure that I'll do that again this year.

"In the Gulf Coast League, if you can throw early strikes with command, you'll get outs and can have quick innings. Once I started doing that, I was able to go deeper in games. I feel good overall, but results-wise, things happened a little slower than I would have liked. I definitely learned a lot in instructs, and that made me feel like I went out on a good note."

Babe Ruth League and High School Battery Clubs

Babe Ruth League and High School pitchers and catchers can get a jump start on the upcoming season by attending SSBC's Battery Club, specifically designed for serious battery-mates who want to learn and work on the finer point of baseball's most important positions in March.

The High School (ages 15-18) session is for four consecutive Monday or Thursday evenings (7-9 PM), March 2-12, while The Babe Ruth League (ages 13-15) session will be held four Saturday mornings in a row (8-10 AM), Mar. 7-28.

Group size for all Battery Club sessions is limited in order to insure personalized instruction by SSBC's professional staff of experienced instructors: Frank Niles, Jason Trask, Tim Daley and Tom Levett.

Pitching Instruction; Wind-up and stretch mechanics, strategy and pitch selection, various grips and respective effects on the thrown ball, fielding the position, pick-off moves, and attitude for success

Catching Instruction; Proper receiving and throwing techniques, pitch selection and strategies, blocking low pitches, and overall catching strategy.

Challenger Baseball to begin sixth season for South Shore Youth

Over 100 children from 19 communities on the South Shore played baseball each Sunday afternoon at Hollingsworth Park in Braintree last spring. Taking part in non-competitive baseball games these children benefited from a welcoming atmosphere of fun and sport. They are the Challenger Division of the Braintree American Little League (B.A.L.L.).

The Challenger Division was established nationally in 1989 as a separate division of Little League Baseball to enable boys and girls with physical and mental disabilities, to enjoy the game of baseball along with millions of other children who participate in this sport worldwide. Braintree's division hosts 8 teams.

The 2009 season which is expected to be another pleasant and rewarding experience will begin on Sunday, April 26, 2009. It is open to all children ages 6-18, who live on the South Shore, regardless of ability.

Every child gets up to bat and crosses home plate each inning. The batter may use a tee or have a coach pitch to them. Socialization is incorporated into every game. He/she can be assisted to hold/swing the bat, move around the bases and in the field.

Teams are of mixed ability, age and gender. A primary goal is to make each child feel that s/he is an important part of the team. Major league team hats, shirts, pants and socks are provided. Volunteer Buddies are available to assist players on the field so that parents may sit in the bleachers and enjoy the game.

The program, on Sundays afternoons, includes an enjoyable three inning game.

The park is at 348 Pond Street, Braintree. It has accessible restrooms, a snack bar and plenty of parking. This year the Challenger Division season will open on April 26th and run through June 28th.

If you feel that this activity may be appropriate for your son or daughter, please log onto our web site at www.eteamz.com/braintreeamerican or contact Kathy Jordan at 781-223-8633. Due to the program's tremendous popularity an April 1st registration deadline has been set.

Join us in Braintree to play ball!

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse 1st/2nd Grade Clinic

The clinic is open to all boys and girls in first and second grade and no lacrosse playing experience is necessary. There will be 6 sessions beginning in mid-April and ending in late May or early June. The sessions will be one hour each with a focus on the fundamentals of lacrosse in a fun and relaxed environment. The cost is $75 per player and will include a T-shirt. All players must have the proper equipment to play in the clinic.

Girls- stick, goggles, mouthguard and cleats.

Boys - stick, helmet, mouthguard, shoulder pads, arm pads, gloves and cleats.

Registration is open until 3/31 and information on how to register online can be found at www.cohassetlacrosse.com. If you have any questions please contact Hank Kucinski at 781-383-0634.

the sectionals, Toomey was unable to defeat Sean Vanzant of Sabis Charter high school in his first match. Yet, he proved that he deserved to be at the States when he beat Mark Pigott from Pentucket with a strong win.

Although having lost against the number six seed from Winchester, Toomey finished his career at the states with an impressive eighty victories over four varsity seasons.

Murphy, who wrestled at the States last season, placed in the top eight wrestlers again, but, according to Sweeney, fell short in a gut wrenching 10-9 loss in the final ten seconds of the match.

At the start of the States, Murphy beat Mike Moullis from Hudson 4-0 and lost to the two-time defending state champion Kevin Barrucci of Burlington. Afterwards, he pinned Pat Powell from Joshia Quincy in the consolation round, qualifying him for the second day.

While Murphy lost against the fourth seed in a close match, Sweeney says this will give him added motivation to come back stronger next year and earn a medal. Murphy won twenty-four matches this season, losing only eight, Sweeney said, and will be a good senior leader.

Sweeney sees Littauer as another promising senior for next season's team. Losing his first match to Brendon Rigby from Burlington, Littauer turned it around and crushed his opponent from Bellingham 9-0. Later on, he faced a tight 4-6 match against Joe Maccini from Wayland, who went on to place sixth. In Sweeney's opinion, Littauer's skill was fully revealed at the past sectionals tournament where he finished third and demonstrated talent as an upcoming senior. Throughout this season, he won twenty matches and lost only ten.

baseline layup. With just over two minutes remaining in the half, BC called a timeout.

Cohasset racked up a few from the foul line and BC fought hard to get off some shots, including a well executed jumper over the sky high hands of Cohasset defenders. The teams went to the locker room with Cohasset out front 34-15.

BC came out in the second half with the same plan as the first. During the regular season, defensive successes had sparked Cohasset's offense. The press was yielding little as quick BC players were able to avoid traps. Cohasset was having trouble getting into a rhythm.

With the score 35-21, Cohasset called a timeout. BC spread their offense wide and worked the ball around sinking a three-point shot from the left of the circle and pulling within 12 points at 38-26. Cohasset answered with more points from the inside by Sammi Lehr and foul shots by Carli Haggerty. The quarter ended with Cohasset holding on to a 45-26 lead.

The opening minutes of the fourth quarter were frustrating for Cohasset who got off many shots but none dropped in. Meanwhile BC sliced up the floor on the press break, bringing the score to 48-32 with five minutes to play. Cohasset switched to a man-to-man defense to quell BC's outside shooters but their best shooter did not get the memo, icing a 3-pointer from the top of the circle. But regardless of these successes, Cohasset dominated overall. With a 17 point deficit, BC resorted to double teaming, but Cohasset continued to be flawless from the line.

Cohasset will host No. 9 Chatham, a 60-45 winner over No. 8 South Shore Voc. Tech, Friday night at 7 p.m.

And that's where STC comes in. Servant and Stanton are making it tough for you to make excuses because they are coming to you. Operating on a 1-4 Level system, the pair will first conduct a Wellness Exam to see at which level you should begin. From there, they'll determine which workouts are best for you and will help you advance through the four levels until you are ready to continue the process on your own.

Level 1, for example, is for "Beginners." The one-year program features intense three-month sessions in which you work with STC three-times a week at $34 per hour-long session. The $100 per week package price includes two in-home sessions and one boot camp class. (As a client, however, you may attend all six Boot Camps per week). That's roughly $400 per month, compared to the $65-$80 per hour packages Servant and Stanton said they had to try to sell while working at local gyms.

"I was sitting across the table from people trying to sell $80-per hour programs," Servant said. "It occurred to me most of the people sitting across from me weren't able to afford the service. My heart just sank lower and lower."

Then there's the discomfort and intimidation factor that comes with working out at the gym.

"No one wants to work out next to someone who's in better shape than they are and that can deter them from going to the gym," Stanton said. "We come to you and work one-on-one with you, so now you have no excuse. We're holding you accountable."

While you may not be ready for the in-home sessions, STC also offers Boot Camp Only packages. Servant and Stanton offer six boot camps per week, three in the morning, three at night. Boot Camps are currently located in Marshfield, Norwell, and Easton. STC's first Boot Camp session is slated for March 3 at 6 a.m. at Courtney's in Marshfield.

Workouts are a big part of getting healthy, but the pair said it's only part of the process. Practicing good nutrition, they say, is 80-percent of the process of losing weight. As a result, STC is working with local grocers to set up home food delivery. Servant and Stanton will meet individually with clients to determine the right meal plan and ultimately hope to have the food delivered directly to you.

"By taking our clients out of the grocery stores we're keeping them out of those 'bad aisles'," Servant said, noting that STC also offers a Nutrition Only plan as well.

Also, if you are more comfortable working in a gym-like setting as opposed to in your living room, STC offers you their homemade gym facility, located in a small shed-like building off Servant's home.

Servant and Stanton say they are in the process of taking on 40-50 clients, so don't delay. For more information on any of the STC programs and services visit www.stcbyso.com.

This winter there are many ongoing programs at St. Stephen's include bible studies for adults, youth group activities, the children's Christian education program "Godly Play", outreach programs serving the hungry and homeless, yoga, meditation and a monthly luncheon for seniors.

In Lent we are also offering the following:

• Bach and Spirituality: The St. John Passion with Dr. John Whiteside, Director of Music Ministries, Wednesdays March 4, 11, 18 & 25, from 6:30 – 7:00 pm (dessert and fellowship), 7 – 8 pm class.

Johann Sebastian Bach was a deeply spiritual man who developed a musical language that was representative of his spirituality. Using St. John as a background, join our new director of music ministries, John Whiteside, for this exploration of how music and spirituality work together to deepen our experience of Lent.

• The Meaning of Jesus: Two Visions, Sundays March 1, 8, 15, 22 & 29 in the Rectory, from 12 – 1:30 pm

Marcus Borg and N.T. Wright are two well-known and highly respected Biblical scholars and Anglican theologians. Good friends and colleagues, they represent two very different perspectives in the church: Borg considers himself a "progressive", Wright is more "orthodox." Together they wrote The Meaning of Jesus: Two Visions, in which they offer their divergent interpretations of some of the most fundamental issues of our faith.

• Show Me the Way: Lenten Meditations by Henri Nouwen, Wednesdays March 4 – April 8 from 10:30 – 11:30 am

Journey through Lent with this spiritual classic by the great Catholic priest, monk and writer Henri Nouwen. We will use this book in our daily devotions at home, and meet on Wednesday mornings to share our thoughts and reflections with each other.

You can reach the church at 781-383-1083. The Rev. Margot Critchfield can be reached at mcritchfield@ststephenscohasset.org. Our offices, which are open Monday through Friday, can be accessed by coming to the back of the church, up the Highland Ave hill. We are handicap accessible.

'Heatless Sunday'

New North Church, 1 Lincoln St., will host its third and final "Heatless Sunday" of the winter on March 1 to raise funds for its fuel assistance effort on the South Shore.

For the past six winters, New North has teamed with Alvin Hollis Co. and Williams Coal and Oil to provide a free tank of oil to homeowners in Hingham and other South Shore towns who are having trouble paying fuel bills.

New North leaves the sanctuary of its historic meeting house unheated on selected winter Sundays, relocating the 10:30 a.m. worship service to the Ruth Curry parlor in the parish house at the rear of the building.

Money saved by not heating the sanctuary is combined with proceeds from a special collection taken at the service and donations from the public to provide fuel assistance to hard-pressed local families who for one reason or another are not served by government-sponsored assistance programs.

"Spring may be around the corner, but many folks on the South Shore are still struggling with their heating bills," said the Rev. Bill Turpie, New North's pastor. "We hope anyone unable to join us at the Sunday service will consider supporting this program by sending a tax-deductible donation to New North Church/Fuel Assistance Effort, 1 Lincoln St., Hingham, MA 02043."

New North is an independent community church that is open to people of all religious backgrounds. Weekly services take place at 10:30 a.m., on Sundays.

'On the job' support group

"On the Job," a support group being offered at New North Church in Hingham, is expanding its effort to help people find the best route to their next job.

Over the next six weeks, the program will help jobseekers identify their skills, develop and expand networking contacts, explore how to do "behavior job interviewing" and counsel with individuals who understand the job market in this current downturn.

"We are not just sitting around licking our job loss wounds, we are providing expertise in the form of people who know this job market and can provide insights on focusing your job search," said Rev. Bill Turpie, pastor of New North, who organized the group.

"We realize this is a very tough moment, but there are jobs out there and the challenge is how to find them and present your most appealing self," Turpie said.

The group will be aided by the counsel of Joe McCue, founder of Cue Data Services, Inc., which provides information technology personnel to companies across the country, and Susan Wetzel, who is currently with Partners Health Care and has a background in working with human resource issues.

"On The Job" meets every Monday at New North Church, 1 Lincoln Street, Hingham. Sessions are held in the parlor at the rear of the church from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. Bagels and coffee are provided.

"The church has wifi, so bring your computers to also explore important web tools in the job search process," said Rev. Turpie.

Speaker brings history to life

'Reads Together' hosts Yale professor

By Linda Fechter

Professor David Blight poses with Catherine and John Hogan, who live at 312 North Main St. in the house where John Washington, an escaped slave, spent the last few years of his life. The Hogans found Washington's cane in their attic.

On Thursday night, Feb. 12th, Cohasset was treated to a very special speaker, courtesy of the Cohasset Reads Together Program, presented by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. David Blight, author of the library's 2009 reading selection "A Slave No More," spoke about slavery on a very significant day…it was Feb. 12th, Abraham Lincoln's 200th birthday. From his first words at the microphone, Prof. Blight, endeared himself to the audience and made everyone feel as though he was as much an old friend as he is a Yale Professor and world-renowned historian.

"Today, on Lincoln's Birthday, I will be in Cohasset – 98 percent white and most affluent – to honor the life of one of its own who was neither. John Washington was a former slave who settled in Cohasset long after the Civil War, and is buried in Woodside Cemetery.."

— Excerpt from David W. Blight's Op Ed, The Boston Globe, Feb. 12, 2009.

Blight spoke with a combination of candor, humor and wonderful anecdotes about how he came to possess the two incredible transcripts, which comprise his book.

Blight spoke with a combination of candor, humor and wonderful anecdotes about how he came to possess the two incredible transcripts, which comprise his book. One is of John Washington, an escaped slave who retired to our town in the early 20th century and the other is of another former slave, Wallace Turnage. There were nearly 300 in the audience learning about these remarkable men. It was an audience of all ages, including a Cohasset High AP history class.

"Through his recounting of the remarkable life of John Washington, Professor Blight skillfully illuminated our nation's slave legacy and Civil War. Perhaps more importantly, however, Blight helped us to see that Washington's story is also a coming of age story. How could we not be moved to learn the details of how John Washington fell in love and courted his wife, learned to read, and nurtured spiritual faith within the terrible confines of a slave society. The audience shared a common sense of history and continued discovery of the life of this former slave and Cohasset resident. It truly was the essence of what we've tried to accomplish via the Cohasset Reads Together Program." Jackie Rafferty, Director, Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Prof. Blight, an American History professor at Yale University, had just concluded eight days of continuous media interviews leading up to the celebration of Lincoln's birthday. He went from national news to the stage of Cohasset High School and even declined an invitation to be among the audience at the Lincoln Memorial where President Obama spoke that very morning.

Seemingly, the highlight of the evening for Blight was a discovery made by Catherine and John Hogan, who live at 312 North Main St. in the house where Washington spent the last few years of his life. The Hogans had seen a photograph of Washington and his family that appeared in a Boston Globe article about "A Slave No More." John Hogan recognized the cane in Washington's hand as something he had seen in their attic. The Hogan's brought the cane that night and shared it with Prof. Blight. His excitement over this piece of history was contagious. The historical piece rested against the podium during his talk and gave a little "life" to the story that unfolded.

Professor Blight received a standing ovation, and an open invitation to come back to Cohasset whenever he wants to. He will most likely be found in the Hogan's attic, searching for more treasures belonging to the Cohasset resident who was born a slave in the south and died in this seaside Massachusetts' town as a free man.

SCHOOLS

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

Hello everyone, and welcome back! Hopefully everyone had a great, action-packed February vacation. However, like all great things in life, the vacation ended and school began once again. And, as it usually does, it started right up with the same, tough vigor we endure every day.

With all of the seniors now beginning to hear back from all of their schools, the next question on their minds is: "now how do we pay for it?" Thankfully, Mrs. Lewis and the Guidance department are helping to solve this problem. Packets filled with all of the local scholarships were mailed home this week. For some scholarships, you need not even apply, but for the rest, all applications are to be submitted to the Guidance Office NO LATER than Tuesday, March 31st.

Special congratulations to English department head, Dr. Wands, who tied the knot with his fiancée, Wendy, on Valentine's Day this past week. Also, the Drama club is competing in the State Festival this Saturday for their production of "Crimes of the Heart", a play written by Beth Henley. Best of luck to all of those in the cast and crew on Saturday!

Tickets for the Mr. Skipper Pageant on March 13th go on sale beginning next week! In past years, there have seldom been any tickets left at the door, so it would be in one's best interest to reserve a seat ahead of time. With only 460 seats in available to see the best and brightest (and generally most good-looking) of the CHS boys, you don't need me to tell you that those seats will go fast.

Congrats to the wrestling and Sci-Coh swim teams that finished their seasons this past weekend with great standings in the state tournament. And good luck to the hockey team and both basketball teams who played great games this week and continue on into the tournament! And with that, I leave you all to a wonderful weekend! Until next week, sayonara!

COHASSET CHAMBER OF COMMERCE NAMES OFFICERS

COURTESY PHOTO

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is gearing up for another big year! The membership is growing and the agenda is ambitious. New officers are in place to lead the group in 2009. Darilynn Evans, second from left, steps up as President, replacing Frank Campbell who has served the Chamber well and continues as an active board member. Karen Kirkendall, far left, takes on the role of Secretary. Lisa Hewitt, second from right, returns as Treasurer and Matthew Cunningham, far right, joins the group as Vice President. Stay tuned for details about future Chamber activities. To learn more, go to cohassetchamberofcommerce.org.

Touring diversity exhibit coming to Cohasset

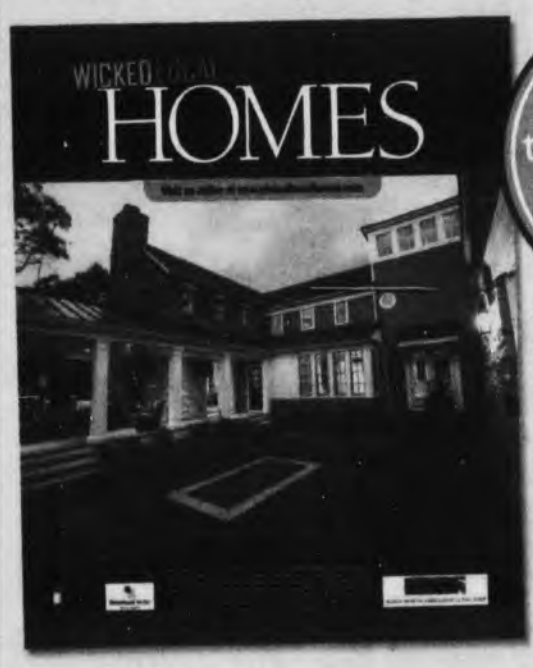
This exhibit contributes to the process of dismantling the destructive power of prejudice and intolerance, thus making the world a safer place for all people.

At a time in history when people continue to fight for basic human rights including the right to legally marry, the right to lead a Boy Scout troop, the right to have access to partner health benefits and the right to be adoptive and foster parents, "Love Makes a Family: Portraits of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender People and their Families" helps cut through all the political arguments right to the heart of the issue by showing the love, caring and connection that are so basic to all families. By allowing viewers to come face-to-face with GLBT people, "Love Makes a Family" makes visible the love and caring in these families. This exhibit contributes to the process of dismantling the destructive power of prejudice and intolerance, thus making the world a safer place for all people.

An exhibition of "Love Makes a Family: Portraits of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender People and their Families," a touring photo-text display created by the award-winning Family Diversity Projects of Amherst, is scheduled to be featured at First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset. The exhibit will be displayed in the Parish House at 23 North Main St., across from the common.

The exhibit will be open to the public on the following dates: Friday, March 6, 3 to 5 p.m.; Saturday, March 7, noon to 3 p.m.; Sunday, March 8, noon to 3 p.m.; Friday, March 13, 3 to 5 p.m.; Saturday, March 14, noon to 3 p.m.; and Sunday, March 15, noon to 3 p.m.

Photographs by Gigi Kaeser depict a variety of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender people and their families of all races in familiar family settings. The photos are accompanied by text edited by Peggy Gillespie from in-depth interviews she conducted with each family member – including children like Liza – who speak candidly about their lives, their relationships and the ways in which they cope with the realities of prejudice, bias and intolerance on a day-to-day basis.



Family Diversity Projects of Amherst, a nonprofit educational organization, created Love Makes a Family as a way of helping to combat homophobia. Since it began touring in 1996, the exhibit has traveled to more than 1,000 communities. Ten copies of "Love Makes a Family" tour nationwide throughout the year to universities, schools, public libraries, corporate headquarters, state houses and houses of worship, supporting the grassroots efforts. "Love Makes a Family" is also available in a coffee table book published by the University of Massachusetts Press.

Internet browsers can view images, interviews, and other information about the "Love Makes a Family" exhibit and book at the Web site at family-div.org.

— CITIZEN OF THE YEAR —

I painted this watercolor on September 11th,
from the comforting familiarity of the Yacht Club, where I went to escape from the broadcast images of terror and destruction in New York City.
The warm sun of that glorious fall day, and the tranquil water with boats bobbing safely on their moorings, conveyed a sense of security and peace, a confirmation that there will continue to be beauty in the world, that we can find places of peace. . . safe harbors.

unteer efforts for Rosie's Place led to her selection as the Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year.

Taffy Nothnagle, 36 Atlantic Ave., points out in her nomination that JoAnne's creative side as an artist reflects her deep love of Cohasset.

"Her landscape paintings and house portraits are cherished my many residents and are truly a gift to our town," Nothnagle says.

Angie Kelly, 43 Forest Ave., put it best in her nomination describing JoAnne's efforts for Rosie's Place.

"JoAnne coordinates over 50 people to prepare meatloaves, vegetables and desserts," says Kelly. "She gathers all the food in her home, then delivers and serves the food to the women at Rosie's.

"She does this all with no fanfare," Kelly says.

The Citizen of the Year selection committee consisting of Martha Hurtig, Wayne Sawchuk, Mimi White, Sarah Murphy, Agnes McCann and David Farrag, all of Cohasset, joined editor Mary Ford at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday afternoon to pore over the 15 nominations submitted by dozens of individuals. The Citizen of the Year is an annual award started by the Cohasset Mariner in 1993; the Mariner solicits nominations through a form printed in the paper over six weeks every winter.

JoAnne, who hails from Cleveland Heights, Ohio, decided to remain in New England after graduating from Smith. She married Woody in 1969. JoAnne, who was working at Houghton Mifflin, recalls she and Woody were looking for a place near public transportation. Woody's boss lived in Cohasset and when they saw the town their minds were made up. They bought the house at 98 South Main St., overlooking Jacob's Meadow, where they have lived ever since.

"We gave up being near public transportation but it was well worth that," JoAnne recalls. She said last summer on the drive back to Cohasset after a trip, they both said: "boy, are we glad we live here."

The Chitticks have raised three children in town. Their daughter, Juliana and her husband Can Tiryaki live in town with Aydin, 2-1/2, the Chitticks' first grandchild. Juliana is expecting another son in May.

The Chitticks' son, Ben, lives in London, and their daughter Chloe Patton and her husband Andy live in Chicago.

Those who know JoAnne's artwork might be surprised that she has not always been a watercolorist. Some years ago when she "connected" with the South Shore Art, she took a course in watercolors and quickly says; "I am still learning."

About Rosie's Place:

Since 1974 poor and homeless women have found an oasis of hope and nourishment at Rosie's Place. The mission of Rosie's Place is to help women maintain their dignity, seek opportunity and find security in their lives.

Rosie's Place serves women as young as 18 and as old as 80. Approximately one-third of its guests have children.

Rosie's Place continues to rely solely on the enthusiasm of its volunteers and the generous support of individuals, foundations, and corporations. Rosie's Place does not accept funding from the city, state or federal governments or the United Way. Eighty-seven cents of every dollar raised goes directly to services for women and their children.

Source: Rosie's Place

She has donated her "Safe Harbor" print, which she painted on 9-11, to a number of organizations including Wellspring, the Multiple Sclerosis Society, Father Bills, the PSO, Cohasset Education Foundation and South Shore Art Center.

Regarding her service to Rosie's Place, JoAnne recalls being inspired to get involved after hearing a local, Cohasset volunteer explain the program.

For about the past 20 years (she has been involved for 30), JoAnne has coordinated the 50 local cooks who sign up to prepare meatloaf, vegetables or dessert once a month for 10 months a year. She loads all the food into her car, drives to Boston, unloads the food and then helps serve the guests at Rosie's Place.

Lucia Woods said in her nomination that the effort has been a real "labor of love."

"For one person to have chaired this for so long is indicative of JoAnne's generous, loving spirit and concern for others less fortunate," Woods wrote.

JoAnne points out while the menu is always the same: meatloaf, vegetables and dessert – the Cohasset cooks add their own special touches. She said Cohasset is known at Rosie's Place for its great desserts.

JoAnne said volunteering at Rosie's Place gives one the realization that homelessness and poverty could happen to anyone at any time. Some of the guests at Rosie's Place are residents there while others are families that cannot afford to put food on the table.

When the Cohasset cooks take a break over the summer months, she asks them for a donation to cover the cost of those two dinners. With any leftover money and other donations, she makes Christmas gift bags full of personal care items for the 20 or so women in the overnight program at Rosie's. She also painted the Rosie's Place holiday card twice for the organization's annual fundraiser.

JoAnne has also painted scenes of Holly Hill Farm for note cards hoping to raise money for what she describes as a "Cohasset treasure."

Although truly honored by the Citizen of the Year recognition, JoAnne is modest about her contributions.

"All small efforts," she says. "But if I can help in this way – at least it's something."

Some of JoAnne Chittick's watercolor paintings on display in her studio.

Many fine citizens nominated for annual award

The Cohasset Mariner received 15 nominations from literally dozens of individuals for the annual Citizen of the Year Award. A selection committee consisting of Martha Hurtig, Wayne Sawchuk, Agnes McCann, David Farrag, Sarah Murphy, and Mimi White, all of Cohasset, joined editor Mary Ford in poring over the nominations at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday and selected JoAnne Chittick of 98 South Main St. for the annual award.

The selection committee met at the Cohasset Mariner office on a recent Sunday afternoon to pore over the nominations and reach a decision.

The decision was unanimous, although not reached without considerable discussion about all the other very deserving candidates including:

- Steve Bobo for his contributions to Cohasset including his Health Notes weekly column and work with the Cohasset Historical Society, Board of Health, Lightkeepers, Stormwater Committee, Congregational Church, and Cohasset Student Center for Coastal Research.
- CPT Stephen G. Bowen, Cohasset native, and astronaut, for being a role model to so many; and for his recent 15-eay mission on the Space Shuttle Endeavor.
- Bill Burnett, an all around great guy, who has put Cohasset on the map with the annual Triathlon and for organizing a mini-triathlon for the first-annual Cohasset Day last September.
- Joseph Campbell for selflessly putting in thousands of hours coaching and mentoring Cohasset children in basketball, baseball, and most importantly, life. With the support of Peter Roy, Atlantica, the Old Salt House and Cohasset Harbor Inn, he never turns away a request to host a fundraiser or awards dinner for numerous local sports teams. He has also provided employment for dozens of high school and college kids every summer and mentors the students on how they should conduct and present themselves in a professional work setting.
- Anne Marie Goff for remembering deployed troops through care packages that she coordinates and sends; for always lending a helping hand in events like the Relay For Life and for being a wonderful mother, teacher and friend to all.
- Dr. Steven Golden for his kindness, sensitivity and compassion; for his service as the school doctor at CHS and at local sporting events; for his dedication to his patients of all ages.
- Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan "The Greenbush Guys" who have the unenviable task of being involved in the town's most complicated and delicate projects, including Greenbush, Little Harbor sewer, Forest Ave. sidewalk and many others. They have negotiated on the town's behalf and fought for the town's best interests.
- Patty Johnson for making life better for many seniors through the Angel Food Project through which she plans a menu and with the help of volunteers cooks delicious and nutritious senior lunches; and for always finding the time in a very cheerful way to be there for everyone who needs her.
- Joseph Nedrow for his work with the schools, church, Council on Elder Affairs, and other good works, and for the great pride he takes in the Town of Cohasset which is evident in all his volunteer efforts.
- Kathleen O'Malley for her enthusiastic and energetic service as president of the Cohasset Historical Society where she continues to demonstrate leadership and for her interest in projects that make people comfortable in working with her.
- Dr. Fawn Stephenson, a veterinarian who goes beyond the call of duty, comforting families, taking animals home so she can care for them through the night. She thinks "outside the box" and has elevated veterinarian care on the South Shore.
- Hamilton Tewksbury for his deep love for Cohasset, for his service on the Govt. Island Study Committee, historical commission, Council on Elder Affairs and other boards and helping to obtain the Fresnel lens for the Minot Light Replica.
- Gary Vanderweil for his extensive, valuable and selfless contributions to the town over many years including service as a selectman and sewer commissioner; his leadership in bringing a refurbished and enhanced Alumni Field to fruition; his involvement on the Cohasset Conservation Trust and Cohasset Land Trust, and much more.
- Thomas Wigmore, who is the driving force behind the Sons of the American Legion in Cohasset. For years, he has placed flags on all veteran's graves in all the cemeteries in town. He has also brought the Healing Field display to Cohasset and decorates the memorial squares for the 22 Cohasset men honored.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
FEB. 23, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Try to say as little as possible about the work you're doing through the end of the month. Then you can make your announcement and accept your well-deserved plaudits.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You face a more difficult challenge than you expected. But with that strong Taurean determination, you should be able to deal with it successfully by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Before you act on your "feelings" about that upcoming decision, it might be wise to do a little fact-checking first. You could be very much surprised by what you don't find.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A recent workplace success can open some doors that were previously closed to you. On a personal level, expect to receive some important news from a longtime friend and colleague.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Put your wounded pride aside and do what you must to heal that misunderstanding before it takes a potentially irreversible turn and leaves you regretting the loss of a good friend.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) One way to kick a less-than-active social life into high gear or rebuild an outdated Rolodex file is to throw one of your well-organized get-togethers for friends and associates.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Getting out of an obligation you didn't really want to take on can be tricky. An honest explanation of the circumstances can help. Next time, pay more attention to your usually keen instincts.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Use your Scorpion logic to push for a no-nonsense approach to a perplexing situation. This could help keep present and potential problems from creating more confusion.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A friend's problem might take more time than you want to give. But staying with it once again proves the depth of your Sagittarian friendship and loyalty.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The Sea Goat can benefit from an extra dose of self-confidence to unsettle your detractors, giving you the advantage of putting on a strong presentation of your position.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might want to ask a friend or relative for advice on an ongoing personal matter. But be careful not to give away information you might later wish you had kept secret.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Use the weekend for a creativity break to help restore your spiritual energy. Once that's done, you'll be back and more than ready to tackle whatever challenge you need to face.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

The Best & The Brightest

Braintree Forum, Cohasset Mariner, Duxbury Reporter, Hanover Mariner, The Hingham Journal, Kingston Reporter, Marshfield Mariner, Norwell Mariner, Old Colony Memorial, Pembroke Mariner & Reporter, Scituate Mariner, Wareham Courier, Weymouth News

We know there are many bright, talented and caring young adults in our communities. Coming the week of May 24th, a special section entitled "The Best & The Brightest" will appear in the COHASSET MARINER to celebrate their accomplishments.

Please help us find these remarkable teens and young adults by filling out the nomination form on this page. You can nominate an individual between the ages of 16 and 21 who, you believe, deserves to be honored, whether it be for academic achievement, volunteerism, athletics, artistic acumen or the pursuit of excellence in another field. Here's your opportunity to get involved.

You can bring the form to the Community Newspaper Company office at 182 Standish Ave., Plymouth, MA 02360; mail it to Beth Doyle at the same address; or fax it to 508-591-6601.
Ballots are also available online at www.wickedlocalspecials.com/best/cohasset-mariner.pdf

All entries will be considered by a selection panel. One winner from each town will be interviewed and photographed for inclusion in "The Best & The Brightest," a CNC special section devoted to sharing the stories of these outstanding individuals.

What's happening on the South Shore

FEB. 26 - MAR. 6, 2009

Pedie Gets Two, an oil painting by Hingham artist Vcevy Strekalovsky, will be one of the many paintings available to "Collectors" at South Shore Art Center's winter fundraiser "Off the Wall."

BEST BET

South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset will hold its annual winter fundraiser on Feb. 28 in the Art Center Galleries. Off the Wall will be a fast-paced and exciting evening of art and chance—resulting in "Collectors" going home with an original work of art. Artwork available has been donated by area artists and will be on display the Art Center beginning Feb. 24. The party kicks-off at 7:30 p.m. with DJ entertainment by Rich Dimare. At 8 p.m. The evening also will feature hors d'oeuvres, music and art sales—all to benefit the education and exhibition programs of South Shore Art Center. Collector tickets are $195; guest tickets are also available for $55. Off the Wall reservations can be made by calling the Art Center at 781-383-2787 or by visiting www.ssac.org.

Send your calendar events to: Dorothy Dinsmore, Community Newspaper Company, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050 or by fax 781-837-4543 or e-mail ddinsmore@cnc.com. Listings must be received two to three weeks prior to the event. Color photos are welcome. Mail or e-mail photographs as a jpeg attachment at a resolution of at least 200 and no larger than a 5-inch by 7-inch in size. Visit Town Commons: What's happening on the South Shore on the Web at wickedlocal.com — click on your town — then click the fun, entertainment, arts or calendar tabs.

Belly dancing is for all ages and sizes

KINGSTON – A shimmering sound filled the hall. Nine women danced barefoot across the wood floor, hips swathed in colorful silken scarves hung with thousands of tiny gold and silver coins that jingled as the women swayed with the music.

This is Elena Griffin's belly dancing class. Belly dancing is sinuous and sexy. It makes any woman, regardless of size, appear graceful and feel sexy, but Griffin is careful about applying the word to this ancient dance. This is not the dancing you see at bachelor parties.

"When I talk about it, I don't use the word sexy because Americans have such weird connotations about that word," Griffin said. "I prefer describing the dance as sinuous."

Anyone can learn to belly dance. Griffin's Tuesday classes at the Reed Community Center include women of all sizes and all abilities. As she led the class through a set of new steps, Griffin encouraged her students.

"We want to feel beautiful, graceful and successful, instead of clumsy and moronic, because we're not," she said as she spun in graceful circles.

Her students appreciate the thought. Lisa and Katherine Wess take the class together. "Elena teaches the class so you can do what you're able to do," mom Lisa said.

For every new move Griffin teaches, she offers suggestions for making them either easier, for new students, or more difficult, for advanced students.

"I want everyone to feel challenged during class, but also I want them to feel graceful and beautiful," Griffin said. "I want them to say 'I can do this.'"

Elena has been teaching belly dancing for 15 years. It's not something she ever thought she'd be doing. She also performs at private parties, but she would resent being called an exotic dancer.

"I'm not one of those," she said. "When people call to book a party, I tell them look, I'm a full-figured woman, and I don't show any skin. I don't do that. The last time someone called, the woman said 'Oh, you're a real woman like us!' Yes, I'm a real woman, and any woman can do this."

Lisa and Katherine love the challenge.

"I can't dance, but I can do this," Katherine said. "It's sexy and awesome, and everyone should do it."

Cate Moon and her friend, Kim Hanna, describe themselves as Griffin's "belly dancing groupies."

"We follow her everywhere," Hanna said.

Griffin's hour-long classes provide a hard but satisfying workout, she said. A few students have lost more than 100 pounds since joining the class.

"It's the best workout for your core," Hanna said. "It doesn't matter what size you are, you'll lose inches off your waist."

It also works the arms, shoulders, legs and rear end. By the end of the hour, most students glow with sweat and puff from exhaustion.

"It teaches you how to use what you have and shows us what real sexy is," Moon said.

Griffin learned to belly dance from an Egyptian teacher. The art has deep roots in the Middle East and North Africa, where "the Oriental dance" was performed in family settings, at weddings and other celebrations, according to one Web site. The costumes associated with the dance, such as the hip scarves and veils, were partly traditional and partly created for film, as audiences in Turkey, Egypt and Saudi Arabia were as enthralled by motion pictures in the 1920s as Americans were.

The coins sewn on the hip scarves come from an older tradition, Griffin said.

"Young women would sew their dowry onto their clothes to let men know how much money they had," she explained. "As they followed the caravans, men could hear the coins jingling from far away, they would know a woman of marriageable age was in the next caravan. They could see the girl's dowry on her clothes and know whether he could afford to marry her."

Griffin accepts new students into her classes anytime. She offers two classes Tuesday evenings through the Kingston Recreation Department. An additional fee of $5 is charged for non-Kingston residents. The current class is halfway through the eight-week session. For more information, contact the Kingston Recreation Department at 781-585-0533 or check the schedule at www.kingstonrec.com.

Young singers croon like old pros

QDT opens season with Mixed Emotions

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

The seven singers who make up Mixed Emotions may still be in high school, but they exhibited the talent and poise of seasoned performers last Friday night when they brought their "One Night Only!" revue to the Canoe Club in West Bridgewater as the first offering of the Quincy Dinner Theatre's 2009 season.

Local theater audiences will have to wait until July for "Jersey Boys," the 2006 Tony Award winner for Best Musical, to finally make it to Boston, but in the meantime Mixed Emotions offered a preview, opening their concert with several of Frankie Valli and The Four Seasons' 29 Top 40 hits including "Can't Take My Eyes Off of You," "Big Girls Don't Cry," "Sherry," and "Who Loves You." Channeling Valli's trademark falsetto, Quincy's Stephen Markarian got the evening off to a strong start, making clear from the outset that his voice is one of the major assets of Mixed Emotions.

Markarian was joined by Bianca Vitale of Jamaica Plain, Andrew Smith of Marshfield, Sam McGee of West Roxbury, and Caitlin Dutkiewicz, Kelli Neville, and Kiri Cormack, all of Milton. The group's youthful sound was a great match not only for "Jersey Boys," but also for the music of other high-energy Broadway shows of the last decade including "Hairspray," with the girls ably tackling the Tracey Turnblad shout-out "Good Morning, Baltimore," and "Mamma Mia!" where the septet did an Abba-plus-three take on such crowd pleasers as "Dancing Queen," "The Winner Takes It All," and "Thank You for the Music."

Both Markarian and Smith, with winks to the many seniors in their audience, played musical homage to their "good friend" and "old pal," Frank Sinatra, with winning act two solos on "The Best is Yet to Come" and "Fly Me to the Moon." The pair also blended well on the music of Elvis Presley, The Beatles and The Beach Boys.

Throughout the show, the teen-aged vocalists — students of Riverside Theatre Works founding director Marietta Phinney at her Hyde Park Performing Arts Centre — exuded charm and confidence, not to mention maturity beyond their years, as they worked the room singling out delighted patrons for special attention and even a dance.

Mixed Emotions will appear at Radisson Hotel in Plymouth on March 18 and at La Scala Restaurant in Randolph on April 10. For booking or more information on Mixed Emotions contact Marietta Phinney 617-364-2517. Director/Producer: Marietta Phinney Vocal Director: Liane Grasso Choreographer: PJ Terranova Production Manager/Sound Engineer: Pauline E Gilmartin. A demo CD is available. rtwboston.org

Quincy Dinner Theatre will present all new shows by Mixed Emotions in July and November. For more information about those shows and other QDT productions, at the Canoe Club and also Emerald Hall in Braintree, plus a special May 9 performance of "Solid Gold Oldies 2009" at Braintree's Sons of Italy, call 781-843-5862.

Cost of water is on the rise

Rate hike would add about $60 a quarter

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

All the Water Department's upgrading over the past decade is finally catching up with water-rate payers. A growing amount of debt service is necessitating the Water Commission to request a water-rate increase from Town Meeting.

The proposed water rate increase will predominately affect 80 percent of the homes on Cohasset water; the increase will be equal to about $60 per quarter.

While the necessity for a rate increase is not surprising to the Water Commission, it may come as a surprise to the water-rate payers who last approved an increase in 2007.

An increase in expenses by 17 percent, the largest portion coming from a $525,460 jump in additional debt service, is driving the rate increase.

The special legislation that established the Water Department included a stipulation where all rate increases need Town Meeting approval. A majority vote is required to authorize the increase.

The proposed rate increase will affect the connections in Cohasset are on meters less than one-inch size and about 80 percent of Cohasset water users on are the 3/4 or 5/8 meter size. A percentage increase is difficult to give as everyone's water consumption is different, said Water Commission chairman Glenn Pratt, but the impact would be about $60 per quarter.

If the water rate increase is imple-

Pedal power

Additional bike racks possible

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With rumblings of an increase in state gas tax and warmer weather on its way, more people may be inclined to start riding their bikes about town.

To aid in what could become a growing number of bikes on the road and facilitate those already on the road is a plan to add as many as seven grant funded bike racks to be placed strategically about town.

Planning Board member Clark Brewer came before the Board of Selectmen to seek their input and support for a bike rack program. The Metropolitan Area Planning Council has set aside $3000 for Cohasset as part of their regional bike-parking program.

"Maybe bike riding will not just be for pre-driving teens and those trying to

Shuttle bus floated

Seven-mile loop would connect main attractions to train

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Some time in the not so distant future it could be possible to travel from Cohasset to Boston without ever setting foot in the car. Or it could be possible to take public transportation to do grocery shopping at Shaw's supermarket or meet a friend for coffee at French Memories.

Providing a transportation alternative for commuters and residents could be on the horizon. A shuttle bus that would travel a seven-mile loop on Main Street and Route 3A between Beechwood Street and the Cohasset commuter rail station is being sought. The town is submitting an application to the Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO) under the organization's suburban mobility program.

"The concept may be timely with the train station not having pedestrian access and being as far away from residences as possible," said Planning Board member Clark Brewer, who is leading the effort. Brewer was before the Board of Selectmen on Monday night to talk about the proposal. "We're approaching it as conservatively as possible, but potentially could be expanded upon."

"The concept may be timely with the train station not having pedestrian access and being as far away from residences as possible."
— Planning Board member Clark Brewer

The basic concept is to connect the town's major commercial centers (Cohasset Plaza, Shaw's Plaza, the village) and dense residential areas with each other and the MBTA train station.

In cooperation and collaboration with the Economic Development Committee, Brewer is putting together the application to the Boston regional MPO. The application is on an aggressive timetable and many of the details have to be worked out in the next month. The application is due April 2.

The possible stops for the shuttle bus include: Cohasset Station, intersection of the King Street and Forest Avenue, North Main Street ballfields, library, village at Ripley Road, Harborview Apartments/police and fire building, harbor, intersection of Summer Street and S. Main, Beechwood Street and S. Main, Shaw's Plaza, Pond Street, Cohasset Plaza (Stop & Shop). Brewer envisions the route traveling clock-wise.

The intent is to have one shuttle bus that is scheduled to meet the commuter rail during the morning and evening commuter hours (four-hour blocks). Additional service hours or the possibility for a weekend beach bus will be reviewed as part of the application.

In its initial letter from the MPO they were concerned the length of the route may be too long to attract commuters during peak travel times. Brewer was meeting with the representatives from

Cohasset Mariner 'drop box'

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The large, brown drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Snow day Monday

Considering the winter New England has been having, it seems surprising there have been only two snow days this winter. The second snow day came this Monday as nearly of foot of snow was dumped in the early morning hours.

Part of the reason is many of the major snowstorms have occurred on weekend days and gave the DPW the extra hours it needed to dig out the three school buildings and clear the roads for buses.

Zoning map update

In the past two years, Town Meeting has approved various changes to the zoning bylaws from the village zoning amendments to the wind energy facility overlay. For an estimated cost of $3000, the parcel layers of the town's zoning map. The Planning Board is requesting the funding in an article at Annual Town Meeting (March 28). The last time the town updated the zoning district map was 2002. The Water Department updated the map in 2007.

The Selectmen recommended approval of the article in a 4-0 vote (Selectman Paul Carlson was absent).

Lt. Quigley recognized

Police Chief James Hussey and the Board of Selectmen recognized Lieutenant Bill Quigley's quick-thinking efforts that saved an eight-month old baby's life two weeks ago.

On a Friday night, Quigley was organizing the police log as the dispatch desk when the call came in that a baby was choking on South Main. Quigley rushed out, got in his cruiser and was there in less than a minute. His training kicked in and with a few well placed blows to the baby's back the biscuit was dislodged.

"It gave everyone a great feeling, that is the reason we get into this business to help people to save people. We couldn't have had a better outcome," said Hussey.

Quigley was humble, "it sounds cliché but this is what we do. I did what any police officer or firefighter would do."

School building utilization fees

The School Committee is hammering out the final details of a school facility utilization fee schedule. A subcommittee on the issue will meet on Monday night, March 9 at 6:30p.m. The fee schedule will set forth a clear list of how different types of groups will have to pay for the use of the schools' multiple facilities from the high school gymnasium to a Deer Hill classroom to Alumni Field.

The School Committee discussed the draft version of the fee schedule at their regular meeting on Feb. 25; they will revisit the topic on Wed. March 18.

New member for EDC

On Monday night, the Board of Selectmen appointed a new member to the Economic Development Committee. Bill Fitzgerald of 324 North Main St. will bring years of sales background to the committee.

Fitzgerald moved to Cohasset three years ago and grew up next door in Scituate. He has always has an interest in business and liked the tilt the EDC took through Cohasset Day and other efforts. Fitzgerald is currently a sales executive for Dell.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer asked Fitzgerald what would be his priorities for the committee.

"Bringing people to us," said Fitzgerald, adding it drives him nuts how thousands of people flock to Cohasset every summer to attend concerts at the South Shore Music Circus, then turn around and drive away.

The Selectmen approved the appointment in a 4-0 vote (Selectman Paul Carlson was absent).

Subdivision rules

In the last 20 years, the rules and regulations governing subdivision development have never been updated. There isn't even a digital copy of the regulations.

The Planning Board will request from Town Meeting the funding to update the subdivision rules and regulations. At an approximate cost of $7000, a professional consultant will make recommendations rules on how the regulations can be modernized and provide more up to date graphics.

The Selectmen recommended approval of the article in a 4-0 vote (Selectman Paul Carlson was absent).

Inclusionary zoning bylaw pulled

For the second time in as many attempts, a proposed revision to the town's inclusionary zoning bylaw will not go forward to Town Meeting. A significant expansion and revision of the inclusionary zoning bylaw that would set regulations for future development of affordable housing was included in the draft version of the Town Meeting warrant.

The Housing Partnership Committee, along with their consultant, drafted the bylaw. Tom Callahan, co-chairman of the Housing Partnership Committee, said the committee decided to postpone the article based on concerns raised by our consultant. At the 11th hour new information came out of a recent conference about similar inclusionary zoning bylaws in the state.

ATV operator taken in protective custody

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police determined that a 55-year-old Cohasset man operating an ATV (all terrain vehicle) along the side of Route 3A at around 5:30 p.m. on Sunday (March 1) was inebriated.

Police pulled the ATV over near Starbucks. The man produced a license but the ATV was not registered. Further investigation, through police interactions with the man, revealed that he had been consuming alcohol, police said. He was placed in protective custody, which is not an arrest.

He was cited for operating a recreational vehicle along a public way and for driving an unregistered vehicle along a public way.

Chief James Hussey explained that an ATV is not considered a motor vehicle for purposes of the state drunk driving laws.

Traffic stop

A 64-year-old Hull man is being summonsed to court on the charge of operating after license suspension following a traffic stop last week near Route 3A and Pond Street.

An officer in a marked cruiser was on patrol at 11:30 a.m. on Saturday (Feb. 28) monitoring traffic when the officer saw a vehicle with a rejected inspection sticker. A computer check on the plate revealed the registered owner had a suspended license.

The officer pulled the vehicle over, confirmed that the operator was the registered owner, and had the car towed. The man was also cited for an inspection sticker violation.

Deer put down

An officer put down a deer that was suffering after being struck by a car on Sohier Street last week. Chief Hussey said police officers are trained to handle these types of situations and the cruisers are equipped with shotguns, which are used in these cases. The deer was moved to the side of the road where the DPW could pick it up. In some cases an interested party will pick up the deer and have it processed for its venison.

Accidents

• On Wednesday (Feb. 25) at 9:05 a.m., police responded to an accident on Church Street. Police said a 2006 GMC operated by a Plymouth man that was headed north slid sideways into a 2004 Dodge that was parked on the side of the road, causing minor damage to both vehicles. No citations were issued and there were no apparent injuries.

• On Thursday (Feb. 26) at 3:59 p.m. police responded to an accident on Route 3A near Cohasset Plaza. A 2008 Jeep, operated by a Hingham woman, had stopped to turn left, when the Jeep was hit from behind by a 2000 Landrover, operated by a Cohasset man. Both cars pulled off the road. The Cohasset man was cited for following too closely. Neither vehicle was towed and there were no apparent injuries, police said.

Cookie incident

A caller reported that her daughter was selling Girl Scout cookies in front of the Community Center last Wednesday (Feb. 25) when two boys came by, one on a bike and the other on a scooter, took some money and a box of cookies and ran off.

Chief Hussey said a nine-year-old boy and his younger brother had given the girl a $10 bill that she could not change. After they left with the cookies and the money – the girl thought they might have taken an extra $10. The girl had $15 in cash and realized she only had $5 left. "She thought they walked away with $10 of his and $10 of hers," Hussey said.

Police were able to talk to the parents of the youngsters who should be able to work out who had how much money and when, Hussey said.

Pothole

A concerned Beach Street resident called police to have something done about the deep pothole at the end of her driveway and the dead squirrel inside it. Police contacted the DPW and LM Holdings, the contractor doing the water and sewer work in the area.

Building collapse

A concerned police officer took action after driving along Sohier Street and seeing an old barn that was partially collapsed. He saw a person near the barn picking up debris and young children playing in a nearby yard. He walked over to warn the woman and notified the station to assess the situation. The fire department was also called. The area was cordoned off and a local contractor was called into take the barn down safely, police said.

B& E car

A blue Corsica parked on state property off Crocker Lane was broken into and rifled through last month. The car's window was broken. Detectives checked the car out for evidence. The incident was reported at 3:12 p.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 18).

Trees cut

A 53-year-old Cohasset man reported recently that someone has been entering his property and cutting trees. His land runs through the woods and he was seeking advice from police as to how to post no trespassing notices to make it clear that people should not be on his property or cutting his trees.

Check bounced

A customer at a local travel agency, who bounced a $3,000 check, will make good on the check and the business is satisfied, police said. The business said the customer, who had all her travel documents, had initially refused to make good on the check.

BBs shot

• A 61-year-old Cohasset man went to the police station last week to report that someone had fired either BBs or pellets into the siding of his King Street garage. A window was also broken. The investigating officer reported the holes are consistent with either a pellet or BB gun. Police talked to the neighbors and no one in the area appears to own a BB gun. The incident is under investigation.

• A local business on Route 3A asked to see an officer regarding BBs being shot through the front window of the store. Police think this incident may be related to a previous one involving a Route 3A restaurant. The holes are consistent with either a pellet or BB gun. Chief Hussey said pellets are larger and more powerful than BBs. He said police have a potential suspect in the incidents involving the shop and restaurant.

Delivery

A 45-year-old Hull Street woman whose identity was apparently stolen, received a UPS package with $1200 of costume jewelry that she had not ordered from a company called, Jewelry Television.

Apparently the identify thief had her credit card number but the order could only be sent to the billing address.

Police gave the woman an identity theft packet; the incident is under investigation.

Wallet

A 62-year-old Cohasset man turned in a wallet he found at Atlantic Avenue and Whitehead Road. The wallet belongs to an 18-year-old Cohasset teen. His license and debit card were in the wallet, police said.

Black lab

A report of a missing black Labrador retriever ended happily last week when the female dog was reunited with its owner. First, a call came into the station from a concerned resident who had found a black Lab followed later that day with a call from the owner of a black Lab saying this dog was missing.

mented a "typical" quarterly water bill for the use of 1800 cubic feet of water for a one-inch meter size will be $204.94, up from $145.73 under the current rate structure.

Water bills are the sum of three separate and distinct rates — two are fixed and one is based on the amount of water consumed in a given quarter. The proposal is to restructure the two fixed costs.

The "fixed rate tiers" are being restructured and increased. No longer will there be a separate tier for those water users with a 3/4 or 5/8 inch tier. For those homes on the less than one-inch meter size the fixed rate would jump from $37.85 to $94.06 per quarter.

The other fixed rate tiers will increase by 6 percent. If a home already has a one-inch meter, they will not be greatly affected by this restructuring, in fact they may even see a decrease in their bills (if usage stays constant) because of the restructuring of the hydrant fee.

Formerly there was a two-tier hydrant fee for those under one-inch meter size were paying $15 per quarter and those over one-inch were paying $40 meter size. Under the proposed restructuring all water users would pay $18 per quarter.

"Some people will say this snuck up on us, but we've been working on this for 15 years and we know exactly where we are going."
— Glenn Pratt, Water Commission

In 2007, Town Meeting narrowly approved the implementation of a "standby fire service" or hydrant fee and an increase in the variable water rate. Previously to this amendment taxpayers had paid for stand-by fire service through their property taxes every year.

This fee goes toward the maintenance of hydrant pipes and the cost to keep 400,000 gallons reserved in case of emergency every day. In the years leading up to this change, the town had fallen short or not paid at all the roughly $150,000 line item for standby fire service to the Water Department.

The variable water rate based on consumption will remain the same — $5.16 per 100 cubic feet for those using under 2000 cubic feet per quarter and $10.32 per 100 cubic feet for those using over 2000 cubic feet.

The growing amount of debt service, mostly related to recent upgrades to the distribution system, necessitates the water-rate increase. The largest portion of the budget — approximately 85 percent — is consumed by fixed costs, namely debt service and contracting services.

Right now, 18 percent of the fixed charges go toward the fixed charges in the budget. With the proposed fee structure modifications, 25 percent will go toward the fixed costs.

Beginning in 1996, the Water Commission began major work on the water distribution system and treatment plant. Roughly $34 million on spending for water system improvements have been approved by Town Meeting since the late nineties. The result has been roughly half the pipes in the system have been replaced with the funding. Pratt said the next seven or eight years the town will see the highest levels of debt service.

"Some people will say this snuck up on us, but we've been working on this for 15 years and we know exactly where we are going," said Pratt in a phone interview.

If Town Meeting does not approve the water-rate increase, which will likely be a tough sell given the current economic climate, Pratt said the town will have to make up the difference between the revenue and expenses. The Water Department is an "enterprise fund," which means that it is self-sustaining through user fees and does not use money from the town's general fund. However, if there is a shortfall the town's general fund has to make up the difference.

The Water Commission is actively looking for buyers of wholesale water. They were given the authority to pursue contracts at Annual Town Meeting 2007 and would have to come before Town Meeting again for final approval of any water sale.

"It would take some of the burden off existing users," said Water Commissioner John McNabb.

The Water Commission currently has a 20-year contract to supply water to the Linden Ponds development in South Hingham. At full build-out the Commission will provide approximately 306,000 gallons per day to the complex. When the senior housing complex is fully built out the deal will bring $600,000 in revenue annually.

Public hearing is March 17

The Water Department will be holding a Public Hearing at the Water Treatment Plant on Tuesday March 17 at 7:30 p.m. to review the proposed rate increase.

Board of Selectmen response

The Water Commission came before the Board of Selectmen Monday night to discuss the proposed water-rate increase. Although a majority of the Selectmen ultimately recommended approval of the article, there was some discussion over what could be done to lessen the blow for residents.

"I feel uncomfortable asking people to pay more this year," said Selectman Karen Quigley. She asked what were the financial implications if the rate increase was not ratified by Town Meeting.

Pratt said there was little that could be done because the town and the Water Department already agreed to the loans related to the water system improvements and the vast majority of the department's expenses were fixed costs.

"The reality is if we don't vote for it, the town has to lend money for this every year," said Selectman Fred Koed.

Selectman Ted Carr said the town couldn't afford to have the water department put the rest of the town in a poor financial situation.

When the issue came to a vote, three of the selectmen (Carr, Koed, Ralph Dormitzer) supported the article. Quigley abstained from the vote and Selectman Paul Carlson was absent.

the MPO on Thursday to discuss the application and hammer through some of the issues. They asked if it might be more effective to split the routes between peak time commuters and a midday route for shoppers.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said three important questions had to be answered — how much would the service cost the town, how will it be paid for, and how many riders it would need to make it viable.

"I think it is a very valuable service, but is it economically viable?" said Dormitzer. Brewer said at this point in the concept development, he didn't have firm answers for the board.

Practical matters such as insurance, maintenance and storage would need to be worked out.

Selectman Karen Quigley suggested a shuttle might benefit the growing number of transient boaters that come to Cohasset during the summer months.

The intent is to have one shuttle bus that is scheduled to meet the commuter rail during the morning and evening commuter hours.

"We believe there will be economic development benefits, as shoppers and tourists from out of town can take the train to Cohasset and have direct and easy access to our village shops," said Brewer.

stay healthy, it could be for the rest of us," said Brewer. The bike racks would add convenience and security of a bike rack for current and future bike use.

Right now there are several bike racks around town – at Sandy Beach, library and the schools. But, other places where it would seem appropriate for a bike rack are currently lacking. Brewer has targeted seven locations for bike racks: Town Hall/Common, village parking lot, Recreation Center (the Garage), Black Rock Beach, Beechwood Ballpark, North Main ballfields and Sailing Club/harbor.

"For future sustainable alternative transportation having more bike racks is a good idea," said Brewer. He presented a poster-board of several different bike rack styles. Town Manager Bill Griffin suggested a large bike rack for Town Hall/Common to accommodate constant activity on the Common in warmer weather.

The MAPC will only reimburse the cost of the bike racks, the town is responsible for the shipping and installation of them. Racks must be installed on public land.

"Maybe bike riding will not just be for pre-driving teens and those trying to stay healthy, it could be for the rest of us."
— Clark Brewer, Planning Board

The Board of Selectmen was supportive. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the bike racks should include a way to lock up the frame and the front wheel.

"I have noticed a marked increase in adult bike riding (last summer) it was really quite pleasant to see," said Selectman Karen Quigley.

"We're getting a lot for not a lot of money," said Chairman Ted Carr.

Capital advice

Budget committee makes recommendations

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Over the past two months requests for capital items and projects poured in from nearly all town departments. The requests before the Capital Budget Committee totaled more than $1.4 million. After a series of lively debates and hours-long evaluation, the Capital Budget Committee is recommending the town fund $788,000, or 55 percent of the requests.

Topping the list of recommended items are a $360,000 pumper truck for the Fire Department and two new $85,000, 77-passenger school buses.

"Once you have money available, it is amazing the amount of needs that come up," said Steve Gaumer, chair of the Capital Budget Committee, to the Advisory Committee on Tuesday night.

The Capital Budget Committee is an appointed committee that advises the Board of Selectmen, the Advisory Committee and Town Meeting on capital expenditures. They make recommendations, but it is Town Meeting that has the ultimate say. The current crop of capital recommendations will be before Annual Town Meeting on scheduled for Saturday, March 28.

In their recommendations, the committee attempted to balance the immediate needs of the town as far as capital replacement and maintenance with the need to grow the capital stabilization fund for future needs. The capital stabilization fund was created at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting as a mechanism to fund future capital purchases. Previous to the fund's creation capital purchases and maintenance were recommended depending on free cash levels.

"We don't want to see the fund strained," said Gaumer. With that in mind, the Capital Budget Committee came forth with a two-pronged approach. The smaller capital items (all under $50,000) will be paid for in cash directly out of the stabilization fund. The committee is recommending the larger purchases have a cash down payment and the remaining portion be paid for through a financing term that more closely match the item's useful life (see chart for details). For example, the buses will be placed on a four-year financing schedule and the fire truck an eight-year financing term.

The committee's recommendations are dependent on Town Meeting's approval of another article that appropriates an additional $320,000 into the capital stabilization fund. The $320,000 is non-excluded debt roll-off — bonds that have been paid off and the amount is then available for other budgetary uses.

If that additional appropriation is approved by a two-thirds vote, the capital stabilization fund will have approximately $455,000.

All the votes for capital purchases require a two-thirds majority vote of Town Meeting.

The Advisory Committee applauded the Capital Budget Committee for their work in prioritizing this year's capital requests and their continued development of a town-wide long-range capital plan.

"You have organized a huge problem and created a plan," said Sam Wakeman, Advisory Committee chairman.

Capital recommendations

The Capital Budget Committee is recommending the capital expenditures be paid for through both cash payments and financing. The recommendations were made to ensure the capital stabilization fund, which is going into its second year of existence, would not be strained as time goes on. The majority of the items will be paid for in cash, which includes down payments on the larger items (pumper truck, various building upgrades and school buses/SPED van). The committee is recommending the remaining acquisition costs of those big ticket items be financed on a schedule that closely matches the life of the asset.

How the capital stabilization fund works

The capital stabilization fund was created at the Spring Town Meeting as a mechanism to fund future capital purchases. The town authorized a $125,000 transfer from free cash to the stabilization fund and another $125,000 in the roll-off amount from the town's non-excluded debt service schedule for the end of fiscal 2009.

The plan is to put future debt service roll-off into the stabilization fund and use it to maintain and replace the town's capital assets. An article at the upcoming Town Meeting requests voters to transfer $320,000 into the stabilization fund, which is equal to the reduction of non-excluded debt service from fiscal 2008 to fiscal 2010.

Tarantino is new sergeant

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On Monday night, Police Chief James Hussey introduced the department's recently promoted sergeant Christy Tarantino. Tarantino, a 13-year veteran for the Cohasset Police force, officially accepted his new role and title at introduction and pinning ceremony at the Board of Selectmen's meeting Monday night.

Among family, friends and fellow police officers from Cohasset and surrounding towns, Hussey spoke of Tarantino's dedication, experience and strengths.

Tarantino grew up locally in Scituate, attended Scituate High and UMASS Boston. He started his policing career as a part-time officer in Hull and served as an assistant harbormaster in Cohasset during the mid-1990s. He started with the Cohasset Police Department in 1996.

He was certified as a police cyclist, serves as the department's firearms instructor and from 2001 to 2005 held the position of safety officer. Tarantino is also a certified motorcyclist.

"Since I've been here he comes to work everyday. He is someone you can count on and rely on," said Hussey. "He also has great common sense, a key ingredient in this line of work."

A special introduction and pinning ceremony was held Monday for Sgt. Christy Tarantino at the Selectmen's Office. Sgt. Tarantino got his new badge pinned on by his girlfriend, Christine Keenan Tarantino got a standing ovation from the crowded room and congratulations from all the selectmen. His girlfriend Christine Keenan pinned on his new badge and photos were taken.

"I'd like to thank everyone for coming, I appreciate you all being here," said Tarantino.

Tarantino is replacing Sergeant David Cogill, who retired in January. Cogill worked 30-plus years for the Town of Cohasset and will be recognized for his contributions at an upcoming Board of Selectmen's meeting.

Depending on the final budget for the upcoming fiscal year, which begins July 1, 2009, the police department may not be able to hire a replacement to fill Tarantino's patrol officer post.

Registration open for Road Race by the Sea

Register now for the 33rd Annual Cohasset Road Race By The Sea 10K and Fran Coffey Memorial Walk presented by the Cohasset Rotary Club.

For 33 years, Cohasset has been home to one of the most scenic 6.2-mile road racecourses in New England. This year on-line registrations are reaching an all time high, so register now at cohassetroadracebythesea.com to secure your spot at this year's race, which takes place on Sunday, April 5th at 1 p.m.

New for this year…

• On-line registration closes on April 2nd. After that date the registration fee will increase.

• Start mats for our chip timing system are being added this year. This will give runners a more accurate time than in year's past.

• Cash prizes will be awarded to top male/female finishers.

Traditions you can count on…

• Our post race festivities will feature bagels and fruit, in addition to the traditional favorite…hot dogs (check out our online registration to answer the all important question: Do you want mustard on your hot dog?).

• Prizes for the top three male and female finishers in six age categories

• Entertainment by the Armstrong Brothers Band

• And of course you'll want this year's heavyweight long sleeved T-shirt with our eye-catching 2009 logo.

There is also a fantastic family event and fun walk…the Fran Coffey Memorial Walk which starts and ends at Sandy Beach at 10 a.m. that same day. Walkers are encouraged to register on line at roadracebythesea.com

If running or walking is not your idea of fun, then please volunteer and help make the race the best it can be for all of our participants. If you have a group of friends, family or coworkers who would like to help out at registration and on race day, please contact 2009@roadracebythesea.com

Very soon, the snow will be gone and spring will be in the air. So visit roadracebythesea.com and after you register, get out there and start training. This race is like a great bottle of wine…it just keeps getting better with age. Don't miss out! Register now!

CLOCKS, CLOCKS!

Hello Cohasset, how is everyone enjoying the beginning of March? Snow, sun, and a weekend of warm weather, it doesn't get any better, does it? Don't forget to turn your clocks ahead before you go to bed on Saturday night. It will be a little darker in the morning but just think, 7:00 at night and it will start getting dark. Keep looking ahead for Springtime it will be here soon. Until then, enjoy the little things of each day that happen and hope that maybe, that little thing will not be any more snowflakes!

GO BLUE

Way to go to the Cohasset Girls Basketball team as they continue to win and head toward the top! Keep up all of the good thoughts and support as they move ahead in the season!

DEAN'S LIST

Some Cohasset students have been recognized for some accomplishments in school. The first student, Christine Rutledge, has been named Villanova University College of Engineering Dean's List for the 2008 Fall Semester. Christine is a senior majoring in Chemical Engineering.

The University of Findlay announced that Jennifer Roche, an equestrian studies major, was named to the Fall semester dean's list. Jennifer attained a grade point average of at least 3.5 on a 4.0 scale.

DERBY MUSICAL

Derby Academy will stage two performances of the Tony Award-winning musical "Thoroughly Modern Millie" at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 11, and 10:30 a.m. Thursday, March 12.

Our own Myles Garbarini of Cohasset is one of the stars!

Set in the Jazz Age, the show features tap dancing, soft-shoe ensembles and Broadway-caliber acting. The performances will take place in Larson Hall on the Derby Academy campus, 56 Burditt Ave., Hingham.

The community is invited to attend these performances free of charge, but reservations are recommended. Call 781-749-0746, ext. 20, to reserve seats.

MASTER'S

Boston University awarded academic degrees to 1,536 students in January 2009 including Cohasset's Matthew Teague, who received a Master of Science in Computer Science.

LIZ WALKER

Beechwood Congregational Church is honored to have former WBZ anchorwoman, Liz Walker, preach on Sunday, March 22 at the 10 a.m. service. "Jesus' sacrificial love" is the subject of Reverend Liz's dynamic sermon. All are welcome to come hear this special guest.

Show dates are March 13, 14, 20, 21, 27, 28 at 7:30 p.m. and March 15, 22, 29 at 2:00 p.m. at Town Hall. Tickets are $16. Group rates available. Call 617-697-2115 for reservations and information.

ELECTION SUPPER

Calling all candidates for Cohasset Town Offices! The Annual Election Supper, an annual springtime tradition, will be held at the Beechwood Congregational Church on Church Street. Candidates and voters are invited to get together for dinner on Thursday evening, March 26 at 6:30 p.m.. Dinner will include baked chicken breast with supreme sauce, oven roasted potatoes, herbed green beans, Harvard Beets, cranberry sauce, carrots and celery sticks as well as dessert and beverages. Before dinner, all candidates will be introduced. Tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for children. Reserve your tickets by calling 781-383-9131.

'SWEET CHARITY'

Here is a super way to enjoy a quality show during the month of March to help pass the time until Spring. The Cohasset Dramatic Club is pleased to announce it's spring musical, "Sweet Charity." This memorable show tells the story about a down on her luck dance hall girl, Charity Hope Valentine, who's always looking for life's silver lining. Told through such memorable songs as "If My Friends Could See Me Now," "There's Gotta Be Something Better Than This", "I'm a Brass Band" and "Big Spender" to name a few, the original story was brought to life in the late 60's with Gwen Verdon creating the title role of Charity on Broadway. Shirley MacLaine recreated that title role in the movie version of "Sweet Charity" which was released in 1969, receiving 3 Oscar nominations.

It's a toe-tapping, tap dancing, frug of a show that you don't want to miss, so get your tickets now by calling our ticket reservation line at 617-697-2115. Show dates are March 13, 14, 20, 21, 27, 28 at 7:30 p.m. and March 15, 22, 29 at 2:00 p.m. and performances are held at Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium. Ticket reservations can be made now via our ticket reservation line. Tickets are also available at Buttonwood Books, Shaw's Plaza, or at Paperscapes, Cohasset Village. Tickets will also be available for purchase for each performance at the door. The box office opens 1 hour prior to performance. Tickets are general admission at $16 each. The group and/or senior citizen (age 65+) ticket rate is $12. Group reservations can be made by calling the ticket reservation line at 617-852-0091.

'Eat Your Art' offers another serving

By Kathryn Hillman
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Looking for an exciting way to spend a Wednesday night? Well, Eat Your Art, which is an edible art contest, is on March 18, at 6 p.m., and it is open to everyone in the Cohasset community. Over the years there has been some incredible entries, including states, game boards, even clothes. All of this is judged and then, you guessed it, eaten. This reporter was fortunate enough to be able to speak with the woman in charge of the whole event, Ms. Nina Berkowitz, who has been the chair of the Fine Arts Department at Cohasset Middle High School for the last three years.

Ms. Berkowitz started Eat Your Art at Cohasset Middle High School eight years ago. She got the idea at an Art Educators Conference, which she attended years ago. She says that her inspiration for Eat Your Art is that she "loves to make art out on non-traditional material." She also likes to incorporate the whole community in something art related (it is important to note that anyone may participate, regardless of age).

Eat Your Art has been going on for eight years and the number of applications has grown each year. Last year there were more than 75 entries.

Eat Your Art has been going on for eight years and the number of applications has grown each year. Last year there were more than 75 entries.

When asked for some of the more memorable entries, Ms. Berkowitz responded: "Some of my favorites were the wearable ones – like the dresses. One was made of Twizzlers, another out of popcorn. There have been some great replicas of the Mona Lisa made of marzipan, but the one that stands out most is definitely the head made of Spam!"

Eat Your Art will be held on Wednesday, March 18, at 6 p.m. It will be held in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. There is no charge to enter a piece of artwork, but there is a small fee to view the contest. Please contact Ms. Berkowitz if you wish to enter a piece of artwork in the show; all ages are welcome to participate.

'Healing Field' planned for Memorial Day

The Sons of the American Legion is again planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2009 observances.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone.

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657.

Courageous friend would be proud of benefit

Salon is soldier in breast cancer fight

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The name Karen Petrillo is not familiar to most people, but to those who knew her, she was a hero of monumental proportions. She passed away five years ago, this month, from breast cancer. It was a struggle that she endured quietly, with both dignity and courage. She did not consider herself a "victim" of cancer, she was just someone who happened to have it.

Karen was an exceptionally close friend of local business owner, Adrian Morris, who owns LemonLime AVEDA Lifestyle Salon in Cohasset.

"Five years ago Karen came to me and said, "Adrian, I have something to tell you before I tell anyone else," recalls Morris. "She said, "I have two weeks to live and I'm going to live them as if I'm going to live forever."

Ever proud and not wanting to burden anyone, Karen was having trouble meeting financial obligations as she underwent cancer treatment. So Morris gathered a group of close friends and they decided to have a small benefit. That was the beginning of the first annual "cut-a-thon" in Karen's honor. For one full day they would donate 100 percent of the profits to Karen. That "small" event raised almost $19,000. For Morris and his colleagues the outpouring from the local community was overwhelming.

At end of day, Karen didn't want the money. She asked Morris to donate it to other women with cancer in need of help. So he contacted a large national cancer organization to find out where to send the proceeds, but he was told, "no thank you." The foundation would not accept money from an unaccredited event or organization. Morris was disheartened. So Petrillo requested that the money go to women on the South Shore who could not afford the unexpected yet necessary expenses of cancer treatment (i.e. gas money to and from doctor's appointments, cab fare, etc.)

Coincidentally, Morris learned that a client, Rosie Lonborg (wife of former Red Sox player, Jim Lonborg) and two other local women, Pam Ahl and Amy Webber, were starting a small foundation called Learn Live Love cancer outreach organization. Their mission is to provide confidential financial assistance to women and families in New England communities who are affected by a diagnosis of cancer. Learn Live Love is doesn't have any "red tape." It's grass roots and that personifies who Karen was as a person. It was just what she had in mind. She died just five days after that first event. She was 47 years young.

"Adrian truly cares about his community."
— Rosie Lonborg, Learn Live Love

Ronnie Goodwin of Goodwin Graphics created and donated the logo for Learn, Live, Love.

"It's been a privilege to work with Adrian for the last four years," says Lonborg. "It's largely due to Adrian's encouragement and enormous support, that we've been able to lend financial assistance to women and families who deal with the everyday, and sometimes, overlooked expenses of having cancer. Adrian truly cares about his community."

The cut-a-thon continued for a second year and raised more than $35,000. It grew too big for the salon and was moved to the River Club where it's remained ever since. Ellen Mackenzie of the River Club has been extremely supportive of their efforts. Lonborg and Morris have had many opportunities to move the event to another town and make it bigger, but Petrillo wanted to keep it local, so that's what they've done.

Morris is continually amazed at the outpouring of support for something so local, especially with the economy taking a downturn. For example, when Ronnie Goodwin of Goodwin Graphics learned of their need for a logo he created and donated a stunning logo right away. Bob Lussier, a North Shore graphic designer donated a beautiful brochure design. And one of the event's biggest supporters is Mark Tosi, local Cohasset resident and owner of Pastene. Tosi is also a person who quietly does big things to help the efforts of Morris and Learn Live Love. It is through local business owners like these, who truly put mesh their hearts with their wallets and allow this small charity to have a BIG impact.

"Karen Petrillo left my life 5 years ago, but through this event she lives in so many other people's spirits…it's a reflection of her personality and perseverance for life," Morris said. "She'd want everyone to come to this event to have a good time and celebrate life."

Join Adrian Morris and his Lemon Lime Aveda Lifestyle Salon staff as he hosts an evening of hope and remembrance at the fifth annual Karen Petrillo Learn Live Love event on March 14th at the River Club, Border Street in Scituate. The evening includes a fashion show, dinner and dancing and a live and silent auction of incredible items. Doors open at 7 p.m. In lieu of a ticket price, donations will be accepted at the door.

All proceeds from the evening benefit Learn Live Love. Call LemonLime AVEDA Lifestyle Salon at 781-383-6663 for more information.

Creative thinking

A trolley traveling around Cohasset may sound like a stretch.

But in the economic times we are facing, creative ideas, like the ones that Clark Brewer of the Planning Board presented to selectmen this week are needed.

Mr. Brewer also explained plans and potential grants for bicycle racks.

Bicycle racks are something that we can easily get our thoughts around.

For one thing, riding bikes – if traffic and safety rules are followed – is good for us.

The Metropolitan Area Planning Council, a regional organization, has set aside $3,000 for Cohasset as part of its "bike-parking" program.

The money would be used to add bicycle racks around town so cyclists would have convenient places to park in public places.

The trolley proposal would provide a transportation alternative for residents and commuters. The shuttle would travel a seven-mile lop on Main Street and on Route 3A between Beechwood and the commuter rail station.

The trolley plans could be expanded upon, but the intent is to have one shuttle bus that would meet the commuter rail during peak times in the morning and evening.

Cohasseters love their cars as much as their fellow countrymen do across the nation. It will be hard for us to break the habit of wanting to make extra stops or just enjoying the privacy and convenience of hopping into our own motor vehicle and taking off.

But if we turn back the clock — trolleys (the electric kind) – used to run up and down Hingham's Main Street on a regular schedule and even made their way over to Nantasket Beach. Cohasset likely had trolleys too. (We can speak with authority about Hingham because the Hingham Journal, which we also publish, goes back to 1827 and covered the trolleys).

Granted, trolleys – whether in Hingham or other cities and towns – predate the days when every family had at least one automobile.

But times change. In this era, public and individual transportation habits are likely to change too. We have to be concerned about both the environment and our pocketbooks.

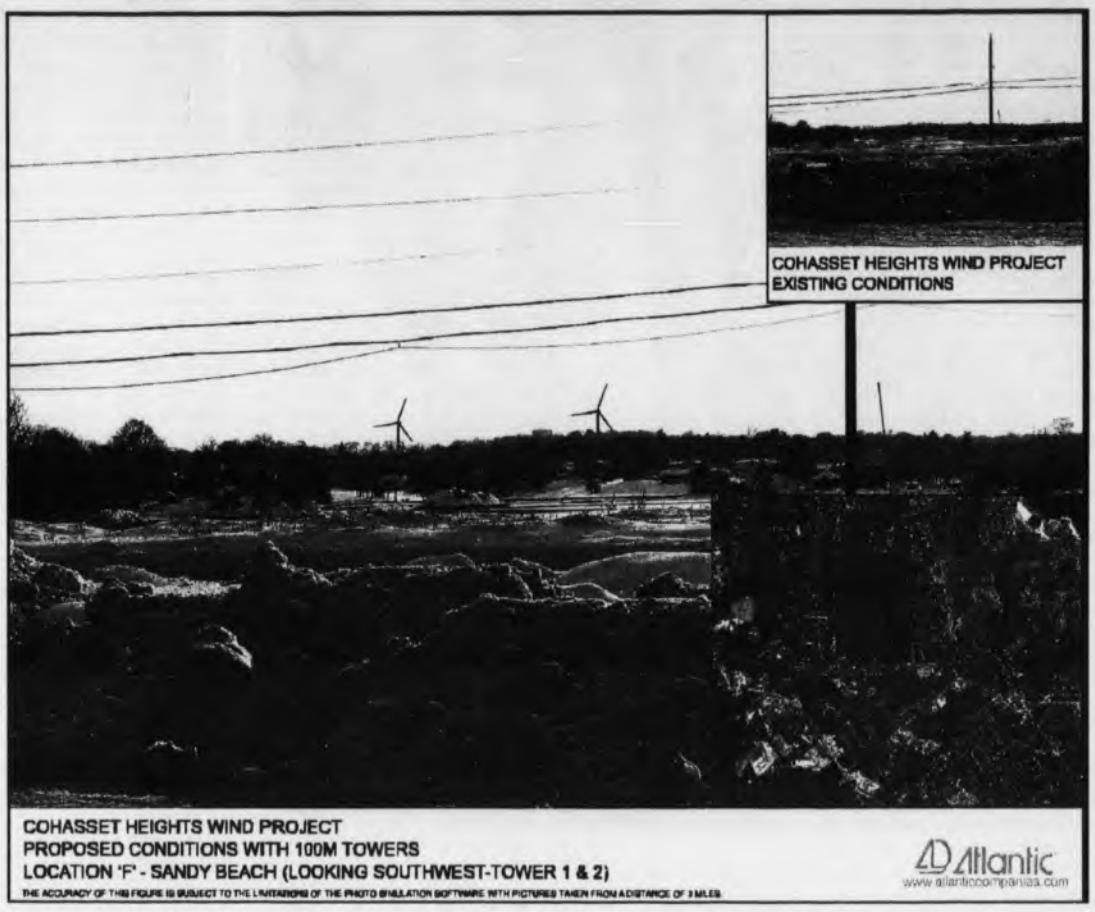
When we head to our Marshfield headquarters on our newspaper production day on Thursdays – we get going early, well before dawn. In recent weeks, we have noticed around the Scituate Rotary several commuters walking to the Greenbush Station at 5:15 a.m., despite the darkness, ice and severe cold. Do they no longer have a car? Are they down to one car in their households? Are they out for the exercise – even though negotiating around the rotary on foot in the dark and ice is dangerous? We don't have the answers.

But one thing is for sure: Creative thinking and positive ideas like bike racks and trolleys are just what we need to keep us moving ahead.

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Advisory Committee, March 10, 7 p.m.
Capital Budget Committee, March 9, 7 p.m.
Conservation Commission, March 19, 7 p.m.
Council on Elder Affairs, March 9 & 10, 9 a.m. at the Senior Center., 3 N. Main St.
Harbor Committee, March 10, 7 p.m.
Historical Commission, March 11, at 7:30 p.m.
Planning Board, March 9, 7 p.m.
Recreation Commission, March 9, 6:30 p.m.
School Improvement April 1 at 2:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Middle High School.
Selectmen, March 9 & 16, 7 p.m., at Town Hall and March 10, 9 a.m. at 3 N. Main St.
School Committee, sub-committee facilities, March 9, 6:30 p.m. at the high school.
Sewer Commission, April 7, 6 p.m.
Water Commission, public hearing on rate increase, March 17, 7:30 p.m. at the King Street plant.
Zoning Board of Appeals, April 7, 7:30 p.m.



All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

Take the shuttle survey!

Do you think the Town should implement a shuttle bus service? Would you use a shuttle bus to get to and from the train station? To the village? To the harbor?

The town is seeking input from residents. Go to the town's website homepage – www.townofcohasset.org — to take the survey.

CLARIFICATION

As a point of clarification, here is the wind turbine simulation as it appears in the submitted Planning Board documents. This is how the turbines will look from the Sandy Beach parking lot. In last week's Mariner, the photo simulation of the wind turbines view from Sandy Beach was cropped and did not show the full perspective.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Public or private financing of essential services

TO THE EDITOR:

Last week's Commentary column about wind turbines in Cohasset cited several objections, including that the project was to be a privately funded for-profit enterprise, rather than funded by taxpayers and operated by some local not-for profit authority. That poorly considered objection dilutes or diminishes whatever value the other objections may have.

Well, it is the enterprise and vitality of competitive free enterprise that builds our houses, manufactures our automobiles and other consumer goods, produces and delivers our energy and food, all far more efficiently, reliably and at less cost than if by some government authority. The plight of consumers in the former Soviet Union is an example.

On the other hand, electricity generation and distribution is very capital-intensive, whether the fuel is wind, natural gas, coal or nuclear. Because of their high percentage of unavailability, wind and solar plants have to be backed up almost 100 percent by fossil or nuclear fueled generation, so the enormous capital cost of a system's total generating plant is further inflated. (The first cost and total generating cost of any generating plant can't be considered in isolation; the effect on total system generating cost must be considered. In that light, renewables are not quite the bargain they are imagined to be.)

In the end, the nation's electric generating capacity will be a mix of energy sources, perhaps as much as 20 percent from wind and solar, 10 percent natural gas, and the remainder divided between coal and nuclear, with coal gradually being displaced by nuclear. Whatever the mix, how will the enormous capital cost of new plants to replace old ones and to satisfy the ever-increasing electricity demand (soon to be exacerbated by escalating penetration of electric vehicles) be borne?

In the past, most of our electricity was generated by state-regulated investor-owned utilities, with capital raised by the sale of shares and bonds at the rather low rates of return to investors enabled by the low risk associated by electricity sales prices (rates) that were both regulated and essentially guaranteed. Deregulation has not worked well; it has not resulted in the expected competition, and lack of shielding from risk has greatly inflated the cost of financing new plants. Having thus discouraged investment in new generating plants, we may have to resort to state-owned "authorities." Can we expect them to be as efficiently run as the for-profit enterprises? Can we keep them from becoming a refuge and reward for political appointees? Be careful what you wish for, you may get it!

Support for troops appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank Dunkin' Donuts at 156 King St., Cohasset, for donating a case of coffee for our local soldiers. Also to Brownie Troop #4770, troop leaders Mary St. Sauveur and Barbara Wrenn for donating Girl Scout cookies to our troops.

I try to send out packages to our local soldiers every other month. If anyone has anything they would like to contribute please feel free to contact me.

Why our wind bylaw is flawed

COMMENTARY

SEAN W. MULLANEY

Perhaps more disturbing, however, is the fact that the initial draft of the town's Wind Turbine Bylaw did have reasonable setback requirements, however, these requirements were modified by the Planning Board...

Heather Peracchi's thoughtful commentary in the Cohasset Mariner last week highlighted many of the obvious deficiencies of the Wind Turbine Bylaw under which the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project is being evaluated. The best question, however, posed by Ms. Peracchi's commentary is "How could we the townspeople and our elected officials have let this bylaw pass the way it was written." Let me offer an explanation.

The reason the current iteration of Cohasset's Wind Turbine Bylaw is flawed in many respects is because among the many cooks in the kitchen during the drafting of proposed bylaw was the current proponent, Mr. James Sweeney, president of CCI Energy. As the Boston Globe noted in an article published on Sept. 25, 2008, "Sweeney said the wind turbine project has been in the planning since 2006, and he attended most of the Alternative Energy Committee's discussions as the bylaw was being written. Sweeney is a past chairman of Plymouth's Energy Committee and penned the wind turbine bylaw for his town." It would seem that Mr. Sweeney's participation the in drafting process of Wind Turbine Bylaw was intended to facilitate the approval of this specific project.

Simply put, Mr. Sweeney was lending his "expertise" to the drafting process of the proposed Wind Turbine Bylaw while at the same time he was planning the proposed Cohasset Heights wind turbine project. It should be no surprise, therefore, that our Wind Turbine Bylaw is essentially custom fitted for the proposed project. This is like Dick Cheney allowing Enron to draft federal energy policies. It is also both interesting and ironic in that had Mr. Sweeney proposed the Cohasset Heights project in Plymouth, he would have gotten nowhere as the bylaw that Mr. Sweeney drafted for his town would not allow what he is proposing to do in our town. As was said by a resident of Fairhaven in response to another wind turbine project being pursued by Mr. Sweeney, "You're literally putting them in peoples' back yards. It's already a bylaw. These guys realize that they got you. This project was essentially imagined in someone's mind and the setbacks were framed around this project." Wall repair project back on track

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Jerusalem Road Wall Repair – Work has resumed this week on the Jerusalem Road wall project. The large signboard at the junction of Jerusalem Road and North Main Street has been updated to reflect a potential completion date of March 27th. With the weather delays, one month was just a tad too short to get everything that needed to be done completed. We do hope we will beat the posted 3/27 date.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Asphalt paving saw.

Crew working at the edge of Jerusalem Road.

Now that the main structural component of the contractor's work is completed the road needs to be put back into drivable condition. In fact, in some respects it will be better than before the repair was started. The road will be moved slightly toward the upland side of the road. This will leave a little space on the marsh side of the road for a small walkway. This new walk way will have a guardrail between it and the traffic. And of course, there will be a railing at the edge of the walkway between the pedestrians and the BIG drop-off. It never ceases to amaze us by the large number of walkers and runners who use Jerusalem Road on a daily basis, in all weather, for their daily exercise. Having a safer pedestrian walkway at this section of the road with its curve where visibility is quite limited, should be of great benefit.

This week, LM Holdings began working on the edge of the road so it can be widened. Their first task was to cut the edge of the asphalt road in a smooth line so the dirt bank could be excavated. The photo shows the large gas powered saw that slices through asphalt paving like butter. With its diamond-coated blade it can easily slice six inches deep in one pass. To keep the saw blade from overheating the saw, water is constantly sprayed on the blades cutting edge. So, you will generally see a garden type hose connected to the closest fire hydrant leading to the cutting machine.

After the edge of road is cut, an excavator digs down about two feet so that suitable material can be replaced on which the new road edge will be built. In the second photo a Gradall is removing the surplus dirt and placing it in the truck waiting behind the Gradall. The excess material will be hauled to a storage yard. Good material will be replaced and compressed before paving is laid down.

More Stormwater Clean-Up – As you read in the Cohasset Mariner about what is going on in Town, the topic of stormwater rears its head quite often. The general topics revolve around two main issues: unwanted water in the wrong place (usually resulting in flooding) and storm water pollution. Each of these is currently being tackled by the Town. The stormwater flooding issue is being tackled by the Conservation Commission's leading efforts with the new stormwater by-law and permitting system. The idea being, prevent new construction on one property from increasing the run-off that creates problems on another property.

The Conservation Commission has also taken the lead in getting state grants for the removal of nonpoint source (NPS) pollution. Nonpoint source pollution is pollution in stormwater that does not emanate from a specific source. A primary example of NPS is the general detritus that vehicles give off as they travel over our roads. These can be particulate matter, hydrocarbons or any of the various chemicals that are given off by vehicles. These nasties may drop directly onto the roads or may become airborne and ultimately settle on the ground.

When a storm happens to pass through, it happily picks up all of this dirt from the roads and carries it along with the storm water to our streams, ponds and harbor. Most people would agree that it is a good idea to do what we can to begin to remove this pollution from our stormwater before it gets to its final outfall.

Ta Da, drum roll please! As a result of the Conservation Commission's diligent work, they have received their second Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management's 319 grant specifically for the remediation of NPS around Little Harbor. The Town has hired Norfolk Ram (NR), a civil and environmental engineering firm, to do the design for the devices that will implement this grant.

So, what does all of this mean? NR is in the process of designing and location a series of biotreatment facilities that will use plants and the natural bacteria in the soils to remove particulate matter and some of the chemical pollutants that are fed through them. Essentially, stormwater will be collected from the streets and filtered by these bio-filtering devices, called BMPs. The name BMP stands for Best Management Practice which is actually a list of devices all designed to remove various contaminants from storm water before it travels on to its final resting place.

For this NPS grant, devices will be placed at strategic areas that will be able to treat and clean up storm water that will ultimately end up in Little Harbor. Very shortly we will be announcing the potential siting of the first four BMPs and will be inviting abutters to a meeting at Town Hall to review BMP locations. The input from residents, particularly abutters, is a very important part of this project. We want to avoid the element of surprise among the abutters and want to incorporate their comments and concerns as best we can to make this a good project.

Little Harbor Project – One last item for everyone, starting next week, March 9th, L M Holdings will be working on North Main Street with as many as three crews placing sewer services. Services are the lateral lines that run from the sewer mains to the edge of each property. Needless to say, North Main St. from the Common to Red Gate Lane will be a very busy place. One would be well advised to avoid this area if at all possible.

Hazards of everyday living

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The Journal of the National Cancer Institute reported the other day on a study of the drinking habits of 1.3 million women that concluded as little as one glass of an alcoholic beverage a day can increase their risk of breast, liver and rectal cancer.

This on the heels of another study that clearly indicated that one drink a day for women and two for men helped to ward off heart attacks.

Do you get the feeling that someone is trying to scare us to death?

The National Institute of Health acknowledged that a chemical called bisphenol A that is found in plastic items like baby bottles and CDs has been blamed for breast cancer and is an issue of "some concern."

"The vast majority of exposure is through food and drink, from cans and bottles," said researcher Mike Shelby. "But there could be trace amounts in water and dust. Your cell phone is probably made out of it."

Studies have raised red flags on cell phones before.

Laboratory research in Cleveland has found that the electromagnetic radiation emitted by cell phones have the effect of producing infertility in men, particularly those who carry their instruments in their front pants pockets.

Yet another study found that men eating a single serving of tofu or any other soy based food a day can damage their reproductive systems.

Babies are another target of the fearmongers.

A California study indicated that smearing infant lotions, infant powders and shampoo on babies exposed them to hormone-altering chemicals that could affect his or her developing reproductive system.

The British Medical Journal published a study showing that pregnant women who drink one cup of coffee a day increase the chances of giving birth to an underweight baby likely to develop high blood pressure, diabetes and heart problems later in life.

Kaiser Permanente Center for Health Research in Oregon found that pregnant women who gain more than 40 pounds have twice the risk of delivering babies who will have weight problems for the rest of their lives.

A study by Johns Hopkins University found that minute amounts of arsenic common to all drinking water supplies, produced when minerals break down naturally, may be linked to Type 2 diabetes.

The Center for Health, Environment & Justice in Virginia reports that toxic chemicals given off by a popular vinyl shower lining sold at Wal-Mart and Sears have been linked to liver, lung and reproductive system damage.

Researchers at the National University of Singapore found that habitual use of incense can lead to cancer of sinuses, the tongue and other organs inside the mouth.

And did you know that money can give you the flu?

Researchers at University Hospital in Geneva, Switzerland, found that flu viruses can survive on paper money for up to two weeks, plenty of time for them to spread the flu around among the many people who handle them.

HEALTH NOTES

Managing change: Get used to it!

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The major sources of reliable power are hydro, natural gas, coal and nuclear.

Change is fine and goes on with or without our help. Massive change faces our health-care system. There's a general recognition of the need, for example, to better maintain and perhaps automate health records and diagnostic procedures. Obvious. And the BoH will look and find methods that suit us and try to apply them. We've broadened our e-initiatives and are considering consolidating and combining some activities with nearby towns; reducing staff thereby and possibly saving money. But the current upheaval requires the Town itself take a broader look at the components of change to ensure its own health.

Not in recent memory has so much visible public works activity been going on in Cohasset, a town which, by nature, likes to stay away from active town administration. It's OK to have the Director of Finance maintain the books and the Town Manager know everything that's going on, but we don't hire a large cadre of administrators to manage our activities. We create Boards, Committees or Commissions to assemble groups of citizens having appropriate expertise; they do their thing for one or a combination of three reasons: the need for change; the desire to help or the desire to get something from the Town. And for whatever reason they become inactive; someone decides to remove the names from the Town report and the group becomes history. Organisms change. It's up to us as individual citizens to ensure that our committees, boards and commissions make appropriate decisions to ensure proper governance during these times.

We have an outsize upheaval going on right now. We should be careful about the scope of our analysis of the way we are doing business. We know that widespread loss of jobs and income will necessitate some belt tightening, but what else? We should consider new ideas that are now only dreams by engineers and scientists who will play a large part in giving us the tools to address trends only now beginning to become evident. Consider, for example, the electric car on the drawing boards of every automobile maker in the world. Cars added to the increasing demand for electricity will have an unprecedented impact on the nation's electric distribution system, to the point that even now it is obvious that our National Grid will be unable to provide the terawatts of electricity to drive vehicles planned for the future.

Lets face it, discussions of windmills and alternative sources of energy must be carried out with the understanding that progress or even continuation of our present way of life requires vast amounts of electricity regularly and reliably provided 24 hours a day. Intermittent sources like windmills can only supply a small fraction of our electricity needs, part time.

The major sources of reliable power are hydro, natural gas, coal and nuclear. The latter now supplies 20 percent of the Nation's and 16 percent of the world's electricity. Since it contributes nothing to global warming and no acid rain nuclear energy avoids the health effects of discharges from the chimneys and stacks of fossil fuel plants, especially coal which contains a small amount of radioactive material.

So one of the components of change with which we must become familiar is the acceptance of nuclear energy and the associated benefits of nuclear medicine. In short, the tolerance – no, acceptance and understanding of the existence of a substantial change in attitude about the nuclear presence in our society.

Not only will the world be seeing more use of nuclear power generation, but an increase of medical use of radioactive material. Accepting such a change is a part of the new reality about the balance between hazards and benefits of the peaceful atom. The amounts of radiation to which we are normally exposed from soil, rocks and cosmic radiation have been increased only slightly by its use in medical diagnosis and treatment. Even the effects of the massive releases from the Chernobyl accident were far less than predicted, and Three Mile Island resulted in no additional radiation exposure. Findings which allow us to conclude that as now operated in the US, we can expect no significant change in the amount of radiation exposure we will sustain from the forthcoming certain increases in nuclear power generation in the US.

LIBRARY CORNER

Meet artist Mike DiRado on Sunday

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Movie Matinee – Can't get out at night to see a movie? Come and enjoy a free movie at 11 a.m., on Friday, March 6. This month's selection is "The Russians are Coming." The Russians are here! It's every man for himself! There's really no hurry, however, it turns out they're just as inept as we are. Still it's great fun watching a small New England coastal town turn into a bunch of would-be Paul Reveres attempting to thwart the "red peril." Stars Carl Reiner, Alan Arkin and Eva Marie Saint. Not rated; 125 min.; 1966. Free admission and refreshments provided courtesy of the Friends of the Library. Movie site license sponsored by Friends of the Library and Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

Art Reception – Meet artist Mike DiRado at an opening reception for his show "The Space Between," presented by South Shore Art Center, at Paul Pratt Memorial Library from 5 to 7 p.m., on Sunday, March 8. DiRado, a resident of Scituate and art teacher in the Town of Abington, graduated from Massachusetts College of Art and the Pratt Institute. "The Space Between" will be on display March 1 through April 30. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Monday, Tuesday and Thursday; 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., on Wednesday and Friday; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., on Saturday; and 2 to 5 p.m., on Sunday. The reception is free.

Curb Your Clutter – Get ready for spring with Molly McGowan, The Clutter Coach, who will teach people how to sort through the good, bad and ugly and get a fresh start in one's home. Anyone who is overwhelmed by the clutter and lack of organization in their home can come to hear Molly's tips and suggestions at 7 p.m., on Monday, March 16, The event is free.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "Under the Bombs" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, March 19. Arabic with English subtitles. 98 min. Free admission and free refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Papercutting Lecture – Attend this free lecture on the Art and History of Papercutting presented by Joe Bagley at 7 p.m., on Thursday, March 26. Bagley will display some of his original artwork and give a brief demonstration of this unique art form.

Family Wellness Day – Beat the winter blahs at an open house event from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m., on Sunday, March 29. Talk to health and fitness experts, skin care professionals and massage therapists. Demonstrations, raffles, coupons and special offers will be available. Sponsored by Bella Aesthetics and Healthy Living Magazine.

FOR CHILDREN

Literacy Event – Helping Children Have Success Now, a Community Partnership for Children, will host its sixth annual literacy event at the library at 11 a.m., on Saturday, March 14. Big Ryan Storyteller will perform in the Meeting Room, and crafts will be available in the Story Room. For more information, call Carla Steen at South Shore Community Action Council Inc. at 508-747-7575, ext. 247. The program is for children ages 3 through 6 accompanied by an adult.

Story & Craft – Register online for Story & Craft. The program is for Cohasset residents ages 3 through 6 and is a four-week commitment. It will take place in the Story Room on Thursdays, March 12, 19 and 26, and April 2. Register for either the 10:30 to 11:15 a.m. session or from 1 to 1:45 p.m. Each week a theme will be explored through literature and crafts. Go to the Web site at cohassetlibrary.org, click on Calendar, click on March 12 and choose either the morning or afternoon session, complete the form.

MamaSteph – Performances at 10:30 a.m., on Mondays, March 9, 16 and 30, in the Story Room. All ages and communities are welcome.

Drop-In Story Time – Tuesdays, March 10, 17, 24 and 31. All ages and communities are welcome.

Touring diversity exhibit coming to Cohasset

This exhibit contributes to the process of dismantling the destructive power of prejudice and intolerance, thus making the world a safer place for all people.

At a time in history when people continue to fight for basic human rights including the right to legally marry, the right to lead a Boy Scout troop, the right to have access to partner health benefits and the right to be adoptive and foster parents, "Love Makes a Family: Portraits of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender People and their Families" helps cut through all the political arguments right to the heart of the issue by showing the love, caring and connection that are so basic to all families. By allowing viewers to come face-to-face with GLBT people, "Love Makes a Family" makes visible the love and caring in these families. This exhibit contributes to the process of dismantling the destructive power of prejudice and intolerance, thus making the world a safer place for all people.

An exhibition of "Love Makes a Family: Portraits of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender People and their Families," a touring photo-text display created by the award-winning Family Diversity Projects of Amherst, is scheduled to be featured at First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset. The exhibit will be displayed in the Parish House at 23 North Main St., across from the common.

The exhibit will be open to the public on the following dates: Friday, March 6, 3 to 5 p.m.; Saturday, March 7, noon to 3 p.m.; Sunday, March 8, noon to 3 p.m.; Friday, March 13, 3 to 5 p.m.; Saturday, March 14, noon to 3 p.m.; and Sunday, March 15, noon to 3 p.m.

Photographs by Gigi Kaeser depict a variety of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender people and their families of all races in familiar family settings. The photos are accompanied by text edited by Peggy Gillespie from in-depth interviews she conducted with each family member – including children like Liza – who speak candidly about their lives, their relationships and the ways in which they cope with the realities of prejudice, bias and intolerance on a day-to-day basis.

Family Diversity Projects of Amherst, a nonprofit educational organization, created Love Makes a Family as a way of helping to combat homophobia. Since it began touring in 1996, the exhibit has traveled to more than 1,000 communities. Ten copies of "Love Makes a Family" tour nationwide throughout the year to universities, schools, public libraries, corporate headquarters, state houses and houses of worship, supporting the grassroots efforts. "Love Makes a Family" is also available in a coffee table book published by the University of Massachusetts Press.

Internet browsers can view images, interviews, and other information about the "Love Makes a Family" exhibit and book at the Web site at familydiv.org.

Cat Dam study on Town Meeting Warrant

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cat Dam is a 50-year-old mechanism that limits the tidal flow of water in inner Little Harbor. It is located on Nichols Road.

The issue of Cat Dam is still out there and the town is looking for funding to prepare a set of documents for the Conservation Commission. An article is on the Town Meeting warrant requesting $25,000 to complete engineering and environmental consulting services requested by the Conservation Commission to resolve the operations and management issues associated with the structure.

Cat Dam is a 50-year-old mechanism that limits the tidal flow of water in inner Little Harbor. It is located on Nichols Road. The structure is unique in town in that although it is town-owned it has historically been maintained by the surrounding neighborhood. There are differing opinions within the neighborhood on how much the gates should be allowed to open — some want increased flushing while others say there is enough. The conflict brought the issue before the Board of Selectmen for lengthy and heated debate several times between 2007 and 2008.

Over the winter 2008, a committee put together a proposed schedule for the opening and closing of the dam. The schedule was implemented before the Selectmen approved it. When any change is made to a body of water, the Conservation Commission is obliged to get involved. When the issue came before the Conservation Commission, they issued the town a notice of intent — formal request to the town to provide more information about the dam and its adjacent water bodies. Professional engineering services would be required.

Information about the water quality, monitoring of Little Harbor, and an operations and management schedule are required. The town has two bids both under $25,000.

Opinions on the Board of Selectmen differed on the timing of the notice of intent.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer felt strongly this study was "grossly premature." Citing a Camp, Dresser, McKee study done on inner Little Harbor, Dormitzer said over 70 percent of the nutrients in the water body came from septic systems.

"I do not understand and cannot support this today," said Dormitzer. Once the 485 homes of Little Harbor are on town sewer, there would be a new baseline of data and at that point a study would be appropriate, he said.

"You do it, but you do it when the money is well spent," said Dormitzer.

Selectman Karen Quigley said Dormitzer's points were well taken, but the problem in inner Little Harbor goes beyond the nutrient loading and bacteria count. She said the town was currently in violation of the Wetlands Protection Act.

"I do believe if the town does not deal with this in a timely fashion, it will be taken out of the town's hands," said Quigley.

Chairman Ted Carr suggested they hold off on a recommendation and have a representative from the Conservation Commission come before them to discuss prior to Town Meeting.

Religious traditions can be fun!

Busy schedules, work obligations, family commitments can make for a very hectic week! Families often feel torn between Sunday morning religious education classes and the multitude of other activities that interest youth and adults alike. First Parish UU in Cohasset's Religious Education Committee acknowledges these difficulties and will offer a fun filled family alternative.

Friday, March 13th will be a lucky day as the Religious Education (RE) program will hold its monthly "TGIF Intergenerational RE program" to begin at 6 pm in Trueblood Hall located in the Parish House at 23 North Main St. A simple pasta dinner will be provided along with intergenerational prayer and music. Dinner will be followed by a World Religions Scavenger Hunt where youngsters and their adult companions will need to use their combined knowledge of various religious traditions to solve puzzles and clues hidden throughout the Parish House.

Whether you are single or partnered, whether you have children or not – all are welcome to bring your busy week to a close and start off your weekend in an engaging way with a welcoming, spiritual community. Donations will be welcome in order to cover associated expenses. For more information, contact Jim FitzGerald, Interim Director of Religious Education at (781) 383-1100 or JFitzGerald@first-parishcohasset.org.

Zumba classes offered at American Legion

The fastest growing fitness craze is coming to the American Legion. Joins others to learn some steps from 7 to 8 p.m., on Tuesdays, starting March 10, upstairs at the Legion, 98 Summer St., Cohasset. Cost is $10 per class or $50 for the six-week session.

Zumba is a class full of Latin and exotic music flavors. The routines feature aerobic interval training with a combination of fast and slow rhythms that tone and sculpt the body. It targets areas such as glutes, legs, arms, abs and the heart. It is a mixture of body sculpting movements and easy to follow dance steps. Don't worry, people don't have to know how to dance to Zumba.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on two roll calls from prior legislative sessions. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

VALUES-BASED ETHICS TRAINING (H 2009)

House 17-137, voted mostly along party lines and defeated an amendment to the new rule requiring members, officers and legislative employees to attend an ethics law training program, developed by the House Committee on Personnel and Administration, once during each two-year legislative session. The amendment would require that training for members attempt to incorporate both values-based and rules-based approaches to ethics education. The amendment received the votes of only the Democrat who proposed it and the 16 Republican members. Amendment supporters said that values-based training, preferred by the National Conference of State Legislators, is done in person while rules-based training is impersonal and often done on the Internet. They noted that rules-based training is limited and involves a strict interpretation of ethics laws and rules. They argued that values-based training involves personal discussions, role-play and scenario building that help legislators learn about the applicability of ethics laws and how they not only hypothetically apply to them, but how individual experience may prompt ethical dilemmas. Amendment opponents said that the amendment goes too far and argued that the program design should not mandated by the Legislature but rather left up to House Committee on Personnel and Administration. They noted that they support the overall general new rule requiring members and others to attend an ethics law training program. (A "Yes" vote is for requiring that training for members attempt to incorporate both values-based and rules-based approaches. A "No" vote is against the requirement).

N

RAINY DAY FUND (H 2011)

House 20-133, voted mostly along party lines and defeated an amendment that would require a two-thirds instead of a majority vote of the Legislature in order to spend money from the state's Rainy Day Fund. The fund is a stabilization fund established by the Legislature to ensure that money is put aside in case of an economic downturn. The money can only be spent to make up for revenue shortfalls or federal funding reductions and when events threaten the health, safety or welfare of citizens. Only four Democrats joined the GOP and voted in favor of the amendment. Supporters of the amendment said that the two-thirds requirement would ensure that the money is used only when absolutely necessary. They noted that the higher hurdle would make it difficult to raid the fund unless there is a real emergency and overwhelming legislative support. Amendment opponents said that a two-thirds requirement is too strict and nearly impossible to obtain. They noted that it only takes a majority vote to place money into the fund and argued that it should take the same vote to spend it. (A "Yes" vote is for the two-thirds requirement. A "No" vote is against the two-thirds requirement).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

TAX AMNESTY PROGRAM - A tax amnesty program that waives penalties for taxpayers who voluntarily file an overdue tax return or pay a delinquent tax liability by April 30 is underway. The program, approved by the Legislature and signed by Gov. Patrick, does not waive the tax itself or the interest. Department of Revenue officials estimate that the program could generate up to $20 million. Only the estimated 159,000 taxpayers who receive the special amnesty tax bills are eligible for the program. Supporters say that this program will generate millions of dollars in increased tax revenue that the state can use to balance the budget and fund important programs. They note that the state in 2002 implemented a similar program that raised $173 million. Opponents say that frequent adoption of an amnesty program is counterproductive and becomes something that is expected by taxpayers.

TOLL HIKES - The Mass Turnpike Authority voted to raise the tolls at the Brighton and Weston toll booths by 25 cents (from $1.25 to $1.50) and at the Sumner and Ted Williams tunnels by $2 (from $3.50 to $5.50) effective March 29. On July 1, the cost of the booth tolls would increase another 50 cents to $2 and the tunnel tolls would rise another $1.50 to $7. The increase included a provision requiring the board to "revise or rescind all or a portion of the toll increases upon the Commonwealth enacting legislation which provides dedicated alternative sources of revenue to the Authority." Translation: The estimated $100 million toll hikes would be reduced or repealed if the Legislature approves Gov. Patrick's proposed 19 cent-per-gallon increase to the 23.5-cent-per gallon gas tax.

MORE LEGISLATION PROPOSED - More than 6,000 bills have been filed for consideration in the 2009-2010 session. Here is a look at some:

BAN TEXT MESSAGING - This legislation would ban drivers from text messaging while driving.

DEDUCT LOCAL SCHOOL USER FEES - This proposal would give taxpayers up to a $500 annual tax credit for user fees that they paid to a city or town for their children's participation in sports, academic or other extra curricular activities.

STREET SIGNS - This proposal would require cities and towns to erect street signs on all public roads and to place the name of both streets on signs at all intersections.

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote *President rarely votes

Why our wind bylaw is flawed

FROM WIND, PAGE 8

ma.gov/Pages/FairhavenMA PlanningMin/2008Minutes/.)

The Cohasset Heights wind turbine project has clearly demonstrated that the Cohasset Wind Turbine Bylaw fails to protect the town's interests in two critical areas: height and setback requirements.

The Cohasset Heights wind turbine project has clearly demonstrated that the Cohasset Wind Turbine Bylaw fails to protect the town's interests in two critical areas: height and setback requirements. The absence of reasonable restrictions in these two areas, restrictions which would protect the town's legitimate interests, all work in favor of the current proponent of the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project and against the town's legitimate interests. These deficiencies should be addressed and remedied prior to the approval of any wind turbine projects under the current bylaw.

The Cohasset Wind Turbine Bylaws restriction on height is so tall, 350 feet to the hub of the turbine, as to be absolutely meaningless. The proposed turbines being considered for the Cohasset Heights project are only 328 feet to the hub of the turbine yet they would be the highest wind turbines in all of New England as the blades add an additional 134 feet to the total height of 462 feet. What's the point of a height restriction when it will still accommodate the tallest wind turbines in New England?

The most glaring deficiency in Cohasset's Wind Turbine Bylaw, however, is its setback requirement, or perhaps more accurately, its effective lack thereof. The majority of municipal wind turbine bylaws have set back requirements which require the setback to be, at a minimum, equal to the height of the wind turbine (measured at its highest) to the nearest property line.

For example, the model wind turbine bylaw drafted by the Cape Cod Commission, under a grant from the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative requires the following:

"In addition, the following setbacks shall be observed:

1. In order to ensure public safety and to protect the interests of neighboring property owners, the minimum distance from the base of any wind turbine tower to any property line, dwelling, business or institutional use shall be equal to the total height of structure to the highest point."

These requirements recognize that the interests of public safety, together with the equitable interests of neighboring properties, are best served where the damaged caused by a toppled wind turbine is limited to the property on which the turbine has been sited. The Cohasset Wind Turbine Bylaw ignores this fundamental concept and mandates a setback requirement equal to the height of the wind turbine only when a wind turbine is proposed to be sited in a residential district; in every other district there is simply no minimum requirement. This is patently absurd. The interests of a commercial abutter, and their invited guests, in not having a wind turbine falling on his/her property and damaging his/her property is the same as a residential abutter. The distinction between residential and commercial properties that is embedded in the Cohasset Wind Turbine Bylaw setback requirement is completely artificial, especially when one recognizes that a preschool full of young children could likely be the commercial abutter whose interests are not protected by our town's Wind Turbine Bylaw.

Perhaps more disturbing, however, is the fact that the initial draft of the town's Wind Turbine Bylaw did have reasonable setback requirements, however, these requirements were modified by the Planning Board 26 days before the draft bylaw was presented to Town Meeting. On March 3, 2008, during a sparsely attended Planning Board meeting at which only three of the five members of the Planning Board were present, the Planning Board voted to modify the setback requirements of the draft bylaw by inserting the three words "in residential districts" into the draft bylaw, thereby limiting the application of the setback requirements to wind turbine projects proposed in residential districts. The Cohasset Heights wind turbine project, of course, is sited in a commercially zoned area and therefore the setback requirements, as modified, became inapplicable. It is hard to believe that anyone would have noticed the addition of three simple words to the draft bylaw after months and years of debate.

Not only did this "11th hour" revision intrude upon the legitimate public safety interests of the town, interests of which the Planning Board should be protective, the revision was made in direct response to complaints made by the proponents of the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project that the draft Wind Turbine Bylaw would not accommodate their project without the necessity of obtaining a variance from the proposed setback requirements from the Zoning Board of Appeals.

According to the minutes from the March 3, 2008, meeting of the Planning Board:

"It was noted that the wind turbine that Paul Barry would like to construct on his property on CJC Hwy., is potentially close enough to Hingham Lumber Co. that it could fall on Hingham Lumber property if it fell. Mike Bliss noted that if a proposed wind turbine placement is too close to the lot line, it would have to go to the ZBA for a variance. Paul Barry commented that he sees some of this as obstructionist to what the public really needs which is alternative energy systems to cut energy consumption and costs and promote energy independence for this country and, he would like to see a positive outcome from the CLF. Member Westcott pointed out that this bylaw, as exists at this meeting, addresses all the concerns that have been expressed over the past 12-18 months, recognizing that some sites such as Paul Barry's might have to be addressed before the ZBA."

Notwithstanding the fact that the draft Wind Turbine Bylaw had been debated and discussed for months and years, three members of the Planning Board, two of whom are still serving, decided to accommodate the interests of the proponents in avoiding the necessity of obtaining a variance from the Zoning Board of Appeals by modifying the draft Wind Turbine Bylaw to limit the application of the setback requirements to residential districts. No consideration appears to have been given to the fact that two of the commercial abutters to the proposed site of the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project are the Sunrise Assisted Living Center and the approved residential development known as Avalon Cohasset.

The minutes of the March 3, 2008, Planning Board meeting continue:

"Member Ivimey suggested Section 19.3.3.2 (b) 1, have the wording "in residential districts" inserted after "... any property line" so it would read – "turbine tower to any property line in residential districts, shall be equal..."

Motion: by Member Westcott to recommend approval of this proposed zoning bylaw with the changes presented by Town Counsel and the addition of ...property line "in residential districts" in 19.3.3.2(b)1.

Second: Member Ivimey

Vote: 3-0 motion carries."

The ramifications of the Planning Board's 11th hour revision to the draft Wind Turbine Bylaw at its (three member) meeting on March 3, 2008, are twofold. Firstly, the two current members of the Planning Board who proposed and approved the revision to the setback requirements in specific response to complaints by the proponents of the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project have demonstrated an unambiguous predisposition in favor of the proposed project which should act to disqualify them from evaluating the proposal under the current iteration of the Cohasset Wind Turbine Bylaw. The minutes of the March 3, 2008, Planning Board meeting are unambiguous and display a clear bias in favor of the proponent and surely provides more than adequate legal fodder for anyone who wishes to challenge an approval of the proposed project by the full Planning Board. Simply put, these two members of the Planning Board should recuse themselves if the Planning Board's status as Special Permit Granting Authority is to have any legitimacy under the Wind Turbine Bylaw.

Secondly, and perhaps more importantly, the 11th hour revision to the setback requirements in the Wind Turbine Bylaw that was approved by the Planning Board seriously eroded the protections the Wind Turbine Bylaw should be affording the town. These issues must be addressed by modifying the current Wind Turbine Bylaw, as was suggested by Heather Peracchi. Until such amendments can be considered and evaluated, the approval of any wind turbine project should be denied. There are ample grounds on which the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project can and should be denied.

There have been a number of public hearings on the proposed Cohasset Heights wind turbine project. At each hearing the public has been reminded by the Planning Board that the purpose of the hearing is to evaluate the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project, and is not intended to renew the debate as to whether Cohasset should adopt a Wind Turbine Bylaw. We've been told that the vote to approve the proposed project is theirs, not ours. We've had our chance.

What we didn't know, however, is that the Planning Board had already voted in favor of the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project on March 3, 2008. Our vote on March 29, 2008, in favor of the Wind Turbine Bylaw was unanimously in support of the belief that our elected boards would facilitate the development of alternative energy in consonance with the best interests of the town. We didn't know that the Planning Board had already voted otherwise.

That's how we got here.

Our World is around the corner

More programs, new energy for museum

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Our World is surviving and thriving.

A host of new programming and an influx of energy are taking the children's museum into a new year and a new era.

Coming off the heels of a successful February vacation program where each day had a unique theme, Our World rolls out its late winter programming which includes classes for infants up to 11 years old which begin this week.

Jen Piepenbrink, Our World's program coordinator, said the museum has grown considerably over the last year both in memberships and programs offered.

"We're very proud of where we are right now and we just want Our World to keep growing…we want to take it to the next level," said Piepenbrink. Our World Global Discovery Museum is located at 100 Sohier Street, in the rear of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The Our World staff, Piepenbrink, Julie Laugelle (museum director) and Emily Cheverie (coordinator), has been reaching out to different groups and organizations to find out what void Our World could fill in the community.

"We're always looking for new ideas," said Piepenbrink.

Word of mouth is helping Our World grow its numbers, "so many people are hearing from their friends that we're here and it is opening us up to surrounding towns."

Residents from Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate, Hingham and, yes, Cohasset, too, are getting involved in the programs and using the museum as a space to play.

"We have so many people come in and say, 'we never knew you were here,'" said Piepenbrink, "we tell them 'we're here and we're having a blast!"

Program Director Jen Piepenbrink finds papier-mâché mask making a bit messy but fun with from left, Ronan Baynes,7, Jonathan Tulio, 5, and Conrad Badka,3.

The two-floor museum has three rooms, each targeted towards different ages. In that way, Our World has something to offer for every family with kids.

The Children's Global Discovery Museum, Inc. was formally organized in November 2001 as a non-profit organization to create educational awareness.

Each Friday night Our World welcomes kids ages two and up to "Creative Night," a chance for kids to come to the museum for dinner, games, crafts and a movie.

Local talents have found a home at Our World teaching skills from music to cooking to drama to kids of all ages.

The museum is regularly rented out for birthday parties, themed parties, teen programs and even baby showers, "just let us know and we can usually accommodate it," said Piepenbrink. "It's just a fun place to be."

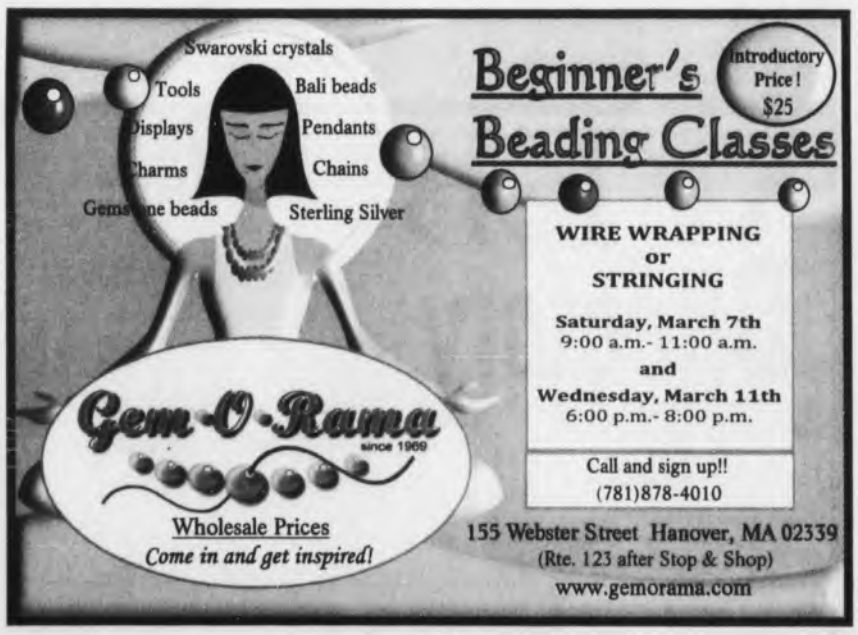
More family-oriented programs are on the horizon as well. Sunday afternoon events and summer "Fabulous Fridays" will cater to the entire family.

"We love the fact families can come, get together and enjoy this space, that's why it's here," said Piepenbrink.

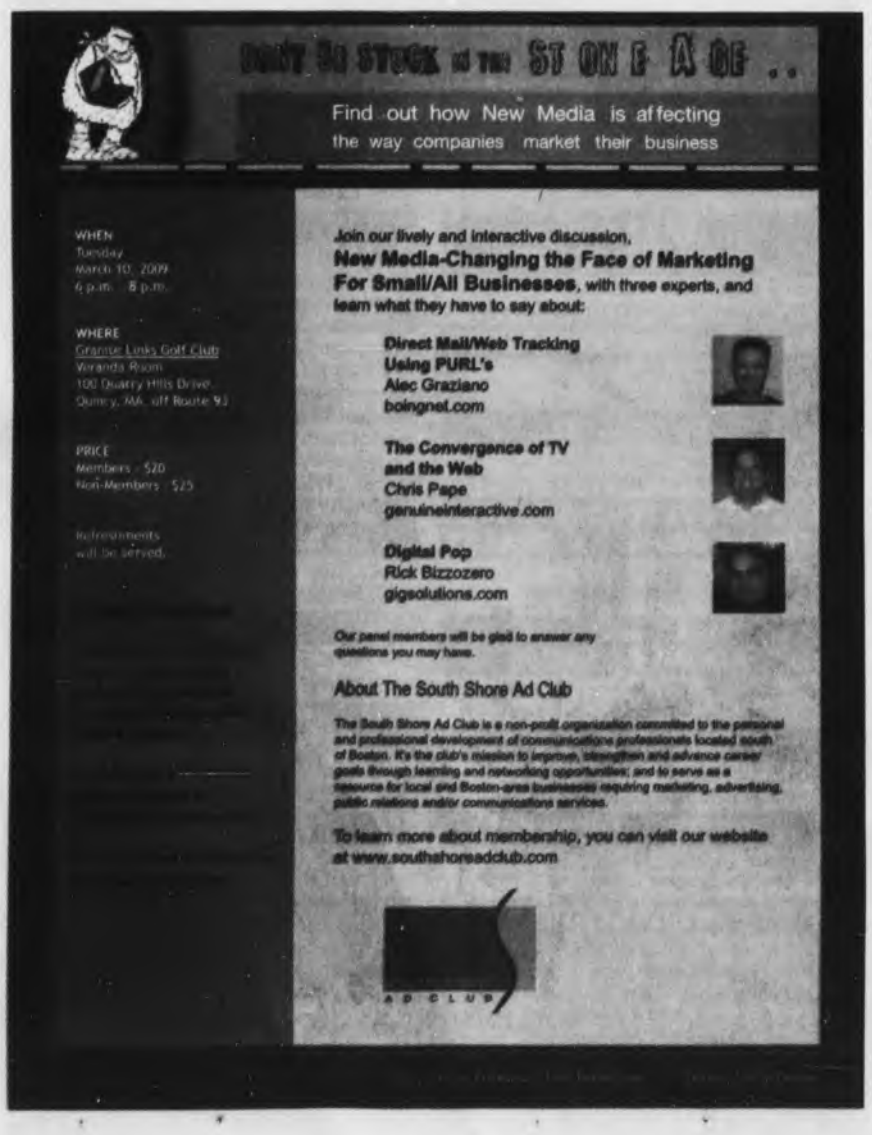
Despite the success of programs and growing membership meeting the day-to-day expenses of the museum is a challenge.

"The day-to-day costs definitely builds," said Piepenbrink. Especially between the three almost full time staff persons, supplies and building costs. To that end, Our World will be hosting an "Estate Sale" the first weekend in April (April 3, 4 and 5). From now until then, they are accepting donations of all kinds of treasures that need a new home.

There are still more future plans for the Our World Global Diversity children's museum. The second level of the museum houses the centerpiece of the museum, an exhibit created by the World Wildlife Fund. Our World purchased the Biodiversity 911 exhibit from the World Wildlife Fund.



"We're hearing from people that it was great, but it has run its course and they are ready for something new," said Piepenbrink. The staff has already drawn up plans for the space.



The challenge right now is finding a place for the exhibit to go — and finding a way to get it there, "it's heavy, big and expensive."

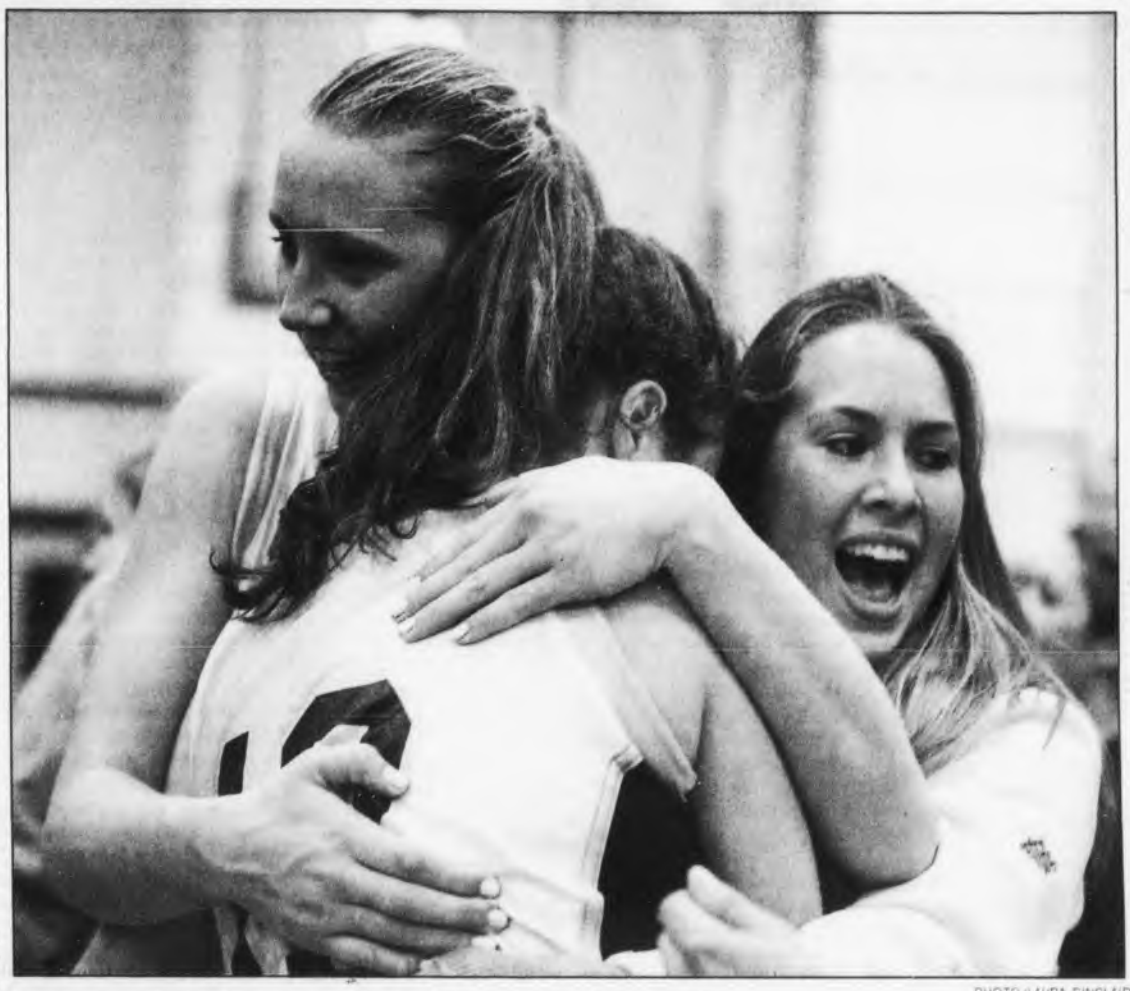
Overtime thriller for Lady Skippers

Girls survive to play in Sectional Finals

By Susan Franklin

For the fourth time this season, Cohasset took the court against Hull at the MIAA Division 4 South Semi-Final hosted at Norwell High School. Top-seeded Cohasset was 3-0 against 13th-seeded Hull during the season, but Hull was a team that had given the Skippers some of their toughest games this season. And they did it again with Cohasset pulling it out in overtime 58-48.



Like the last contest Hull came out in a man-to-man defense and immediately forced a turnover, took the ball down the other end and swished a three-pointer. With Cohasset in a full court trapping press and Hull double teaming the point guard, the pressure and game pace was intense. Hull was playing like they had nothing to lose, while the defending champion Skippers had a case of early game jitters. Three minutes into play Hull had a 9-5 lead.

Hull switched to a tightly packed zone, double and triple teaming Cohasset and suffocating their inside game. Forced to shoot outside, Cohasset began to throw up the long ball but their shots were off.

Coming in off the bench, Samantha Crough put up a 3-pointer that missed long but she followed her shot and put in the basket. Offensively, Hull continued to attack the paint, driving the lane, intent on drawing fouls and putting Cohasset players in foul trouble. With a minute to play, Hull's freshman guard drew a foul on the baseline and made both shots from the line. Seconds later, Hull iced a 3-pointer. Cohasset called a timeout with 43 seconds to play in the quarter with the score 16-9. Defensively, Hull was a force to reckon with. Tripled teamed under the hoop, Sammi Lehr could not get the handle on the ball and Hull took it the other way. A loose ball on an errant shot ended up in Hull hands, and an easy layup put the Pirates out front 18-9 at the buzzer.

Hull came out in a zone in the second quarter, and the plan was to triple team the Lehr sisters. Cohasset would have to get hot from the outside to counter the plan. The long ball failed to fall but good offensive rebounding by Kayla Farren and Sammi Lehr kept Cohasset alive on offensive. Hull on the hand continued to shoot the long ball successfully. With the score 21-11 in favor of Hull, Sammi Lehr pulled down a rebound in traffic and drilled an overhead pass to Meredith Kelly who went one-on-one against the Hull defended and beat her.

Down by 10 with four minutes to play, Cohasset put some fresh legs on the floor, but a questionable foul call kept the momentum in Hull's favor and pushed the score to 25-13. Nothing Cohasset shot, including free throws was going in and Hull was playing next to flawlessly. Down by the largest deficit of the season, Cohasset could not establish a grove. However, with seconds left to play in the half, Cohasset put together a play reminiscent of the plays they made all season. Tori Lehr burst out of the fray under the Hull hoop and exploded up the middle of the court, drawing two Hull defenders before dishing off to Samantha Crough who iced the short corner. The teams retreated to the locker room with the score 15-27.

Cohasset came out and obviously left their jitters in the locker room. In the opening seconds, Carly Salerno iced an outside shot. Great defense forced a Hull turnover and Tori Lehr put in a 3-pointer. With no answer from Hull, the lead was cut down to 27-20. Hull continued to drive the lane with wild abandon tossing up shots and hoping to draw fouls. With five minutes remaining in the third quarter, Sammi Lehr was fouled under the basket and put in both shots from the charity stripe.

With the score now 30-22, Hull's shooting seemed to be cooling down but Cohasset failed to get defensive rebounds. Hull got a three point conversion on a drive to the hoop that drew a foul against Sammi Lehr, but that would be their last points of the quarter. Hull had been breaking Cohasset's press with the dribble, so Cohasset relaxed its trap, gaining an extra step on defense. Next time Hull tried to slice through the press, they lost control of the ball, and Rachel Fredey came up with it, taking it in for a layup. Seconds later

Most underrated teammate: Justin Yeager. He's a tough wrestler and I think he has a lot of potential in these next few years. I wouldn't be surprised to see him on the podium at states soon.
Mike finished the season 28-7 and was the Division 3 South Sectional champion at 160.
He followed that by finishing fourth at the Division 3 State Tournament and then won a match at the All-State tournament last weekend.
"I thought he had a tremendous season," Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said. "He's very athletic. That has helped him become an accomplished wrestler. He missed half of last season with an injury. He had to double his workouts to have a successful senior season. He did and was also a team captain with great leader-

Clock strikes midnight for CHS

Cohasset skaters ousted in bid for third straight upset

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The clock finally ran out on the Cinderella Skippers last Friday night. After two stunning wins over much higher seeded rivals, the 22nd seeded CHS skaters simply ran out of time against third seeded Blue Hills, 6-3.

"We had a great run," asserted Skippers coach Bob Walsh. "And we had our chance against Blue Hills too. The game was a lot closer then the final score indicated. In the end, though, they just had the final answer to everything we threw at them."

The Skippers, who graduate just four seniors this spring, never led in Friday's quarterfinals showdown at Babson College battled, but battled back twice to tie it up before the Warriors (19-3) finally pulled away.

The Skippers were put quickly behind the eight ball, surrendering a pair of goals before the game was two minutes old.

Though young in years, the Skippers are an experienced team when it comes to playing catch-up hockey, and that experience showed as they rallied to answer those two early tallies.

Junior Conor Queenan broke the ice for the locals with a pretty finish off feeds from senior Paul Pozniak and defenseman Eric Bartucca at the nine-minute mark.

Bittersweet ending for Skipper boys

Season ends with tournament loss to rival Hull

It was almost a Cinderella story, but it ended too quickly. The Cohasset Boys basketball team finished the 2008-2009 season last Thursday against Hull in the first round of the Division 4 State Tournament in a heart-breakingly sad two-point loss in the final seconds to their SSL rivals.

Still, six months ago, there were few in the basketball community who thought the Skippers would have a winning record, much less qualify for postseason play. Enter new Cohasset Head Coach Bo Ruggiero. The architect of several successful basketball programs and a Hall of Fame coach, Coach Ruggiero laid the groundwork for what turned out to be one of the best feel good sports' stories in Cohasset this year.

The Skippers finished the season 15-8, sweeping for the first time in memory South Shore league opponents Carver, East Bridgewater, Harwich, and Norwell as well as non league Marian High School.

Rachel did it again, stepping in between oncoming Hull players to steal the ball. Her layup popped out but Tori Lehr was there to put in the rebound. Next possession, Cohasset patiently worked the ball around for a shot against Hull's tightly packed zone. With four seconds on the clock, Tori Lehr hit Lindsay Davis stepping up to the top of the circle and she iced the hoop. The quarter ended with the score 35-29 in favor of Hull, but Cohasset had posted 14 points to Hull's nine.

Samantha Crough caught fire in the fourth quarter, dropping in two quick baskets. Lindsay Davis joined in and sunk another. With five minutes left to play, Cohasset had outscored Hull 21-10 and was one-point from taking the lead for the first time all game. Patient on offense, Cohasset moved the ball around, and with seconds on the shot clock, Lindsay Davis drilled another from the top of the key. Cohasset's lead was short lived as Hull roared back to put in a layup on a second shot. But Samantha Crough drew a non-shooting foul and calmly put in both shots from the line. The lead went back to Cohasset but Hull could not miss. With two minutes in the game Hull held the lead at 45-41. Cohasset finally got the ball inside to Sammi Lehr who took it up against three defenders to score. Hull missed their next attack on the basket. Cohasset came up with the rebound and found Tori Lehr who shook the defender with a jump stop and put it in.

Tied at 45-45, Hull called a timeout, and although their play ran as planned, the shooter missed the layup. Cohasset's attempt to pull out front was unsuccessful, as Samantha Crough's shot went in and out. With possession, Hull pushed it up court where Sammi Lehr accidently bumped into the ball handler putting her on the line for a 1-and-1 bit she missed. Cohasset got the rebound and called a timeout. They came in and worked their play, getting the ball into Sammi Lehr whose turnaround jumper went off after the game clock expired.

Cohasset won the tip in the four minute overtime and found Sammi Lehr underneath for two. Cohasset had a 47-45 lead with two and half minutes to play. With six seconds on the shot clock, they missed the long ball but Sammi Lehr skied for the rebound and put in the follow up. Hull got inside on the next play but missed the layup. Tori Lehr came up with it and was vigorously defended by Hull. She ended up on the foul line where she iced both shots of the 1-and-1 putting Cohasset out front 51-45 with 1:41 to play. On the inbound play, Cohasset threw the long pass to a cutting Sammi Lehr who put in the hoop. Hull banked in a 3-pointer and the score was 53-48. Wasting no time, Cohasset again found Sammi Lehr sprinting behind the Hull press and she brought the score to 55-48. Another 3-pointer by Hull did not fall and Tori Lehr came up with the rebound and was again closed in upon by Hull. She went to the line and hit the front end of the 1-and-1. Forced to foul, Hull put Lindsay Davis on the line, where she too hit one out of two. With 18 seconds to play, Sammi Lehr stepped up to the line giving Cohasset a ten point lead and the win 58-48.

An excited Cohasset bench spilled on to the floor to greet the players. Both of these teams should be commended, and grateful fans from both towns acknowledged players. "They are a special team", said Coach John Levangie.

Sammi Lehr took top scoring honors for the Lady Skippers with 18 points. She also grabbed 8 rebounds. Tori Lehr contributed 12 points (including a 3-pointer) and pulled down an impressive 16 rebounds. Samantha Crough tallied 11 points (including two 3-pointers), and was joined by Lindsay Davis who also had two 3-pointers in her 9 point performance. Carly Salerno dropped in 4 points and Meredith Kelly and Rachel Fredey each had 2 points.

The Lady Skippers travel to Braintree on Friday to play No. 11 seed Millis in the Division South 4 Final for a repeat of last's years Division 4 Final.

Cohasset took the game last year 52-40.

Millis brings a big fan base so we need our Superfans to turn out in force. We will provide a Super Fan bus that will leave CHS at 5:00 pm on Friday. Email Mr. Ford or sign up school on Thursday or Friday to be on the bus. Super Fan t-shirts will be on sale at CHS the next 2 days for $10. I have also attached a sign to distribute and post around school and town and there are directions to Braintree below. See you Friday night.

The Skippers split games with Mashpee (the loss coming on a buzzer beater put back), Nantucket (overtime loss by 1), Hull and Lynnfield.

The only team to beat them twice was periennial league champion, Abington, who will play in the Division 3 South Sectional final this weekend.

The story began the Monday after Thanksgiving when the first practice started and Coach Ruggiero implemented his program for success. Six days a week for 2 fi hours a day, the boys practiced. The key to success was going to be discipline, team work, hard work and conditioning. Blessed with several athletes and just a few basketball players, Coach Ruggiero began to figure out the strengths and weaknesses of the team. Size was a weakness, with only two players with any considerable size. But what the team did have was speed. The fast break became an instrumental part of the strategy. Conditioning was also critical, as much of the varsity roster was young. The top of the rotation was going to have to be in shape to execute well over the 32 minutes of every game.

Leading the Skippers was two time South Shore League All Star, Senior Tri Captain Danny Martin. At 6'6" Martin was a force in the paint with a variety of shots in his arsenal. He also proved himself at the free throw line, particularly late in games. He led the team in rebounds and blocked shots, providing many memorable moments for the Cohasset fans.

Senior Tri Captain John Sturino was the steadiest, most consistent player on the squad. Sturino, with his blazing speed completed many, many fast breaks for the Skippers. As the Skippers began the second round of league games, some opposing teams had figured out the fastbreak, so Sturino pulled out his jump shot, hitting nothing but net from the elbow, the baseline or just inside the free throw line.

Senior Tri Captain Marcus Charles played like he was 7-feet tall.

Not afraid to drive underneath and draw the foul, but also a pure shooter from the outside, Charles was a force. Most memorable was his fourth quarter performance against Norwell, where his lightening fast hands stole the ball from the Clippers and gave Cohasset the lead.

Senior Owen Landon came off the bench with high energy. When an opponent needed shutting down, it was Landon who was on him, no matter the opponent's size. Landon was tenacious. He smothered people and denied them the ball. Not only a key defensive weapon for the Skippers, Landon could also be seen driving the lane or taking an outside jumper, showing everyone his versatile skills on the floor.

Cohasset's other big man was Junior Johnny Maher. At 6'3" he worked in tandem with Martin on the boards for Cohasset. He was second on the team in rebounds, averaging double digits. Maher saw the entire floor and initiated the fast break off the glass. Maher's quickness, for a big guy, was also critical in the press as he stole the ball several times.

Sophomore Robert Jones, a South Shore League All Star Selection, ran the offense with the maturity of senior. Jones is one of, if not, the premier point guards in the SSL. Truly a triple threat, Jones can hit the 3, pull up for a jumper, lay it in or dish it off. His passing dazzled the fans and befuddled the other teams. He always found the open man, and consequently he led the team in assists.

Next in the rotation for the Skippers was Freshman Robbie Mahoney. Mahoney came in relief to either Martin or Maher and played beyond expectations. As Coach Ruggiero commented in the preseason "to think Robbie was an 8th grade travel player last year and now he is on the Varsity team". Mahoney played big when the team needed him to.

Rounding out the Skippers are Juniors Jeff Charles, Kevin O'Connell, Sophomores Mike Monaco, Jack Carrier, Sam Richardson and freshman Kyrel Jaundoo who will all play important roles for the 2009-2010 Skippers.

Coach Ruggiero commented "Although losing in the first round of the tournament was difficult, I couldn't be more pleased with the season we had. I told the boys after that game that they should be proud of themselves, that they over-achieved what many thought they were capable of. Together the whole is truly greater than the parts". He continued " The boys worked hard all season. Our conditioning was excellent. They executed what I asked of them. Don't get me wrong, we had some trying moments. At times I felt more like Dr. Phil than Coach Ruggiero, but that comes with the territory ! We worked hard. The boys felt, maybe for the first time, proud of the themselves, proud of each other and proud of the team. They looked like a team and they acted like a team."

Coach Ruggiero was assisted by Dick Lawless, Jim Willis and Jim Rougvie.

Seventh grade hoopsters continue march to the March Madness Dance

Cohasset's seventh grade boys Patriot League Travel Basketball Team returned from their annual February break in grand style, winning three of four as the Boys in Blue continued their push to qualify for the Patriot Conference's own March Madness.

On February 21st, the Cohasset Hoopsters squared off against Hanson, at Hanson's gym. The Boys in Blue came out of the gate quick, as their full court pressure forced Hanson turnovers. But this was a game for Cohasset's big men to take control - and that they did. Mark Rattenbury and Liam "Sir Charles" Burke keyed the first half attack with their relentless inside play, with Rattenbury scoring 10 in the first half, and Burke 6, as Cohasset raced out to a 24-15 halftime lead. From there, Mark "the Eraser" Brown took over on the inside, as his rebounding and shot blocking kept Hanson's front line at bay in the second half. Rocco Laugelle's defensive pressure in the back court kept the Hanson guards bottled up, and with Laugelle scoring 7 big second half points, Cohasset cruised to a 41-26 win.

Sunday Feb. 22 saw Cohasset travel to the wind swept north, to take on the boys from Hull.

Tied in the league standings going in, this one looked to be a classic. The Boys in Blue, inspired by the Hoosier-like caravan of fans who braved the windswept Gut, came out firing on all cylinders, and turned in one of their best games of the year. This one was a true team effort - Rattenbury again was a force inside, and together with Joe "Buck" Buckley, dominated the paint. The Cohasset guards were "en fuego", as Doug "the Professor" Fitzgerald, Jack "the Magnet" Conte and and Brendan "the General" O'Connell directed the offense, and played their sweet music from the outside, as each hit big jumpers over the Hull D. Forwards Dakota "D-Train" Achin and Henry "Chopper" Brown got into the act as well, as D-Train netted 8 big points and Chopper 7.

Mark McKenna was terrific at the point, breaking the Hull press with his Curley Neal like dribbling exhibitions. Final score - Cohasset 44, Hull 24.

Saturday February 28th - rematch Saturday, as Hull came to Cohasset determined to reverse the previous week's outcome. And, for a half, they did.....Hull came out hustling, and firing, and Cohasset's shots would not drop. In as ugly a first half as they Boys in Blue have played all year, halftime saw them trailing by 14, as Hull led 24-10. But...with playoff hopes dimming, and the Hull fans on their feet, the Professor stepped forth to teach all a lesson in perseverance and guts.....Early in the second half, with Cohasset's press forcing turnovers, Doug Fitzgerald, like snow falling from a clear blue sky, suddenly began to rain jumpers down on the unsuspecting Hullsters....One from the left side...then another, then a pump fake drive and foul, and two swishes from the free throw stripe. Halfway through the second half, and Cohasset had cut the Hull lead to 6. The gym was now alive, as the Cohasset faithful's roar echoed off the Deer Hill walls....Hull called their time outs, and tried to slow the momentum, but the Professor had been clear with his lesson - the Boys in Blue would not be denied - the press was relentless, and X-Factor Laugelle and the General O'Connell took turns in masterfully distributing the ball from the point.....Henry "Chopper" Brown and Chris "Hoops" Haggerty let Fitzgerald take a break, as both got pistol hot, nailing jumper after jumper in the game's last eight minutes. At the final horn, Cohasset had stormed back for an improbable and thrilling 40-32 win, outscoring Hull 30-8 in the second half.

March came in like a Lion, in the form of the co-leaders of the league - the Big Red from Bridgewater. Back in January, the Boys in Blue had handed Bridgewater one of their only two loses of the year, at their gym to boot, and Bridgewater came in looking to even the score. The game lived up to its billing. Tied 22-22 at half. A one point Bridgewater lead with 1:30 left. Cohasset battled all day, but in the end came up short, as Bridgewater hit a couple of key jumpers in the last minute, and dropped pressure free throws to seal a well earned and hard fought 47-40 win. Still, the effort was supreme, and Cohasset has served notice that it might be a bracket buster come March!

Cohasset now takes an overall record of 13-9 into the last week of the season, with games against Whitman on Wednesday, and two critical clashes over the weekend - an away game at Silver Lake on Saturday night, and a home contest against Pembroke at noon on Sunday - one win, and the Boys in Blue are on to their own Dance - Patriot league March Madness. Go Blue!

Clock strikes midnight

Freshman Alex Evans tied it up three minutes into the second on a great snipe from the mid-slot, beating Blue Hills goalie Dom Scopa 5-hole. The play was set by a great steal by senior Andrew Bell at the blue line and cross-ice feed from sophomore Travers Craven.

It took the Warriors only 90 seconds to answer back with the go-ahead goal, however.

The Skippers top line finally got on the board with 1:16 to go in the middle frame, as sophomore Anders Goetz finished off on sets from junior linemates Brendan Doonan and Andy McKenna, tying the game back up at 3-3.

Blue Hills seized the momentum right back with 32 seconds showing on the clock, though.

"That was obviously a pretty big blow," said Walsh. "It would have been nice to go into the last break even up and with momentum. Usually in those situations I say things like the next goal will be the crucial one, but I just kept my mouth shut. There was so much tension in the room, you could feel it. The kids knew it was do or die."

Unfortunately, it turned out "die".

The Skippers came out playing the desperate style Walsh hoped to see in the third and created several quality bids. However, the Warriors got the break they needed with eight minutes to play and slipped the fifth goal past Cohasset senior Johnny Wade.

This allowed venerable Blue Hills coach Steve Woods to drop his team back into a defensive set.

Cohasset came close a few more times, but an empty-netter with 31 seconds showing finally ended their dream of a trip to the semifinals.

Skippers stun sixth seeded Medway

CANTON- Bob Walsh had to pull all of the tricks out of his coaching bag in Thursday night's second round tourney match-up with heavily favored Medway (12-4-4).

The Cohasset High hockey coach had to make sure his 22nd seeded Skippers (11-9-2) didn't get down after being out-shot 23-2 in the first period by the sixth seeded Mustangs while also keeping their attention enough to change the plans for zone-clearing on the fly.

"There were a few things we had to talk about after the first period," Walsh responded when asked about the locker room mood at the first break. "We have a lot of young players, so there are times they need to be kept grounded. We had to make sure the focus remained upbeat and on the game plan."

Mission accomplished: the Skippers led 20 at the next break. Of course, the longtime coach had to reverse fields at that point, making sure his charges didn't go the opposite way: getting too high. He did so by reminding them there's good reason the old "there's no lead more dangerous than a two-goal lead" adage has stuck around so long.

"I just reminded them all of that really bad loss to Abington," noted Walsh, referring to the two-goal third period lead that turned into a one-goal loss just three weeks ago. "Medway wasn't going to lay down. They're a proud team that won a lot of games, and we wanted to make sure nothing changed with our approach."

Again: message received. The Skippers hung on for a 4-1 win to earn a quarterfinals date this weekend versus third seeded Blue Hills (17-3). The time and place had still not been determined at the time of this writing.

Humility prevented Walsh from taking any bows for his button-pushing prowess.

"The kids played a whale of a game in just about every area," said the Skippers third-year head coach. "(Goalie) Johnny (Wade) is the reason we stayed in it early, and that gave us a chance to get our legs under us and adapt to what Medway was doing."

It became clear to Walsh early on that the Mustangs had scouted the way his Skippers liked to clear their defensive zone by the way they anticipating and picking off passes all over the neutral zone.

Walsh simply drew up a few changes after the first break, keeping his forwards back a bit and giving the nod for puck carriers to carry a little longer, which forced the defense to adjust it's coverage.

With the Skippers finally gaining the red line with some consistency to start the second period, Brendan Doonan finally got himself in a position to do what he does best: snipe. Before the mid-point of the frame, the junior rifled a wrister past the Medway goalie for the game's first score. Sophomore linemate Anders Goetz followed with his own snipe a few minutes later, giving the Skippers a 2-0 lead at the end of two.

Doonan provided the three-goal cushion that generally gets coaches breathing a whole lot easier not long after the final break, but the Mustangs cut their deficit back to two as they finally managed to sneak one past Wade (44 saves) with five minutes to play.

The senior netminder would slam the door shut there, however.

"Johnny had the quote of the night when he told me the puck looked as big as beach balls all night," reported Walsh. "He played like it. He was never flustered right through all the rubber they were throwing at him, especially in the first period. He showed why he was an all-star tonight. When we needed a big game, he came up with it."

The coach did not give the goalie all of the praise for the work at the defensive end, though. He lauded the defenseman for keeping the front of the net clear to provide Wade good looks, and his forwards for their attention to match up responsibilities. He had particular praise for senior checking line leader Andrew Bell.

"Andrew set the tone for us on defense all night" said Walsh. "He was flying all over the place and disrupting things all over the neutral zone. He really made things pretty miserable for the Medway forwards.

Wade's fellow senior captain pounded the final nail into Medway's coffin with an empty- netter inside the final minute.

This was the Skippers second win over a much higher seeded opponent. They topped 11th seeded Avon-Holbrook (11-6-2) in Tuesday's preliminary round match up.

"I said all year long that we had the ability to play anyone tough," said Walsh, whose team squeaked into the playoff spot at 9-9-2 on the strength of a three-game win streak to end the regular season. "We're definitely seeing some things starting to click right now. "The playoffs aren't about having the most wins in the regular season, but which team is hottest when the playoffs start, and right now we're playing good hockey. It's exciting."

Looking ahead to next winter

"It was a great season and a great run, though," said Walsh, who saw his Skippers win five straight do-or-die games to get to this quarterfinals showdown—three regular season must wins over teams they had not beaten previously (Rockland, South Shore Voc and Carver) to get to the magic .500 mark (9-9-2), followed by tourney wins of 8-3 and 4-1, respectively, over 11th seeded Avon and sixth seeded Medway.

"We're going to miss the four seniors we lose," continued the third year coach, "but we've gotten better every year, and I see no reason why that trend shouldn't continue next year. We return a lot of talent. If the guys coming back do everything they say they're going to do in the off season, I'll like out chances to take a big step up next year."

The Skippers will lose goalie Johnny Wade to the caps and gowns, along with top defenseman Ian Lyster, scoring line plugger Paul Pozniak (7-10—17) and checking line leader Andrew bell (3-10—13).

Top returning players include leading scorers Brendan Doonan (16 goals, 15 assists), Anders Goetz (9-21—30), Andy McKenna (12-12—24) and Conor Queenan (14-8—22), and defensemen Brian Scott, Sean McKenna and Eric Bartucca.

Fast emerging sophomore netminder Jack Nelson, who entered this season as a defenseman, will have some big skates to fill, with South Shore League all-star Wade headed off to college.

Cohasset Tennis Club holds Junior Club Championships

The Cohasset Tennis Club held the 2009 Junior Club Championships last weekend.

The Tournament was supervised by Professionals Jason Ronan and Derek Kelly.

Competing in the Under 14 Division were Loring Lauretti, Olivia Eckerson, Maddie Warwick, Gabriele Lemoine, Meredith Spofford, and Trevor Tedeschi.

Competing in the Under 10 Division were David Lemoine, Owen Dewire, and Michael Hill.

All matches were eight game pro sets.

Gabriel Lemoine advanced to the finals with wins over Olivia Eckerson and Loring Lauretti.

Trevor Tedeschi advanced to the finals with wins over Meredith Spofford and Maddie Warwick.

Trevor's steady topspin forehand and heavy serve proved to be too strong and overcame Gabbie Lemoines powerful backhand topspin. Trevor won 8-2 in a match that was closer than the score indicated.

Michael Hill came back from a slow start and trailed David Lemoine 3-6 in the first round and used his big serve to win 8-6. David Lemoine edged Owen Dewire 8-6 with consistent first serves and steady play to setup a showdown between Dewire and Hill in the winner takes all finals. Hill trailed 1-3 and came back with 5 service winners to win the finals 8-5.

Excellent sportsmanship was displayed by all players. Well deserved credit is due to all Cohasset Tennis Club Professionals for their guidance and instruction of these juniors. They include Jason Ronan, Derek Kelly, Linda Karoff, Jaime Kenney, John Nestle, Kathy Turpell, and club owner Bud Schultz.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

Sleepaway/Overnight/Resident Camp Readiness:
HOW TO KNOW WHEN A CHILD'S READY TO GO!

The American Camp Association, New England has compiled a list of things to look for as a parent that will let you know when your child is ready to go to overnight camp. These characteristics are indicators that your child will be prepared to have an enriching and enjoyable summer camp experience.

- Demonstrated interest - Constant talk about overnight camp. Curiosity and questions about resident camp. Outright inquiries about whether or not sleepaway camp is in their future. It is not uncommon for children to be ready to attend overnight camp before their parents or guardians feel ready to let them go.
- Successful overnights away from home- Progressing from one night away with friends or relatives to two or more nights is very empowering for campers-to-be. This way, they know they can be successful sleeping away from home before they leave for camp. Campers find this comforting.
- Delight in group events- Is it increasingly difficult to get your child to stay home?Does your child find it appealing to spend overnights in groups of peers—either at sleepovers or on school or club trips? There's something very fun and appealing about bunking with a group of children and spending concentrated time engaged in fun, educational activities that hold great interest for everyone. This why summer camps exist!
- Boredom with past summer pursuits. If they act bored with the idea of returning, it's time for something new. Resident camp presents a whole new world for a child to discover. Boring it is not! There is not a magical age when resident camp is the right fit for a child's needs and interests.

Attending residential summer camp is one of the most independence-boosting and empowering experiences a child can have. Parents are wise to pay attention to signs of camp readiness and act accordingly!

The 2009 Mr. Skipper contestants include: (front row) Eric Wasel, Adam Berger, and Sean MacCarthy, and (back row) Chris O'Grady, Lennart Brown, Billy Mack, Kevin O'Connell, D.J. Weiss, Paul Pozniak, Matt Brooks, Conor Ofsthun and Ian Porter. The annual event is held as a way to raise funds to help offset senior class activities.

Mr. Skipper tickets won't last long!

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

Hello everyone! Although it was shortened by the wonderful snow day we had on Monday (it took me well over 15 minutes to brush the snow off my car), it has still been a crazy week filled with the typical hype at CHS and oh, what a week it's been!

Mr. Skipper tickets are officially on sale now, so get them while they're hot because they don't last long; $10 a ticket for next Friday's show. In addition for the show on Friday, the drama club will also be putting up a free performance of "Crimes of the Heart", which they performed at last week's Massachusetts Drama Festival. The performance will be on Thursday at 7:30 in the high school auditorium. Although the play did not advance to the semi-finals, it was still a great performance with three of the actresses, Betsy Crawford, Ellie Baumgarten, and I, all winning acting awards for our roles. I challenge the town of Cohasset to fill up the auditorium on Thursday. I have faith in you.

Our girls' basketball team, the defending state champs, played a great game against long-standing rival, Hull this past Wednesday and let me tell you: it was one of the most intense sporting events I've witnessed in a very long time. Everyone is invited to support our girls again tonight and cross your fingers because if all goes well, we'll see them at the TD Banknorth Garden on Monday! Let's see our defending state champs do it again! And with that, I leave you all to a wonderful weekend! Arrivederci!

Drama club on stage Thursday

Warning: This play may make you laugh! Please join the cast and crew of "Crimes of the Heart", a Pulitzer Prize winning play, for a performance on Thursday March 12, at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium. The play, written by Beth Henley, is a dark comedy about the lives and loves of the McGrath sisters, set in the small town of Hazlehurst, Mississippi in 1974.

The play was Cohasset's entry in the Massachusetts High School Theater Guild's annual one act play competition and was honored with three acting awards. There are 460 seats in the Cohasset auditorium. Members of the community turn out for soccer, basketball and lacrosse. This is an opportunity to support the performing arts. Show this amazing cast and crew that the community supports their talent and dedication!

The play features an ensemble cast with Ellie Baumgarten, Betsey Crawford, Lauren Mack, Greta Swachtman, Mark Seraikis and Sean MacCarthy. A small admission charge will go to support the Arts Boosters.Dorothy

'Eat Your Art' event at CMHS

Entering its eighth year, 'Eat your Art' will take place at 6 p.m. March 18, at the Cohasset Middle High School. All entries must be edible. There are two categories to enter in: Original Art and Copies of Famous Art. Art can be created by an individual or may be a collaborative work. Individuals of any age can submit—even adults.

E-mail Nina Berkowitz at nberkowitz@cohassetk12.org with questions or to register.

Kindergarten registration

Kindergarten registration for the 2009-2010 school year takes place daily, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., at Osgood School. Parents will be asked to indicate interest in full-day kindergarten or half-day kindergarten at the time of registration. Parents are encouraged to register early to facilitate planning for the program.

Children who turn 5 on or before Sept. 1, 2009, are eligible to attend kindergarten. A birth certificate and proof of residency are required in order to register.

Call Osgood School at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MARCH 2, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Take time from your busy schedule to check out what's going on around you. You might find that someone has been secretly trying to pull the wool over those beautiful Sheep's eyes.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Once again, the Bovine's boldness pays off in uncovering the source of a disturbing workplace situation. Your personal life calls for patience, as a certain matter plays itself out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Forget about going all out to impress someone in your personal life. Just being yourself is all that matters. A workplace decision will need more time. Don't rush into it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Some supersensitive Crabs might take offense at what they perceive as a slight. But a closer look points to a simple misunderstanding. The weekend holds a welcome surprise.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Sure, you can roar your head off over someone's failure to keep a promise. But the wiser course would be to ask why it happened. Be prepared for an answer that might well surprise you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A developing relationship needs time to find its direction. So please be patient and resist pushing things along. A recently cooled-down workplace situation could heat up again.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Congratulations. Your well-thought-out proposal seems to be working. Someone who hasn't agreed with you on most things in the past could turn out to be one of your major supporters.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Things seem to be going well. However, you can still expect criticism — some of it pretty heavy. But as long as you can back up your position, you'll be able to rise above it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Getting together with people who care for you is a great way to get that ego boost you might feel you need at this time. Things start to look brighter by week's end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You should be able to continue with your plans once you get past those temporary delays. Surprise, surprise. An offer to help comes from a most unlikely source.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Prioritizing your tasks is important this week because of all those demands you have to deal with. The pressure eases in time for you to enjoy the weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Save your energy and stay focused on what has to be done, despite all those distractions you're likely to face. You should see some evidence of real progress by week's end.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are a generous, giving person who is always ready, willing and more than able to help others in need.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

OBITUARIES

Francis C. Collins

An avid boater and fisherman

Francis Chase Collins, 78, of Cohasset, died March 1, 2009 in Florida.

He was a graduate of The Boston Latin School, Harvard College and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Mr. Collins was commissioned into the U.S. Navy in 1952 and finished flight school but preferred to serve as C.I.C. Officer aboard the USS Columbus and also as Flag Liaison Officer for Admiral Arleigh Burke to the ports of France.

As class president at Boston Latin School his peers assigned to him a quote from von Schiller, "Whoever is foremost leads the herd." Within the family, he more modestly described himself as "the benevolent dictator."

Mr. Collins and his wife Peggy made their home in Cohasset for 53 years. An avid boater and fisherman, he was a longtime and valued member of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Following a career with Proctor and Gamble, Polaroid, and Ocean Spray Cranberry Co., they retired to Hutchinson's Island, Fla., where they received and refreshed their children and grandchildren for many happy years.

Francis "Fran" Collins

In addition to his wife Margaret "Peggy"(McDonough), he leaves his daughter Dr. Kathryn Collins-Wooley and her husband L. Christopher of Cohasset; three sons F. Noel and his wife Dana of Cohasset, Christopher and his wife Yani of Annandale, Va. and Myles and his wife Anne of Westwood and eight grandchildren: Mareth, Myles R., Ross, Olivia, Elizabeth, Myles X. (Max), Chase and Samuel. He also leaves his sister Claire and brother-in-law Thomas O'Donnell of Rockport, and Marco Island Fla.; his brother-in-law Karl Lundgren, a sister-in-law, Joanne Cavallini, and many nieces and nephews.

Memorial services and interment will be held in Cohasset at a later date.

Donations in his memory may be made to The Aspergers Association of New England, 85 Main St., Watertown, MA 02472.

Celeste Churchill

Former Cohasset resident, avid golfer

Celeste Churchill, 88, of Port St. Lucie, Fla., formerly of Cohasset, died Feb. 23, 2009 one day short of her 89th birthday.

Born in Biltmore, N.C. daughter of James C. McAleer and Celeste (Rothe), she grew up in Los Angeles, Calif. and attended the University of Southern California, married Thomas G. Churchill Jr. of Cohasset. When her new husband was deployed with Patten's Third Army to Europe, Mrs. Churchill remained in Cohasset until his return three years later.

She was the past president of the Cohasset Garden Club. She was an avid golfer and a member of the Cohasset Golf Club.

After the death of her husband in 1988, Mrs. Churchill moved to Venice, Fla., continuing her passion for golf and bridge, and was a member of the Capri Isle Golf Club. Mrs. Churchill was an avid volunteer logging in over 4,000 hours at Venice Hospital and enjoyed painting. Several years later she moved to Port St. Lucie. Her energy and never ending sense of humor will be greatly missed.

Wife of the late Thomas Churchill, she leaves her children Thomas G. Churchill III of James Island, S.C., Richard S. Churchill and his wife Christine of Quincy, Jo Ann Maitland and her husband Frank of Stuart, Fla.; her grandchildren, Robert, Sara, Richard Churchill; Stephanie and Will Golinveaux and great-grandchildren Matthew and Annabelle of Pleasant Hill, Calif. She was the grandmother of the late Buck Hubbell.

Celeste Churchill

A celebration of her life will be held in Cohasset, in the summer.

Donations may be made in her memory to the Treasure Coast Hospice. 1201 SE Indian St., Stuart, FL 34997

Constance Merritt

Former hostess at Red Lion

Constance "Connie" Merritt, 86, of Bradenton, Fla., formerly of Scituate, died Feb. 21, 2009, at her home.

Mrs. Merritt was a graduate of Cohasset High School and Burdett College. She was a hostess at the Red Lion for 40 years, and volunteered at Scituate Senior Center. She enjoyed quilting and painting.

Wife of the late Percival "Cappy" Merritt, she leaves her daughter, Judith Turner and her husband, Michael, of Florida; her granddaughter, Shannon Cruz and her husband, Joel; her great-grandchildren, Dylan and Matthew; and many close friends.

She was the mother of the late Ronald A. Merritt.

A memorial service was held at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Scituate. Interment private. Arrangements were handled by Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home, Scituate.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to Scituate Animal Shelter, 61 Driftway, Scituate, MA 02066.

WORSHIP NOTES

Irish Social Night planned at St. Anthony Parish

St. Anthony Parish, 129 Main St., will host its 12th annual Beef & Blarney Irish Social Night on Saturday, March 14. Featured entertainment will be Irish Band The O'Reilly's and the Nevin School of Irish Step Dancing, with chef Paul Guinee and crew cooking. A social hour will start at 6 p.m., followed by a sit-down dinner or corned beef, cabbage and all the fixings at 7 p.m., at the Parish Center.

Price is $35 per couple, $20 per person and $15 for seniors age 65 and older. A limited number of tickets are still available. To purchase tickets, call the parish office at 781-383-0219.

Interfaith Seder at Sha'aray Shalom

The 13th annual South Shore Interfaith Seder – With a Chocolate Twist – will be celebrated at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in Hingham from 3 to 5 p.m., on Sunday, March 22.

Passover commands that every generation retell the story, each in his or her own way. This year's service will include a chocolate twist: instead of wine, four cups of chocolate milk will be drunk, and four children will ask questions about chocolate and plagues from eating chocolate. Through music, ritual and storytelling, children and adults from different beliefs, cultures and communities will join together in an interactive celebration.

Each year, the Passover Seder tells the story of the Israelites' Exodus from slavery in Egypt, a story of liberation and freedom from oppression that is as relevant today as it was thousands of years ago.

The Interfaith Seder will be hosted by the Hingham No Place for Hate Committee and Hingham-Hull Religious Leaders Association along with other congregations and community groups on the South Shore.

For reservations and information about the Seder at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham, contact hinghamisnoplaceforhate@gmail.com.

Walker to preach at Beechwood Congregational Church

Beechwood Congregational Church, 51 Church St., will present the Rev. Liz Walker as a guest preacher at 10 a.m., on Sunday, March 22. "Jesus' Sacrificial Love" will be the subject of Rev. Walker's sermon. All are invited. There will be refreshments and fellowship following the service in Merritt Hall.

Rev. Walker is an ordained elder at Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church in Jamaica Plain, where she works in the youth worship ministry. She is also an entrepreneur, documentary film producer and a humanitarian working in East Africa. When God called her to the ministry, she stepped down from the WBZ News anchor desk, after 21 years as one of Boston's most popular television journalists.

A 2005 graduate of Harvard Divinity School, Rev. Walker has long been involved in many community service organizations and projects. She has a special interest in the victims and survivors of domestic violence, and helped found the Jane Doe Safety Fund, a grassroots organization that supports domestic abuse shelters and safe houses around the Commonwealth.

In the summer of 2001, Rev.

Rev. Liz Walker will be in Cohasset on March 22.

Walker traveled to Sudan on a fact-finding mission on the controversial slave trade there. Sudan is the scene of the worst human rights atrocities in the world. She was so outraged by what she saw, that she co-founded the humanitarian organization "My Sister's Keeper," which focuses on economic and educational initiatives for Sudanese women and girls. Rev. Walker shot her own footage during that first journey and produced a number of television specials including one that earned the Edward R. Murrow Award from the New England Radio Television News Director's Association in 2002. She has since returned to Sudan many times and has completed a new documentary "A Glory from the God," which profiles the work of "My Sister's Keeper."

A cosmic shift in perspective

'Two Men of Florence' examines the clash between Galileo and the church

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

As a speechwriter and adviser to Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson and Senator Robert F. Kennedy, Richard N. Goodwin learned firsthand what it was like to write for world leaders. As author of the play "Two Men of Florence" — a drama about the epic conflict between astronomer Galileo Galilei and Pope Urban VIII, premiering in the United States at Boston's Huntington Theatre Company on Friday — Goodwin is now getting the chance to write about them instead. It is a distinction the 77-year-old clearly relishes.

"In a play, the characters have to say what you write. Presidents you write for don't have to say what you write," said Goodwin with a laugh last week from a Boston University Theatre rehearsal room.

If the many stories about the alleged friction between Robert Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson are accurate, then Goodwin was no doubt witness to a dramatic time in recent history as it happened. With his first play, however, Goodwin reaches further back in history — to the 17th century — to dramatize what he calls the "mortal combat" that exploded when Galileo defended the Copernican view that the Earth goes around the sun, in opposition to the long-held belief of the Catholic Church.

Pope Urban VIII, determined that the authority of the church should cede no ground to scientifically developed theory, labeled Galileo's ideas as heresy and began a lifelong persecution of his one-time friend.

"This is a play about two of the most titanic egos of the 17th century, who came into conflict over the debate between faith and scientific reason. Forced to recant his views, Galileo was imprisoned and later held under house arrest. These are all actions for which the Catholic Church is still apologizing. It is the same kind of controversy that is still alive today in the battle between Darwinists and the creationists," says Goodwin, whose original title for the play, first produced in London in 2003, was "The Hinge of the World."

"The fact is that it is very hard to reconcile religious faith with modern science. Most modern people will side with Galileo, but I've been very conscious of the arguments for faith being given short shrift in recent years. I wrote this play with balance so people could see both sides of the argument."

Goodwin learned all about the two sides of an argument while at Harvard Law School, where he graduated first in his class and was president of the Harvard Law Review. He was still in his 20s when, as special counsel to the U. S. House of Representatives, he exposed fraud on the popular television game show "Twenty One." A chapter in Goodwin's 1988 book, "Remembering America: A Voice from the Sixties," became the basis the 1994 feature film "Quiz Show," directed by Robert Redford, in which Rob Morrow portrayed Goodwin. His real-life role uncovering corruption caught the attention of Theodore Sorenson who hired Goodwin to join the speechwriting team of John F. Kennedy's presidential campaign. Goodwin later served as assistant special counsel to President Kennedy and as special assistant to President Johnson.

Playwright
Richard N. Goodwin

Goodwin authored some of the most memorable speeches of the 1960s, including Johnson's "The Great Society" address and his "We Shall Overcome" civil rights speech. He left the Johnson administration over what he viewed as the president's promotion of the Vietnam War. He returned to politics as a speechwriter for the younger Kennedy's 1968 presidential campaign. With the exception of brief returns, as in 2000, when he worked on Al Gore's concession speech, Goodwin has mostly stayed away from Washington, D.C.

"I had some very bad experiences during that period. President Kennedy was shot and I was with Bobby in Los Angeles when he was killed, so I really don't miss politics."

In the years since, Goodwin has written several books and been a regular contributor to The New Yorker magazine. He also frequently collaborates with his second wife, the Pulitzer Prize-winning biographer and historian Doris Kearns Goodwin, with whom he lives in Concord.

"I read everything Doris writes and she reads everything I write. We're always there to provide each other with editorial assistance. I was working with Doris on her Lincoln book 'Team of Rivals: The Political Genius of Abraham Lincoln' when I started the revisions on this project."

The idea of producing the play in the U.S., especially in his hometown of Boston, had great appeal for Goodwin, as did the chance to reunite with his British director, Edward Hall.

"Edward was my director in London and I wanted him here in Boston on this production, too. I have great respect for his work and we've also become very close friends, I'm even Godfather to his child. It is not clear yet where we go from here with this play, but I'd love to do it in Rome some day, in the shadow of the Vatican, where it all happened."

Skiing PEAK to PEAK

Alexander Stevens
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

DEER VALLEY, UTAH — We're standing at the top of Deer Valley Resort in Utah, at an elevation of 9,400 feet. For two skiers from Boston, that's a little closer to heaven.

But heaven isn't just above us, it's also before us: A couple inches of famously dry powder — the good stuff — borne over the deserts to the west, now laying before us like the puffy white clouds of a child's painting.

My wife and I glide effortlessly down the flat access trail that provides stunning views. To our left, Jodanelle Reservoir is a patch of indigo cut into the landscape thousands of feet below us. To our right, the magnificent cobalt blue Timpanogos Mountains stand like a proud family portrait.

It's breathtaking, and not just because the air is so thin.

We turn left and dive into Stein's Way, Deer Valley's signature trail. Each turn sends a spray of powder in a perfect arc. Back East, they have a name for these kinds of ski conditions: excellent.

We spent three February days hitting the three major ski areas in Park City, Utah. The day before, it was Park City Mountain Resort. And on our last day, it was off to The Canyons, where I heard a skier singing the Clash's "Should I Stay?" mid-run, inspired by the giddy rush that only 6 inches of new powder can provide.

But perhaps the most impressive thing about skiing these three mountains isn't how great the skiing is when they get snow, but how great it is when they don't.

When we arrived, it had been about 10 days since the white stuff fell. And yet, at Deer Valley, voted best ski area in the country in 2008 and 2009 by the readers of Ski magazine, we couldn't have had more fun. We were the first ones down Morning Star, a black diamond run that steadied our ski legs and got the adrenaline pumping. Deer Valley is famous for its grooming, and rightly so. It was perfect — set an edge with no fear of ice lurking below.

We conquered all seven peaks at Deer Valley, which is one of only three mountains in North America with a no-snowboarders policy. That's one of those restrictions that, at first blush sounds a little exclusive, but after you've skied there a couple hours, you kind of appreciate it (unless you're a snowboarder).

Deer Valley is cruiser heaven — much like Park City Mountain Resort, where we hit one of those glorious days that draws skiers all the way out from the East Coast. Above us, a Big Sky blue canopy stretched from horizon to horizon, and before us, white carpet trails.

Blue also dominates the trail map, which is a network of intermediate slopes, spiced with some expert runs. Off the King Con high-speed quad, it's nothing but blues, a dozen of them cut diagonally under the lift. An intermediate skier could happily spend the whole day there. We also liked the Silverloade high-speed "six pack" (seats six). One of the most popular lifts on the mountain, it not only offers more blue runs — including fabulous Parley's Park — but also expert trials like Double Jack and Fools Gold, cruiser trails built just the way

This Deer Valley skier knows that fatter skis are great for powder.

I like them: Steep and frosted with an inch or two of powder. Your skis vibrate with energy and it's easy to translate their chatter: They're glad they're skiing Park City, too.

By 2:30 in the afternoon, the thermometer read 50 degrees. The sun would have been blinding without goggles or sunglasses, but the snow was still good. Classic Western skiing.

On Day Three, it came. Six inches of powder. We headed for The Canyons with the right attitude and the wrong skis. Ideally we would have switched out of our Eastern-based shaped skis into something fatter that would have allowed us to ride more on top of the snow. But even with skis designed to cut, not glide, we found the conditions that turn otherwise normal people into "powder hounds."

The Canyons is the biggest of the three resorts — a remarkable 3,700 skiable acres (compared with 1,215 at Killington, for example). Early in the morning, we headed straight for the southern tip called Dream Peak, and found dream powder. We cut our way down Pipe Dream, slowly remembering the technique changes that are necessary when the snow is knee-deep: Tips up and no edges.

The initial plan was to explore all the peaks the way we had at the first two mountains. But when you find Nirvana, you don't ask, "What else is out there?" We stayed at Dream Peak for a few runs, finding fresh turns on the first several runs - some of the best skiing of the entire trip. It wasn't until the trails got cut up that we decided to explore elsewhere. By the afternoon, with legs weary from three straight days of relentless skiing, we opted for the cruiser-friendly fun of Upper and Lower Boa.

The Canyons is fewer-frills skiing. If six buddies were coming out to Park City from Boston, or Dallas, or Atlanta, they'd probably head to the Canyons, eager to challenge the double-diamond runs off the famed Ninety-Nine 90 lift. Challenging stuff. If I had a kid who snowboarded, I'd go to Park City Mountain Resort where we could share the mountain. And if I wanted a relaxing ski vacation, I'd spend most of my time at Deer Valley, where service is an obsession.

Craig McCarthy, who works with the Park City Chamber of Commerce, tells of skiers from the East who hop a Friday morning direct flight to Salt Lake City (their helmets in the overhead storage), go straight to the mountain from the airport and ski that afternoon. They'll ski right through Sunday morning, and be back on the East Coast by Sunday evening. We bow to their commitment (read: insanity), but for goodness sake, do this trip right. Go, as we did, midweek. It's more relaxing, and best of all, you'll own the mountain. We never waited in a lift line more than two minutes, and 95 percent of the time we just skied right up to the lift.

And for skiers who know all about long lift lines and crowded slopes, that's a taste of heaven almost as delicious as powder. Almost.

When you're not skiing

There's lots of non-skiing activities at Park City, but these were three of our favorites.

1. Bobsled, Olympic Park: For some extreme "fun," experience the 80 mph, 5 G-force excitement of this Olympic bobsled run. They challenge you to count the 15 turns in your head. You won't get past four, I guarantee you. It's not cheap: $200 for 58 seconds, but any thrill seeker will tell you it's worth it.
2. Xtreme Zipline, Olympic Park: You'll hit 50 mph on the world's steepest zip line. And if you get lucky, you'll go at the same time a ski jumper launches himself off the 120-meter hill, and the two of you can fly together.
3. Tubing, Gorgoza Park: A tame alternative to zip lines and bobsleds. At first we thought this was more for kids than adults, but when we got a running start and went head first down the hill, we got more of a thrill than we expected. Great for the whole family.

IF YOU go...

Getting There: Fly to Salt Lake City. We had great luck with Delta/Northwest, flying out of Manchester, N.H., and paying just $260 (roundtrip), with one stop in Detroit. Direct flights are also available. From the airport to Park City, it's 45 minutes via shuttle or rental car.

Staying There: You'll find a complete clearinghouse of rentals — in Park City and on the mountains — at www.parkcityinfo.com. We stayed at a slopeside condo at Park City Mountain Resort; about $200 per night.

Skiing There: Adult single day passes are $81 at The Canyons and $83 at Park City and Deer Valley. There's a slight discount for multi-day.

Susan Buswell kneels by some of the rugs that she has made over the years. The rug (at right) with her daughter, Francesca, and dog, Rufus, won honorable mention at the South Shore Art Festival in 2007. As a Vermont native, Buswell is drawn to nature and landscapes.

Cohasset artist creates 'Barefoot Rugs'

By Nancy White

From doing finishing work as a carpenter to a macramé phase to her current passion of rug hooking, Susan Buswell has always been drawn to crafts.

Her craft has translated to the business of Barefoot Rugs and her fiber decorative art has received admission in two high profile juried craft shows this year.

At a recent craft exhibition show in Baltimore — the largest juried show in the US with over 700 exhibitors — Buswell was heartened by the attendance and interest in rug hooking.

"It's a traditional craft used in a contemporary manner," said Buswell. "Interest in all the fiber arts is growing, as times get tough people turn to creative outlets."

And rug hooking is both creative and practical — and in Buswell's case vibrantly colorful, too.

"I've always been interested in textiles and I was looking for something to do that fit how I worked."
— Susan Buswell

From humble origins, rug hooking was born out of necessity. First appearing in the 1800s, early crafters used whatever materials they had on hand — left over yarn, torn clothes, blankets, burlap feedbags and a bent nail for a hooking tool. The craft, like many other fiber arts like knitting and sewing, later became an art form and hobby.

Buswell came to the craft of rug hooking after several other forays into textile art.

"I've always been interested in textiles and I was looking for something to do that fit how I worked," said Buswell. She first tried quilting, then rug braiding before falling in love with rug hooking.

There are two types of rug hooking: traditional rug hooking and punch needle rug hooking. Buswell specialized in punch needle rug hooking. Using a special tool and 100 percent wool yarn, Buswell "punches" the tool and the yarn through the monk's cloth backing to make the loops. With punch needle rug hooking Buswell literally "paints" with the yarn to create the functional work of art.

"I focus on landscape and nature; my designs tend to be more contemporary," said Buswell.

A large portion of her business is custom orders; she has done Cohasset

Senior Center on CPC funding list

$220K recommended for design

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With economy being anything but certain most are not thinking about the ways they can go out and spend money. That mantra seems to have carried over to Community Preservation funding applications — just one group has come forward to request money.

"(This project) is never going to get to the runway, let alone take off speed if we don't fund this."
— CPC chairman Stuart Ivimey

Cohasset Elder Affairs made a request for $220,000 to help it get its dream of a new, larger, freestanding senior center off the ground. The funding request, which is about 10 percent of the total construction cost, would allow for complete engineering and professional design services for the targeted site located adjacent to the Cohasset Swim Center parking lot.

"Right now our senior center does not reflect the whole community…If we build the right kind of facility, they are going to use it," said Joe Nedrow, chairman of the Council on Elder Affairs.

With some strings attached, the Community Preservation Committee voted unanimously to recommend the project to Town Meeting. Voters at Town Meeting (Saturday, March 28) will have the final say on whether the $220,000 engineering money to develop a more concrete plan for the Senior Center.

The project qualifies for CPC money because the concept plans for the senior

Health and fitness in focus at Rec Fair

Event to be held March 22

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

There are a million different ways to have fun in Cohasset.

And Recreation Director Ted Carroll is out to prove it to you.

For the first time, the Recreation Department will be putting on a Recreation Fair, featuring the many ways families can have fun this summer and all year long. On Sunday, March 22, the First Annual Recreation Fair will take up residence in the high school gymnasium from 1 to 4p.m.

"This is the big push to show Cohasset what great resources there are inside this town. There are tons of opportunities for health, fitness and recreation," said Carroll. "In these tough times, people want to stay local and, with our recreation programs, the prices can't be beat."

"In these tough times, people want to stay local and, with our recreation programs, the prices can't be beat."
— Ted Carroll, Recreation Director

Carroll and his staff have been working for several months to pull together the event and include as many organizations as possible. In addition to the Recreation Department's own programming, representatives from youth sports groups, upcoming road races, non-profit organizations and local fitness clubs.

The Recreation Fair will introduce all the summer programs available to the community through the Recreation Department, including the perennially popular playground program and relatively new Summer Xtreme program geared toward middle schoolers. In fact, the fair is the community's first chance to register for the programs, as well as the other summer sports clinics and weeklong classes.

"This is when parents are thinking about the summer and what their kids are going to do," said Carroll.

While parents are gathering information about programs and organizations, there will be plenty to entertain the kids. Kid attendees will embark on a "fun fact" search where they go from table to table with the goal of learning a fun fact about each organization, or a healthy tip. Complete forms will go into a raffle for a prize. There will also be various interactive stations where kids can try their hand at lacrosse or fencing. They can cook up a goodies with Kitchen Kids instructor Sandy Tremblay or jam with Howie Altholtz, organizer of Sunday Jams.

"It's going to be a lot of fun and there will be some surprises," said Carroll.

From grabbing a trail map from the Cohasset Conservation Trust booth to talking to a police officer about train safety to discussing biking with Cohasset Cycle Sports, the fair will have something for everyone. Runners will have an early opportunity to register for the upcoming Sunday, April 5 Road Race by the Sea put on by the Rotary Club.

"Our hope is that we get as many registrations prior to race weekend as possible, both for the 10K run and the Fran Coffey Memorial Fun Walk that takes place that same day at 10 a.m.," said Race Director Brad Goodwin.

They also plan to use the event as a way to recruit volunteers to keep the

The Mariner caught up with the most recent appointee to the Economic Development Committee, Bill Fitzgerald.

Name: Bill Fitzgerald.

Occupation: Account Executive, Dell Inc.

Best day of your life: My wedding day in Cohasset, of course.

Best vacation: Ireland this past year with my parents and family.

Favorite season: Fishing season.

Favorite junk food: Ice Cream (Is JJ's open yet?)

Best book or magazine: "Tuesdays with Morrie," by Mitch Albom.

Best movie: This is a tough one either…"The Usual Suspects" or "LA Confidential."

Best TV show: Can I still say Seinfeld? I can't be the only one.

Favorite music, song, group or artist: John Mayer.

Fun fact about yourself: My wife Lindy and I live almost equidistant to both the Holway (Cohasset) and the Fitzgerald (Scituate) families. I have eaten two Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners every year since we were engaged; it's good to live close to family but its murder on the waistline!

Pet peeve: When people are inconsistent.

Goal: To always stay ahead of the game.

Person you'd most like to meet: Warren Buffett.

Biggest worry: To fall behind.

Best part of Cohasset: Bassing Beach and the Sand Bar.

Melting snow uncovers destruction

When walking through the village over the weekend, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer was disturbed at what he saw. Three relatively young trees planted in the past few years were smashed in the village's pocket parks. Dormitzer hypothesized the damage was caused by a front-end loader during winter snow removal.

Beyond the village, Dormitzer said there were many instances of destruction that was once hidden by the snow. A combination of the snow removal and the ongoing Little Harbor water and sewer project were contributors.

"It's looking shabby around town, really shabby," said Dormitzer, adding an inventory of the problems would need to be gathered and the issues addressed in the near term.

Need for earlier notice on water rate

Selectman Karen Quigley shared some additional thoughts about the water rate increase. She felt strongly that in the future if there was any possibility of a rate increase that it come out a little earlier in the process.

"If residents have a little more time to digest I think it would go a long way to bringing more transparency and sunlight on the problem," said Quigley.

A public hearing on the water rate increase article will be held on Tuesday, March 17 at 7:30p.m. at the Water Treatment Plant on King Street.

Public hearing March 17

The Water Commission will hold a public hearing regarding a proposed rate increase on Tuesday, March 17 at 7:30p.m. at the Water Treatment Plant on King Street.

The rate increase proposal is set to go before Annual Town Meeting on Saturday, March 28.

Free legal clinics

The Bar Association of Norfolk County will sponsor free evening legal clinics as a public service to the community. A panel of attorneys experienced in all areas of the law will be available for a one-on-one consultation to discuss legal questions. All consultations are confidential.

Legal clinics will take place from 6 to 8 p.m., on Tuesday evenings, in Quincy District Court as follows: April 7, May 19, June 2, July 7 and Aug. 4.

For more information, call Adrienne C. Clark, Bar Association of Norfolk County, at 617-471-9693.

Email marketing

On Tuesday, March 24th, 8-9:30 a.m. at Focus Gallery, 15 Depot Court, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a free seminar "The Power of Email Marketing."

Presented by Zak Barron, Regional Development Director from Constant Contact, Inc., this seminar will help business owners integrate email marketing into their customer communication strategy. It provides an overview of email marketing, including best practices, winning strategies and case studies.

You do not need to be a Chamber member to attend, all are welcome.

Regional dispatch

Towns receive $1 million grant

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The pursuit for a regional dispatch center is now on the fast track. On Monday, Cohasset town officials received word the towns of Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Cohasset have been awarded a $1 million grant to be used toward the creation of a regional dispatch center to be based in Hingham.

The four towns' dispatch centers would be merged into one centralized dispatch center, which could be accomplished with minor modifications to the current Hingham police headquarters. Eventually, six communities could hook into the Hingham dispatch center.

With state grants available for this type of regionalization, the fire and police officials of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Norwell joined forces over a year ago to consider the possibility of a centralized dispatch center. The hope is a regional dispatch center would result in enhanced safety for fire and police personnel, improved services to the public and a cost savings for all towns involved.

"There is real momentum growing around this," said Town Manager Bill Griffin at the Board of Selectmen meeting Monday night.

According to the grant award letter, other state development grants will be available this summer that could further defray the cost of the dispatch center.

Such a center would increase safety for fire, EMS, and police personnel with improved radio systems, common database software, and protocols for operations and information sharing among the four towns, town officials say. This would lead to improved response times and ensure compliance with state and federal standards.

"There is real momentum growing around this."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

"Although there is still a lot of work to be done, securing this grant is a large step towards a regional emergency dispatch center," Police Chief James Hussey said this week.

Services to the public would also be improved, including 9-1-1 response times. Emergency medical dispatch service would be provided across all four towns; certified dispatchers would provide pre-arrival care instructions in accordance with national standards; and regional 24/7/365 coverage would be available.

Such a system would also provide better application of technology, including software upgrades, to facilitate information-sharing and new radio systems to eliminate dead spots and to standardize frequency bands.

While this regionalization effort could face obstacles with the dispatchers' union because the regional center would not require the same amount of manpower, it could save the towns money in operational costs and capital expenditures.

How much the construction and equipment would cost is not yet known. A complete feasibility study will be done before any such plan is finalized, with many details still to be worked out.

The current dispatch costs between the four towns is $1.4 million annually. Each year, the towns received approximately $107,000 in state grants, with regionalization that number could quadruple to $420,000.

The target date for regional dispatch implementation is set for July 1, 2010 (at the start of fiscal 2011).

This is not the first time a cooperative effort to regionalize emergency services was attempted. In the early 1990s, Cohasset, along with Scituate, Hingham, Hull, and Norwell, received a grant for a $30,000 feasibility study for a regional fire and rescue service. Despite initial support from local politicians and emergency service personnel and the promise of cost savings, the effort never got off the ground.

Reporter Carol Britton Meyer contributed to this report.

On Monday (Marc h 2) at 12:32 p.m., police responded to an accident on Ripley Road. A 2004 Ford pickup truck operated by a Weymouth man was plowing a driveway and while backing out was struck by a 2006 Ford car traveling on Ripley Road.

The car was owned and operated by a Cohasset man; the accident was in the vicinity of 80 Ripley Road, police said. Chief Hussey said high snow banks blocked the visibility of both drivers. There was minor damage to both vehicles but neither had to be towed. There were no apparent injuries and no citations were issued.

Parents arguing

Police responded to the girls basketball game at the high school gym last Tuesday (March 3) at about 7:38 p.m. when a report came in about some parents from Cohasset and the opposing team embroiled in a shouting match. When police arrived the incident was over and the involved parties had apparently settled down.

Letter

A concerned resident, who is new to town, notified police after receiving a letter last week denying an application for cellular service due to limited credit experience. The resident had never applied for the service. Police noted the resident's last name had been misspelled on the letter. The cell phone company could not determine whether the application had been made on line. The resident had been among numerous potential victims of credit identity fraud when a major retailer's records were compromised recently and was concerned that the compromised credit information might still be out there. Police provided the resident with an identity theft packet and detectives are following up.

Vandalism

A former boyfriend of a Cohasset resident is being summonsed to court on charges of vandalism after damaging the door to his former girlfriend's apartment, police said. The girlfriend called police after hearing her ex-boyfriend banging on the door. He had arrived to pick up some items that she had left for him outside her apartment. She told police she had not been placed in fear, that he had not threatened her and she did not want to seek a restraining order. However, the 31-year-old Weymouth man will face the charge of vandalizing property.

Objects thrown

Police responded to callers complaining about a group of youths who were throwing objects at cars on Border Street near the bridge from the area of Beacon Rock on Government Island last Saturday at 1:02 p.m. The responding officer located a couple of the kids, a couple ran from the scene, and for a short time, a five-year-old in the group was missing but he soon turned up. Police talked to the young kids and their parents about the danger of throwing objects at cars.

Traffic stop

A 22-year-old Scituate man is being summonsed to court following a traffic stop at 1:12 a.m. on Sunday (March 8). Police pulled the car over on King Street because the license plate was obscured. A computer check revealed the man had a suspended license due to a payment default. His car was towed and he is being charged with operating after license suspension.

Shaky building

Police responding to a report of vandalism in an unoccupied commercial building on Elm Street discovered several areas of the ceiling inside were collapsing and falling through. A couple of windows were broken but it appeared the vandalism occurred some time ago, as there were cobwebs on the windows. The gas company cut power to the building; the fire department and building inspector were also called. The building has been secured, police said.

Breakup

Police talked to a young couple (boyfriend and girlfriend) involved in a loud argument near the entrance to Wompatuck State Park on Doane Street last week after receiving reports about a woman screaming for help and a man swearing at her. The couple was in the process of breaking up. Police said the couple seemed to be fine, did not want police assistance, and that the incident did not appear that it would escalate.

Larceny

A contractor notified police on Monday (March 2) that a furnace he had been contracted to install in a building in the 200 block of Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) was missing. Police were able to obtain names of those who have access to the building and the incident is under investigation.

Selectmen review Town Meeting articles

Three articles appear on the Town Meeting warrant authorizing the selectmen to move forward with some sort of land agreement with the Cohasset Swim Center for the proposed new senior center site. Here is a summary of those articles and several others.

• Article #16, transfer of land by water commissioners to the selectmen, transfers the authority over a five-acre parcel off Sohier Street. Recommended for approval to Town Meeting in a unanimous vote.

• Article #17, acquisition of property for senior center, authorizes the Selectmen to acquire a portion of Swim Center land to construct the Senior Center. Recommended for approval to Town Meeting in a unanimous vote.

• Article #18, conveyance of property, authorizes the Selectmen to use the town-owned five-acre parcel of land to negotiate with the Swim Center. Recommended for approval to Town Meeting in a unanimous vote.

• Article #5, capital stabilization fund, requests Town Meeting to transfer approximately $320,000 from free cash into the capital stabilization fund. Recommended for approval to Town Meeting in a unanimous vote.

• Article #6, capital improvements budget, requests multiple capital purchases and maintenance projects to be paid out of the stabilization fund. It is the recommendation of the Capital Budget Committee to pay for $254,000 of the expenditures in cash and finance $535,000 of the recommended items. The recommendation is made to not place stress on the capital stabilization fund or the town. Recommended for approval to Town Meeting in a unanimous vote.

• Article #10, post-retirement health insurance liability stabilization fund, requests Town Meeting approve a transfer of $20,000 from the fiscal 2009 health insurance budget into the post-retirement health insurance liability stabilization fund. Recommended for approval to Town Meeting in a unanimous vote.

Fiscal 2010 budget changes

When Town Manager Bill Griffin presented his budget message last Monday night, he had just found out the South Shore Vo-Tech assessment would $55,000 less than projected. With that in mind and on some recommendations of the Advisory Committee, he proposed some changes to the proposed fiscal 2010 budget.

Below are Griffin's recommended amendments:

• Under general expenses, increase engineering services line item from $20,000 to $30,000. Griffin said this budget line has proven to be invaluable by allowing him to employ the services of engineering consultants or the Greenbush guys to prepare grant applications, review plans and file required annual reports to state and federal agencies. In fiscal 2009, this line item was $40,000.

• Increase legal services budget from $150,000 to $160,000 to begin to provide sufficient funding for on-going legal services. In fiscal year 2008 just under $250,000 on legal services.

• To correct an original error, increase the budget request for a parking clerk from $0 to $1200.

• Increase the recommended school budget by $20,000 to help cover unemployment expenditures.

• Add a $25,000 line item in the operating budget for landfill monitoring services, instead of putting forth the spending request in a Town Meeting article. (Griffin had already set aside $25,000 for the service, but on the recommendation of the Advisory Committee, moved the recurring expense into the operating budget).

• Insert a new $5,000 line item in general expenses for the Department of Public Works to maintain the rain gardens being constructed as part of the Little Harbor project.

• Griffin is still working with the unions that represent those employees who have cost-of-living adjustments in place for fiscal 2010 to determine if certain budget reductions can be avoided if a fiscal 2010 wage freeze is implemented.

The Board of Selectmen unanimously supported Griffin's budget amendments.

center include a second floor dedicated to as many as seven senior affordable housing units. Under the Community Preservation Act, funds can only be spent on open space, affordable housing and historic preservation.

"I can't think of anything more appropriate for historic preservation than keeping our seniors in this town," joked Nedrow.

Elder Affairs is currently based in the front rooms of the South Shore Community Center at the corner of Depot Court and North Main Street. There is a dining room, a small office space, and a shared kitchen. Both the senior center and the community center have grown considerably over the years and both organizations need more space. Elder Affairs has spent the better part of a year looking for a new location.

With almost 22 percent of the town's population over 60 (about 1650 residents) and 300 residents over 80, the need for services and larger home base is great, and growing, said Nedrow.

The Swim Center site still has many details to be worked out — there are three articles on the Town Meeting warrant addressing the issue — but the Trustees of the Swim Center and the town has been talking informally for about two months.

Concept plans for the proposed senior center are to construct a two-story building with the first floor devoted to the senior center and several senior affordable apartments on the second floor. If housing were included in the plan, it would be the state's first senior center/affordable housing complex, according to Elder Affairs Director Linda Elworthy.

While the Community Preservation Committee was in support of the project in theory, some of the members felt more information was needed before the large sum was awarded.

Selectman and CPC member Ralph Dormitzer was the most vocal, "there are so many uncertainties and no business plan whatsoever."

He said he would like to know what programs would be offered, how revenue would be generated and what would be the additional financial burden on the town's operating budget.

"We need to know not just the cost of the building, but the long-term obligation of the town" for maintenance and possibly increased services, Dormitzer said. By developing a business plan the town and the engineers/architects would have a better idea of what type of building the town needs, he said.

Preliminary estimates for the building construction run between $1.8 and $2.5 million. Concept plans include a large meeting room for lunches and lectures, a fitness room, several classrooms and offices.

The remaining members of the committee seemed to agree there needed to be a clear plan in place to assure the town they were getting what was needed for the senior center, but some argued it was not a reason to refuse funding for the preliminary engineering for the project.

"(This project) is never going to get to the runway, let alone take off speed if we don't fund this," said CPC chairman Stuart Ivimey.

After much discussion, the committee decided to place three requirements on its recommendation for project funding. If Town Meeting approved the allocation, the applicant could use the $110,000 to complete the engineering needed to identify a "permittable" site. The second half of the allocation ($110,000) would be available contingent to the applicant provides a business plan for the senior center, an updated conceptual plan (including the affordable housing component) and evidence they have a permittable site near the Swim Center.

The CPA at a glance

• Funds from the CPA can be spent in three specific areas: open space, affordable housing, and historic preservation.

• Aside from minor administrative costs, the CPC does not spend money. The CPC only makes recommendations to the legislative authority in a town or municipality, (in Cohasset's case, Town Meeting).

• Each year, the CPC must spend or bank 10 percent of its annual revenue on each of the three specific areas.

• CPA funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset 1.5 percent) and some level of state match, determined year-to-year. Up until this year, Cohasset and other participating towns received a 100 percent state match each year. This year, the state will match 65 percent of the town's dollars. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).

• The average single family home valued at $848,000 paid $118.93 in CPA tax in 2008.

Lean years ahead for CPC

Like many budget talks in Town Hall and around kitchen tables, the Community Preservation Committee is forecasting at least two lean years ahead.

CPC chairman Stuart Ivimey said in estimating the upcoming year's revenue, he was extremely conservative.

"There are people who are not going to be able to afford their property taxes and that is going to impact us," said Ivimey. "We want to be very conservative, we don't ever want to be in the red on this committee."

As a result, CPC revenue projections for fiscal 2010 are budgeted at 10 percent lower than in prior years. The CPA's funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset it's 1.5 percent) and some level of state match, determined year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).

Until 2009, Cohasset and other communities that adopted the community preservation act received a 100 percent match from the state. In fiscal 2009, Cohasset's state match decreased to 67 percent. Next year, reports are indicating the state match would be at most 35 percent.

"Revenue is down sharply at the registry of deeds" and more towns have adopted the CPA lowering Cohasset's cut of the pie, said Ivimey. As a result fiscal 2010 projections assume a 25 percent match.

"We are making every effort to be conservative for this year," said Ivimey. "Fiscal years 2010 and 2011 will be very lean…lean time are ahead for the next 24 months."

Ivimey said with the town and state struggling the CPC would have to continue to be diligent about what projects they fund.

"We can't act like the rich cousin throwing money around," said Ivimey.

The town is coming into this year with roughly $650,000 in the community preservation accounts.

Several local communities, including Hingham, Duxbury, Norwell and Plymouth, are considering warrant articles to reduce the taxpayer contribution percentage or withdraw from the community preservation act.

CPC member Al Moore said there was some reasoning behind it.

"When the state was matching dollar for dollar it was worth something…but without the match it is just an extra tax on the town," Moore said. However, he added, the additional tax has allowed projects to get done that otherwise would not have happened with just the operational budget.

Plow dispute

Police investigated a complaint from a resident of Aaron River Road who said a plow driver intentionally drove at him, knocking him down, following a dispute over plowing on Monday (March 2). Police said the resident had been shoveling out the top of his driveway and did not want the plow to come around again. The plow driver told the resident that he had to make another pass to make the cleared area wider. The person doing the shoveling claims the plow driver drove toward him with the plow; the driver says the resident stepped out in front of him.

Chief Hussey said police have set up a hearing at Quincy District Court before a clerk magistrate to see if a criminal complaint should be issued. "There are two sides of the story," Hussey said. "It is always best to let the clerk listen to the evidence to determine if a criminal complain should be issued."

Lights

The traffic light near the train tracks at lower King Street that prevents cars from piling up onto the tracks malfunctioned last week. Police received several calls; the MBTA transit police responded and trains were stopped temporarily. The complaints came in at 9:31 and the area was opened up again by 9:58 a.m., police said.

— WORD FROM THE STATE HOUSE —

Budget picture bleak, legislators say

Local aid still a moving target

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Sorry we didn't have better news."

That was the sentiment state Sen. Bob Hedlund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley had as they wrapped up their presentation to the Board of Selectmen Monday night.

Hedlund and Bradley covered a lot of ground in a short amount of time: the status of fiscal 2010 state budget and how that will affect Cohasset's local aid, the federal stimulus money, the new taxes being proposed by the Governor.

According to the legislators, Cohasset should be expecting as much as a 10 percent cut from the final fiscal 2009 local aid number, which includes the mid-year cuts. The current budget that is heading for Town Meeting March 28 projects an 8 percent decrease.

In Governor Deval Patrick's fiscal 2010 budget, Cohasset total state aid is being reduced by $457,517, or 7.5 percent from the fiscal 2009 local aid.

"The state is really in a significant quandary with revenue shortfall and the budget picture as we head into the next fiscal year," said Bradley.

Both Bradley and Hedlund said they were pushing for the state to prioritize local aid funding and for an early resolution on local aid during the budget process. The state budget will not be finalized until July 1, the start of the new fiscal year. The House of Representatives will release its budget in mid-April. The Senate releases its budget in mid-May.

"We're trying to come to an agreement on freezing the local aid number, but each day the revenue picture gets bleaker and bleaker."

— State Rep. Garrett Bradley

"We're trying to come to an agreement on freezing the local aid number, but each day the revenue picture gets bleaker and bleaker," said Bradley. "We want to be as honest as we can with you and come to you with information."

Although the budget has many moving parts and Hedlund said he did not want to get into dissecting the governor's 2010 budget proposal, he felt it was a starting point.

"(The governor's budget) is certainly a yard stick…I don't think things are going to get any better," said Hedlund.

Numerous times the two legislators stood in stark contrast to each other and not just because they are from different political parties (Hedlund is a republican and Bradley is a democrat).

Hedlund criticized the Governor's budget reliance on the stabilization fund, commonly called the "rainy day fund." He called the fiscal 2009 budget "irresponsible" and there was not enough responsible preparation built in; he also noted he did not vote for the current budget because of his concerns.

"I'm hoping we can learn from that," said Hedlund.

While Bradley applauded Governor Patrick for coming up with alternative ways the state could create revenue to minimize the shortfall (gas tax, increase on meals tax with local option, increase on hotel tax) as well as introducing reforms to transportation and other state departments. Hedlund said the reforms should be in place first before any new taxes are implemented.

The two men also differed on their outlook for the current financial crisis.

"Overall things will get better, the economy will come back. We all have to keep moving and pulling in the right direction," said Bradley.

Hedlund did not share in his colleague's optimism. "In contrast with the 1930s, we had things working for us then that we don't have now," Hedlund said, naming industrial capacity, positive relations with other countries and the strength of the dollar as a few.

As far as the federal stimulus money coming down to the state, they said it was still unclear how the money would be distributed and what strings would be attached.

"The number is a moving target right now — as much as any other time as I've been in office," said Hedlund.

Board of Selectmen chairman Ted Carr gave each of the legislators copies of Cohasset's submitted "shovel-ready" projects submitted for consideration of federal stimulus money.

"We would appreciate any support you can give us," said Carr.

'Realistic' school budget approved

$14.7 million recommended to Town Meeting

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

At the recent public hearing on the school budget the word of the night was "realistic."

School Committee members and Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh used the word repeatedly as they grappled with the reality of a very tight budget — and a budget that will struggle to provide level services.

"Unless they have had your head in the sand, people know we are not having a great year (financially). We have to be realistic," said School Committee chairman Rick Flynn.

Following a public hearing on the budget March 4, the School Committee voted unanimously to approve a budget of $14,713,000 for fiscal 2010. The certified budget proposal will now go before Town Meeting and face voters' scrutiny on March 28th.

The budget is an increase of 2.77 percent, or $396,603 over the current fiscal year. Since school administrators unveiled their budget numbers in December discussions and changes have taken place to get to the final certified budget.

In December, the school department presented a working budget that included a 3.6 percent increase over last year's budget, or $14,833,172. When the school department proposed a 3.6 percent increase at the start of the budget process, Walsh said they thought that was conservative. In each of the last three years, the town-appropriated portion of the school budget has had an increase of over 4.5 percent.

When Town Manager Bill Griffin presented his budget message last week, he said the 3.6 percent increase in school funding was simply not in the budget. He presented a 2.6 percent increase over fiscal 2009 as a reflection of the tough economic times. The difference between the two budgets was about $140,000. In the week since the town transferred $20,000 to the school budget to fund an unemployment line item.

The difference could be reduced further (by $70,415) if Town Meeting approves the purchase of two new school buses and one special education van from the capital stabilization fund.

However, Walsh stressed that the budget could still be stressed because there was a significant unknown — a new contract with the teachers' union has yet to be reached. The School Committee is also negotiating with the secretaries and nurses. Only agreed upon salary increases are included in the proposed fiscal 2010 budget. Walsh also estimated needing an additional $60,000 on top of the town's $20,000 contribution for unemployment benefits.

"The 3.6 percent increase was already short and will not meet our fixed costs and contractual obligations," said Walsh. She estimated the schools could see over a $300,000 shortfall in the coming fiscal year that would need to be addressed.

Walsh said in order to maintain level services, 13 percent of the cost to run the school district would need to come from outside sources — fees, gifts, boosters, grants and tuitions. That is an increase of nearly $430,000 over what is projected for the current fiscal year.

"The cost to run the district is outpacing what we are getting from the town," said Flynn.

Walsh agreed, "the trend is we are becoming more and more reliant on the checks and backs of parents in the community…what we really truly need this year to have a level services budget is a 5.7 percent increase, if we are to provide the same level services the town has come to expect."

Walsh and school business manager Dave DeGennaro began to identify areas in the budget where a potential shortfall could be made up. The School Committee did not take any action on the options presented and will continue the budget discussion well after Town Meeting approves a final figure.

"The only areas we can look at is to increase fees, cut programs or reduce staff," said Walsh, adding it was too early to make decisions because of the many unknowns still out there particularly in state aid and federal stimulus monies. In May and June when the state aid numbers are more concrete there will be a clearer picture of what exactly needs to be cut from the budget.

Presented options included a department head restructure, which could result in $168,428 potential savings for the town and be more in line with curriculum objectives. The school department is currently offering a $10,000 retirement incentive to teachers, but there have been no takers to date. A $200,000 reduction in staffing is also an option. Reducing professional development ($25,800), shortening teacher school year from 184 to 183 days ($47,427), creating a self-supporting athletic program ($172,332), removing a line item for new Deer Hill social studies texts ($15,500), cutting a Deer Hill aide position ($19,793), reducing district-wide supplies and materials ($18,588) and increasing full-day kindergarten tuition ($20,000) were the other suggestions made.

"The point is with a 2.7 percent increase — and we all know these are tough times — but this is really a slide back for us," Walsh said.

Flynn tried to offer a silver lining to the town and school's budget struggles, "there is a lot of pain in a lot of places and we are lucky to be in a good position compared to those other communities."

The complete School Committee budget with line items is available online at the Cohasset Public Schools website www.cohassetk12.org.

LUCKY DAY

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone doing so far today on Friday the 13th? I am hoping that everyone has a super day with no bad luck at all. The weather once again has been a bit up and down but according to the people on the news, Spring is still on its way, SOMEDAY! Enjoy the upcoming week with any weather that comes our way and we will see what next week brings. We have a number of fun pieces this week in the column for you all to read about and maybe take part in to help pass the time away in a fun and constructive way.

ROAD RACE

Make sure to secure your spot at this year's Cohasset Road Race by the Sea 10K, which takes place on Sunday, April 5th at 1 p.m. This year's limit is 1500 runners and the registrations are coming in at record pace. Registration is also open for the Fran Coffey Memorial Walk, which takes place that same day at 10 a.m. Register on line for both events at roadracebythesea.com Volunteers are also needed! If you have a group of friends, family or coworkers who would like to volunteer at registration and on race day, please contact 2009@roadracebythesea.com

LEARN LIVE LOVE

This Saturday night, March 14th, join Adrian Morris and his Lemon Lime Aveda Lifestyle Salon staff as he hosts an evening of hope and remembrance at the 5th annual Karen Petrillo Learn Live Love event at the River Club on Border Street in Scituate. All proceeds from the evening benefit Learn Live Love. Call LemonLime AVEDA Lifestyle Salon at 781-383-6663 for more information. This sounds like a wonderful event for all and Adrian Morris does so many things for the community and causes, try to fit it in your weekend schedule and get ready to dance the night away!

CLASS OF 75

Byron Aulick is organizing a 35th class reunion for the Class of 1975. The reunion won't be held until July 2010, but in an effort reach all members of the class in preparation for it, he has created a Facebook Alumni '75 page. There are already 50 members of the class in the group and the alumni page gains new members each week. If you graduated in the Class of '75 and would like to join this group, email Byron at chsadmin@datavault.com or Kay at domaccount@btinternet.com. All CHS 75 alumni are welcome to join!

ESTATE SALE

The First Annual Estate Sale is being held at Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, 100 Sohier St., on April 3, 4 and 5th and the volunteers would love to have you come and shop. The items range from clothing for all, toys, furniture, bikes and so much more. If you have any items in your home that you are ready to part with during your Spring cleaning, they are being accepted at the Our World Museum from now through the sale and, if you need some help, we have some pick-up trucks that can come pick up your items.

Please call the museum and speak with Julie or Jen at 781-383-3198 or send an email to info@ourworldcgdm.org scenes (a boat bobbing near Minot Light) or pet portraits (her golden lab, Rufus, has made it onto several rugs). Her designs vary from the rural scenes like her "Bar Way" forest scene, which is the view from her mother's house in Vermont to coastal vistas like "Beach Shack." One of her most popular rugs is of a whimsical mermaid.

BENTLEY

The common thread between them all is the bold colors.

"For my designs I like color," said Buswell of her signature style.

Each rug takes between two weeks to a month to complete. The actual rug hooking process is repetitive so it can't be done for hours on end. Although she has a set of designs customers often request, each one is unique and will have its own set of variations.

She connects with the rugs she makes and her customers are often looking for an emotional connection to a rug.

"When times are tough and money is tight, it can be helpful to surround yourself with things that you can relate to emotionally," said Buswell.

The creative and design process behind each rug is one of the challenges and pleasures of rug hooking. She often works from pictures or rough outlines of the desired outcome. The application of the wool can be a bit tricky because of a reverse application process: the rug hooker is painting the image backwards, which can be especially challenging when writing is involved.

Typically, Buswell traces out a design and loosely outlines it on the monk's cloth.

"I usually let the creative process take over from there," Buswell explains, but admits she is constantly pulling out the yarn if it doesn't look right. "The art form is very forgiving."

And simple to learn — there are only two stitches to learn in the craft of rug hooking — a big stitch and a little stitch. In addition to her own rug hooking endeavors, Buswell teaches the craft form to both kids and adults and prepares kits to ease beginners into the craft.

Susan Buswell unrolls a rug picturing her daughter, Francesca, and her dog, Rufus, that won honorable mentioned at the South Shore Art Festival.

"The technique is easy to master and it is a fun group activity. Once you know the basics you can make it as complex or contemporary as you want…you can take it to any level you want," said Buswell. While some of her students have come to her saying they don't have a creative bone in their body, most walk out feeling both accomplished and creative, she said.

"They really are impressed with themselves and I think it is important for people to express yourself in that way," said Buswell. In past years, she has set up a table at the Farmer's Market and allowed kids to try their hand at rug hooking.

Some might remember Buswell's village shop, Barefoot Rugs and Country Furnishings. From 1999 to 2003, she occupied the space now housing Bia Bistro.

In two weeks, Buswell will again exhibit at a prestigious craft show, this time in Boston. Craft Boston, a juried craft show held at the Seaport World Trade Center, is considered the premier craft show in New England, said Buswell. Over 200 crafters of all different mediums will have their goods on display.

Sponsored by the Society of Arts and Crafts, Craft Boston begins on Friday, March 27 and continues through Sunday, March 29.

For more information about Barefoot Rugs or to see a gallery of Buswell's work, visit www.barefootrugs.net. For more information about Craft Boston, visit www.craftboston.org

EDITORIAL

Having fun

On our website, we have a category dubbed "fun."

Among us editors, the use of "fun" for a web page "tab" or category has been criticized as too vague.

Fun is not as specific as "happenings" or "calendar" for example.

A lot of stuff gets put into the fun section – everything from photo galleries to concerts and web band jams.

However, in reading about the upcoming Recreation Fair – which is being spearheaded by the Recreation Department – we began to think our criticism of "fun" has been misplaced.

Talk about tough times, dire budgets, the return of the Great Depression have almost become cliché.

Please do not misunderstand; few appreciate tough financial more than those of us who are in the newspaper business.

But so much talk and so much focus on dire, depressing financial news and forecasts has given many of us a bad case of the doldrums.

Therefore, it is clearly time to have fun and to plan some fun.

We continue to be impressed by our small town and how it often pulls together.

The Recreation Fair from 1-4 p.m., on Sunday, March 22, in the high school gymnasium sounds like a terrific way to find out about a ton of fun activities and programs that cost little or nothing at all.

The Recreation Fair will introduce all the summer programs available to the community through the Recreation Department, including the perennially popular playground program and relatively new Summer Xtreme program geared toward middle schoolers.

While parents are gathering information about programs and organizations, there will be plenty to entertain the kids and other surprises.

Here are the presenters at the Fair:

- Recreation programs (Playground 2009, Summer Xtreme, Red Sox games, Lego weeks, fencing, Kitchen Kids etc.)
- Cohasset Rotary Road Race by the Sea
- Clark Chatterton Run
- Relay For Life
- Cohasset Triathlon
- Got Turf? Campaign
- All the Best Natural Foods
- Prime Time Lacrosse
- Fitness Together
- USA Fitness
- Mindfull Bodyworks Pilates
- Cohasset Cycle Sports
- Cohasset Tennis Club
- Santi Holistic Healing
- Creative Dance Studio
- Balance Studio
- Su Escuela Language Center
- Cohasset Conservation Trust
- Cohasset Youth Baseball/Softball, Soccer and Lacrosse
- Cohasset Police
- Cohasset Board of Health

Plan to attend. Bring the kids. Find out how to have fun right here in Cohasset!

Police were called about a Beach Street pothole containing a dead squirrel

Captains appreciate all the support

TO THE EDITOR:

As captains of the Girls High School Basketball team for the past two years, we would like to offer our sincere thanks to all those who have supported and cheered for us. First, we would like to thank our teammates and coaches; the great memories and friendships we share will absolutely last a lifetime.

Thanks also to everyone at school, our classmates, teachers, administrators and staff who have all been helpful and generous with their support. Thank you to our parents and grandparents for coming to every game near and far. To the Basketball Boosters for giving us everything we needed to develop as players, and outfitted us to look good doing so.

Most of all, we thank everyone from town that came to watch us play these past years. Playing a game you love is fun. However, always playing before a big home crowd, many times to a packed gym, is an indescribable thrill, and something for which the three of us will be forever grateful.

Carly Salerno

Fans, school, community were great

TO THE EDITOR:

The Girls Basketball team lost a heartbreaker to Millis at the buzzer Friday night 51 to 49 in the Division 4 South Sectional Finals. It was a great game and great display of Cohasset Superfan support as we packed the gym at Braintree High School. The Lady Skippers have had the best run in CHS girls basketball history winning 45 and losing just four games over the past two seasons and I know how appreciative Coach Levangie and the girls are for all the support they received from the Cohasset community.

We also want to recognize the athletic department game staff, the CHS Cheerleaders, the CHS Pep Band and national anthem singers Lauren Mack and Emily and Ellie Baumgarten who all made Cohasset Basketball games more than just about the game, it has become an event that we can all be proud to be a part of. Take a minute to catch your breath and enjoy what all the CHS Winter teams have accomplished because spring sports start Monday.

Go blue!

Ron Ford
Athletic Director
Cohasset Middle - High School

Heartfelt thanks

TO THE EDITOR:

I recently needed to dial 911 when my wife suffered a sudden allergic reaction. The police, EMTs/paramedics, and firefighters that promptly responded were all extremely professional and friendly. Cohasset is lucky to have people like this watching out for all of us.

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Sewer Connections on North Main St. – This past week, LM Holdings spent time putting the lateral services in on North Main Street in the Common area. The logistics for this work are a very complicated matter. The project has to be very concerned about the Carriage House Nursery School that has parents either dropping off or picking up children in the morning, at noon and again in the afternoon. It takes a lot of coordination to make sure they don't negatively impact the school and make it as easy as possible for the school to function.

Similarly, the Senior Center in the Community Center uses Main Street at the Common as a main entrance and parking area. Of course, Highland Avenue, in addition to serving all of the homes adjacent to it, also handles traffic to and from Town Hall. And, then there is the normal traffic as well as fire and police vehicles who use North Main Street. All in all, it is a rather congested area in which to undertake a construction project.

The trenches being dug along North Main Street are quite deep, since the sewer line is six to nine feet below the road. Fortunately, there is no ledge in this area so the contractor can install two to three lateral pipes in a single day. That's a rarity.

A Sign of Spring – One sure harbinger of spring in Cohasset is the Rotary Road Race By-the-Sea 10K race. Since the race travels some of the same roads as the Little Harbor construction project, preparation work needs to be done to patch the roads and smooth as many of the rough spots as possible. This past Tuesday we had a chance to walk the road racecourse with Brad Goodwin, the Cohasset Rotary Club's Race Director, to assist the contractor by marking the more serious uneven spots.

With all of the public events that are held in our Town (the Triathlon, Art Fair, etc.) it's a constant challenge for projects like the little Harbor Project to keep the roads passable for these events. In 2009 there will be a considerable amount of paving to do to put our construction-weary roads back into shape, so this coordination challenge will continue.

Jerusalem Road Wall Repair – Work continues on Jerusalem Road at this location. The base coat of asphalt has been placed to widen the road on the upland side of the road and the posts have been placed for the pedestrian walkway along the edge of the drop-off. The up and down assortment of fence posts shown in the accompanying photo will all be cut to the correct height and capped. The horizontal stringers need to be added before the fence is completed. The edge of the road at the fence needs to be paved and a guardrail will be installed to separate the pedestrian walkway from the vehicular traffic.

O Where O Where Has Our Little Tree Gone? — Recently we happened to notice that one of the beautiful white lilac trees that were planted near the intersection of Elm St. and S. Main St. has disappeared, having been cut to the ground. Here's the story as we know it.

When the DPW arrived on the scene the tree had been backed over by a vehicle and bent completely down to the ground. (How anyone could back over a tree on the sidewalk in front of Atlantic Brokerage without knowing it is a mystery to us.) There were tire tracks indicating that the driver took off down Main Street to the north. The Tree Warden determined that the tree was a total loss so he had to remove it for safety's sake. It's really a shame that the driver didn't own up to the damage. If anyone happened to witness this event, please let us know. To replace the tree will not be trivial, since in addition to purchasing and planting a new tree, the adjacent cobbles will need to be removed and then reinstalled. We'll miss the beautiful white blossoms that graced this corner come this May.

Inspired by Cohasset bottled water forum

COMMENTARY

PAT GRANAHAN

Recently I saw a huge display of Fred Bottled Water at one of my favorite local grocery stores. Curious, I researched this product and found that the boutique bottled water comes form the Catskills Mountains in New York. The Fred brand resembles a whiskey flask and is sold in a six-pack focusing heavily on an image to appeal to younger customers, according to the company's Web site. Fred's six packs are made from recycled paperboard and printed using soy-based ink. So far Fred looks pretty "green" but let's take a closer look.

Picture a water bottle in your hand one quarter filled with oil. This represents the entire energy costs of the life cycle of one bottle of water. Every year more than 4 billion tons of plastic water bottles wind up as litter on roadsides or in the nations' landfills and we have to include the heretofore "green" Fred in that outrageous count.

For many years I have been conscious of the harm we are doing to our surroundings. Recently, my awareness of the humongous problem bottled water presents to our environment took on a new life after attending Cohasset's forum on bottled water. The featured speaker from Corporate Accountability International pointed out that the Food and Drug Administration regulates only 30 to 40 percent of bottled water sold across state lines. One survey of bottled water found that some violated state standards on bacterial contamination; another contained harmful chemicals such as arsenic. Because bottled water undermines public tap water, municipal water supplies do not receive the attention they deserve or need. Ground water levels are being reduced by bottling companies. Nestle, for example, has 25 plants in North America and anticipates building more. Can you imagine relying on well water all your life and find someday your well dry because some bottling plant has built in your neighborhood?

What is wrong with this picture? Why in the world would one import water from the Catskills Mountains in New York when Hingham and neighboring towns have a good, inspected water supply? Why buy bottled water? Foregoing one bottle of water at a dollar a day is a savings of $365 a year. Giving up imported Italian bottle water (which probably has jet lag) at $2.50 per bottle is a savings of $912 per year. Not chump change.

Fred is not the only culprit. Pepsi call its bottled water Aquafina and charges $1.57 a bottle. The irony is that Aquafina is tap water. Corporate Accountability International was instrumental in forcing Pepsi to label its Aquafina "Public Water Source." Let's not put all the onus on Pepsi. Coke's Dasani and Nestle's Pure Life are likewise tap water.

Nestles, the world's largest food company, owns about 20 brands of bottled water. Some are domestic and familiar to this area such as Poland Springs, Perrier and Pure Life Now. Nestle imports Perrier, San Pellegrino, Aqua Panna, etc. The bottled water industry is a $100 billion per year luxury market worldwide.

It is decision time We can bury ourselves and our children under plastic bottles and in the process make wealthy corporations richer or we can use tap water, fill recyclable bottles for convenience in traveling, request tap water when dining out and live in a healthier environment. Anyone interested in the latter idea?

Pat Granahan lives at 51 Croyden Road in Hingham.

HEALTH NOTES

Red grapes, wine and a 'miracle' drug

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The latest miracle drug now being touted in newspapers, in blogs and on the web, is Resveratrol. You've probably seen or heard about the stuff and its ability to inhibit heart disease and cure some forms of cancer. Like many such potions there's a touch of truth in some of what's being said, but also much hype. Resveratrol (trans-3,5,4'-trihydroxystilbene), an antioxidant compound while present in other foods such as mulberries and peanuts, is found in the skins of red grapes, particularly in Muscadine grapes used to make wines.

The Resveratrol content of wine is related to the length of time the grape skins are present during the fermentation process. Thus the concentration is significantly higher in red wine than in white wine, because the skins are removed earlier during white wine production, lessening the amount that is extracted.

Resveratrol is one of a class of antibiotic compounds produced as a part of a plant's defense system against disease. For example, in response to an invading fungus, Resveratrol is formed to combat the infestation. Since fungal infections are more common in cooler climates, grapes grown in cooler climates have a higher concentration of resveratrol, which came to scientific attention only four years ago, as a possible explanation for the "French Paradox"— the low incidence of heart disease among French people, who eat a relatively high-fat diet but also consume red wine in abundance. Since wine is the most notable dietary source, it is the object of much speculation and research.

Resveratrol is one of a class of antibiotic compounds produced as a part of a plant's defense system against disease.

The most efficient way of administering Resveratrol in humans appears to be buccal delivery, that is without swallowing, but by direct absorption through the inside of the mouth. (Envision the way wine tasters behave at tastings).

Many studies suggest that consuming alcohol (especially red wine) may reduce the incidence of coronary heart disease. Alcohol can protect cells against degradation of low-density lipoprotein and can be considered by some to provide more effective protection than conventionally used vitamins C and E. However, to date, most of the research on Resveratrol's antioxidant and anti-platelet properties has been done in the laboratory using test-tube or tissue-culture preparations. Further studies in animals and humans are necessary to determine its effectiveness.

Resveratrol is also being studied in connection with its ability to inhibit cancer cell growth, leading to questions about its ability to simulate the effects of estrogen that also promotes growth of breast cancer cells.

Laboratory tests may have clearly demonstrated that Resveratrol can help prevent cardiovascular disease and cancer. But too much is not known about the new compound:

- First, we know little about how rapidly the human system assimilates Resveratrol by the heart and liver, and whether it is harmful.
- Second the research on Resveratrol has focused on its short-term effects and on lab testing; a problem for many new products in these rapidly changing times.
- Third, its role in breast cancer may significantly limit its use, even for its "proven" benefits.
- Finally, if you are careful about overuse of red wine, it's probably better and a lot more pleasant to get the small amount of Resveratrol you need through judicious use of red wine.

In spite of the proliferation of ads and media discussions about it, there is really not enough information about Resveritrol for anyone to consider regularly using it.

Barbie has turned 50

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Quick now, what won the Worst Toy of the Year Award for 2008?

If you were a member of the Campaign for a Commercial-free Childhood, it was the Dallas Cowboy Cheerleader Barbie doll.

She won, said the Campaign, for creating "a host of harmful expectations about what girls are expected to be like."

That's a helluva thing to say about a girl on her 50th birthday.

It has been a half-century since Barbie first appeared in a knitted black and white striped bathing suit and heels at the New York toy fair on March 9, 1959, inspired by a risqué German plastic doll called "Bild Lilli," often described as "popular with men."

She has long held in thrall the pre-pubescent set with her rapid fire changes in career from astronaut to surgeon to paleontologist to art teacher to African-American presidential candidate four years before there really was one.

Two or three generations of girls, some young and some not so young, have watched Barbie for her wardrobes, which have reflected the fashions of the day. She has been dressed by such fashion houses as Armani and Versace.

We have followed her whirlwind 48-year love affair with Ken, sympathizing with her through their breakup, rejoicing when they reconciled. Barbie and Ken, incidentally, were named after the children of their creator, Ruth Handler.

It hasn't been all easy sailing for Barbie.

She has been banned in Saudi Arabia for her failure to observe Islamic law and criticized in her own country for uttering such phrases as "Math is tough," when everybody knows girls can do sums equally as well as boys.

"Barbies often represent negative stereotypes," wrote British journalist Julie Bindel. "There is even a 'Barbie syndrome,' someone who strives for an unrealistic body type."

Whatever. The Barbie doll was one of the first inductees into the National Toy Hall of Fame in Rochester, N.Y., along with the likes of Teddy Bears, Lincoln Logs, Hula Hoops and Erector Sets.

I don't know whether, at age 50, Barbie has an IRA or a 401(k), but I think I see Mattel, Barbie's maker, preparing an unlikely successor.

Dora the Explorer, the bilingual tot in shorts, backpack and purple T-shirt who talks to monkeys on television, is growing up.

"As tweenage Dora, our heroine has moved to the big city, attends middle school and has a whole new fashionable look," says Mattel.

"The brand captures girls' existing love of Dora and marries it with the fashion doll play and online experiences older girls enjoy."

The new Dora won't be revealed until next fall, but Mattel is teasing us with a silhouette showing a girl with long, flowing hair, a short skirt and pointed shoes.

The redo of Dora has inspired Lyn Mikel Brown and Sharon Lamb, authors of Packaging Girlhood, to start an online petition to stop it.

"What next?" they wrote. "Dora the Cheerleader? Dora the Fashionista with stylist purse and stilettos? Dora the Pop Star with Hoppin' Dance Club and Juice Bar?

"We can expect it all, because that's what passes as 'tween' in the toy department these days."

Chamber conducts membership drive

Also teaming up with Music Circus

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When times get tough, business owners have to get creative in order to survive.

Those creative juices were flowing at a meeting of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce this week. On multiple different fronts, the Chamber is working to get the word out about all Cohasset has to offer.

Member businesses range from boutiques to art galleries, accountants to lawyers, and financial planners to real estate agencies, but share a common goal of making the town a viable place to do business.

"It's a good time to band together and share information," said Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's Home Presence and recently elected Chamber president. "We like to tell people for $8.33 a month, how can you afford not to join?"

Right now, the Chamber is in the midst of a membership drive. Packets to all town businesses listed at Town Hall will go out this week. They are working on increasing the Chamber's visibility by re-vamping their website (www.cohassetchamber.org) to include a community calendar, partnering with the Music Circus for marketing opportunities and providing workshops for local businesses.

During the summer months Cohasset is inundated with thousands of people each weekend when the South Shore Music Circus has its shows. Although Cohasset's quaint village is located less than a half-mile away, many out-of-town patrons of the Music Circus are unaware. In talks with the Music Circus, the Chamber and individual businesses are hoping to cultivate a greater synergy between local business and the venue.

Although Cohasset's quaint village is located less than a half-mile away, many out-of-town patrons of the Music Circus are unaware.

The chamber is recruiting businesses to advertise on a playbill insert that will then be handed out to every audience member. They are toying with the idea of advertising on one of the Music Circus's outside kiosks, or even placing an informational or coupon insert into every ticket order envelope.

"It could be a great partnership," said Matthew Cunningham, chamber vice president and principal of Securitas Financial Group. The Chamber also plans to have a presence at the Music Circus's annual Box Office day (April 18) when the 2009 season tickets first go on sale.

Later in the Music Circus season, the Chamber is looking to have a special Thursday night village event to coincide with one of the Thursday night concerts. Stores would be open late and there would be a variety of activities.

Also in preparation for the high traffic summer months, the Chamber is looking to place more signs about town to ensure points of interest can be easily located by visitors.

The Chamber is also looking for new and emerging ways for businesses to get the word out there. From regular e-mails to customers to joining social networking sites to partnering with the South Shore Music Circus, the Chamber is trying to keep Cohasset businesses in the forefront of their clients' (both new and potential) minds.

At their Wednesday morning meeting, a Plymouth-based IT company, Blue LAN Group, came to talk to the business owners about Linked In, a social networking site dedicated to professionals.

The Chamber of Commerce is also hosting a seminar on Constant Contact, a direct e-mail marketing tool, at Focus Gallery on Tuesday, March 24 from 8 to 9:30a.m. The Chamber of Commerce itself is using Constant Contact to distribute regular e-mail newsletters to its members and potential members.

Members each have their own reasons for joining, ranging from health insurance opportunity, networking, business and political updates from the town, civic and community involvement and business and marketing exposure.

race safe and fun.

"This is a small town race and our volunteers are ambassadors of Cohasset. The more friendly and helpful faces we have out there the better, especially since our registrations numbers at this point in time are the highest they've ever been," said Goodwin.

Representatives from the Cohasset Conservation Trust will have a booth at the fair. The Conservation Trust was founded in 1967 to preserve and promote the protection of open space in Cohasset and adjacent towns. They own over 100 acres of beach, woodland and meadows in Cohasset, Scituate and Hull, including such well-used sites as Bassing Beach and Great Brewster Woods.

According to Debbie Shadd, president of the Conservation Trust, the booth will have photos and maps of some of the many properties.

"We hope that the Recreation Fair will encourage more people to visit our properties and enjoy the natural beauty of Cohasset, and that the Fair as a whole will make people more aware of the many recreational opportunities Cohasset has to offer," Shadd wrote in an e-mail.

The Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters will be one of several youth sports groups setting up a booth at the Rec Fair. They plan to provide information about their programs to anyone interested. They'll get the kids moving by offering a fiddlestick ball toss, lacrosse trivia and a raffle to win a spot at an upcoming lacrosse clinic and lacrosse apparel.

"We are hoping to see a large turnout. It will be fun to explore all of the recreational opportunities available to us in our small yet very active town," said Joyce Driscoll, a Lacrosse Boosters board member. Roughly 300 kids participate in the lacrosse youth program and over 90 students are involved at the high school level.

Organizers of the Annual Cohasset Relay for Life will have a booth at the fair as well.

"We're always looking for an opportunities to promote the Relay and make people understand what the Relay is all about," said Harry St. Onge, chairman of the Cohasset Relay For Life. They are approaching the fair with a tri-fold goal of getting more teams to register, raising awareness of cancer and the event and promoting the involvement of cancer survivors. The Relay For Life event will be held on Friday, June 12 to Saturday, June 13.

Along with the participating organizations Carroll is hoping for a large turnout.

"I hope it becomes a huge annual event. This will be the place to be on March 22," he said with a smile.

Who will be at the Rec Fair?

- Recreation programs (Playground 2009, Summer Xtreme, Red Sox games, Lego weeks, fencing, Kitchen Kids etc.)

Cohasset's Meredith Kelly looks to work her way around Millis's Amy Ingraham during fourth quarter play in the Division 4 South Sectional final.

Millis edges Skippers in sectional final

By William Wassersug

One bounce was all it took to end a fantastic season and the chase for a second straight state title for the Cohasset girls basketball team in the Division 4 South Sectional championship game Friday night at Braintree High School.

Millis' Shannon Heffernan pulled in a long rebound and turned it into the game-winning jumper as the final buzzer went off, giving Millis a 51-49 comeback victory.

Cohasset looked like it might have the game in hand with a 47-42 lead with 1:43 left in the game, but Amy Ingraham knocked down a three to cut the Skipper lead to 47-45.

Sammi Lehr answered with two free throws to give Cohasset a four-point advantage with 57 seconds left.

Heffernan came back with a rebound and bucket inside seconds after a Cohasset turnover to make it 49-47 and after Tori Lehr couldn't quite bring in a long pass to break a Millis press, Molly Breen hit a pair from the line to tie the game 49-49.

Millis got the ball back with 11.9 seconds left and got the three shots and the winner.

Breen led Millis with 22 points, while Heffernan notched 10.

Tori Lehr had a big night for Cohasset with 17 points and Kelly added 14.

"I give credit to an awfully good Millis team. We knew from the beginning that this was going to be an even game to the end," Cohasset coach John LeVangie

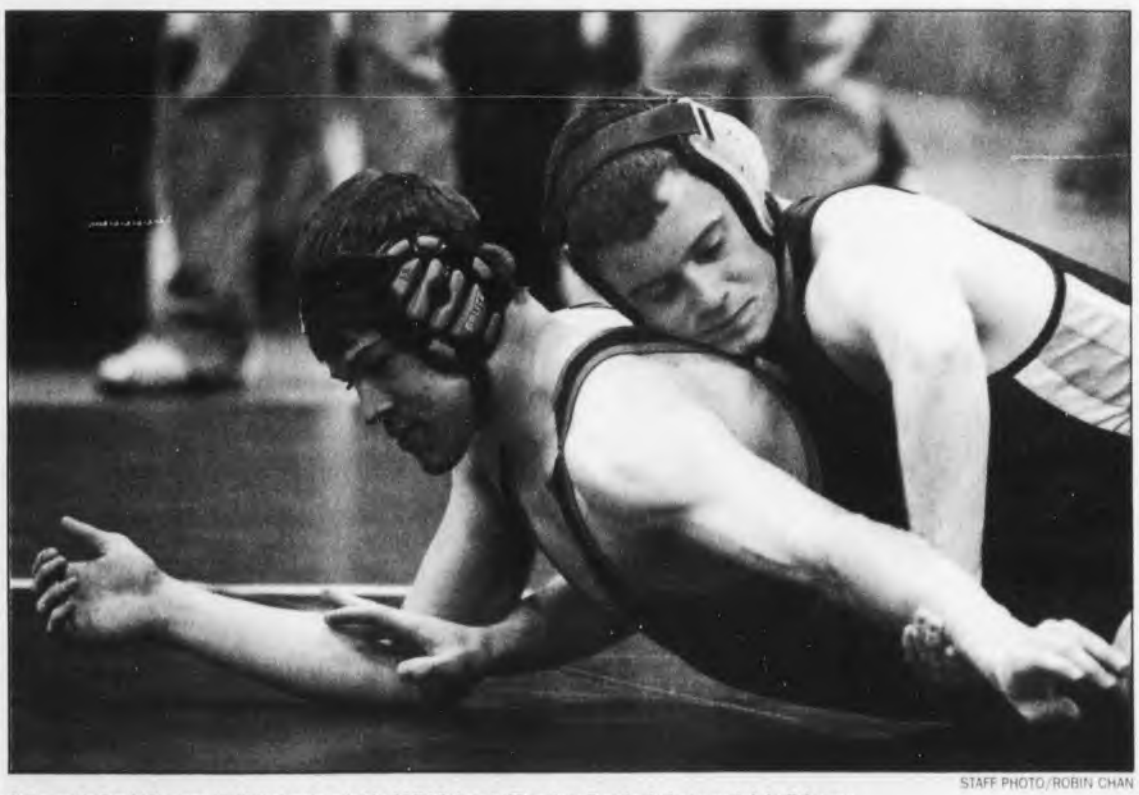
Reflections of a season on the mats

By Emily Toomey and CHS wrestling coach Torin Sweeney

The beginning of March marks the end of many things: wrestlers can stop starving, their parents can cease worrying, and the sales of Aspirin dramatically decrease due to the lack of buzzers and shouting. It is at this time where dedicated fans look back on the season to recall highlights, interesting moments, and the people that deserve appreciation.

Along with a strong season, the team was awarded the Sportsmanship and Professionalism award, by MIAA officials



To make reminiscing a bit easier, Coach Torin Sweeney has provided thoughts on each team member:

103 - Graden Foley and Gus Helbock: Two of the toughest kids on the team who wrestled-off for sectionals, with each match going into overtime. Foley's record was 7-6, placing fourth in the Cohasset tournament in his first varsity year. Helbock's record this season was 14-11, with his most memorable match pinning at Hingham for the Cohasset victory. He also placed fifth at Sectionals. Sweeney sincerely hopes that the two aren't in the same weight class next season because both are tremendous competitors who have earned varsity time.

112 - Matt Dooley: Dooley finished strong 15-13, ending the last part of the season by winning four out of five final dual matches. His highlights were almost knocking out the number three seed at the Sectionals and winning three matches at the last quad of the season, despite a pulled muscle.

125 - Derek Froio and Rudy Helbock: Froio was 10-6 and had just taken third in the Cohasset tournament when he got hurt against Stoughton in the middle of January. Sweeney believes he would have placed in the Sectionals and wrestled in the states if he hadn't been injured. However, he sees a promising comeback for Froio next season and is anticipating even greater persistence. When Froio went down, Helbock came out of a season injury to take his place. Although he missed the majority of the season, Helbock made the best of his disadvantage and had a

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Before we start, congratulations to Pembroke High School's Hannah Earner, who recently signed a letter of intent to play soccer at the Division 1 College of Holy Cross in Worcester.

Earner is a four-year varsity player at Pembroke.

According to mom, Joanne, Hannah's first choice was Holy Cross.

"She was pretty heavily recruited," Joanne said. "But Holy Cross was her first choice all along. She just had to get in academically."

The signing was a big accomplishment. Joanne said the team only brought in five players for the next season.

Hannah will join former Titans captain Chelsi Pugliese with the Crusaders and Cohasset's Maggie McGoldrick, who said she hoped to play there next fall.

Hannah learned about McGoldrick from friend Torey Hart, a club teammate and Cohasset soccer player headed to the University of Rhode Island.

Pugliese and Hannah played together during Hannah's freshman season.

Congratulations and good luck.

There was a time several years back, when I was working at a daily newspaper in New Hampshire when I began to dread basketball season.

Late-ending games, a tight deadline and the fact that I was stuck behind a desk most of the time waiting for coaches to call in scores that had to be written so very quickly started to, well, it started to take the fun from the season.

It didn't help that those were the years when the Celtics were also struggling mightily, so even an escape there wasn't so much fun.

I'm sure most of you remember those days.

This column is the exact opposite of that.

This is just a simple thank you note to the coaches, players and fans who made my return to basketball season a joy.

I honestly can't remember a high school basketball season that was as entertaining as this one was.

My poor heart took a bit of a beating.

Two nights in a row, the teams

great victory that aided in Cohasset's triumph over Scituate.

130 - Chase Stebbins and Colin Tarpey: Both Stebbins and Tarpey wrestled well on varsity, yet lacked enough experience to defeat the strong opponents within this weight class. Sweeney claims that they have made significant progress throughout the year, and will certainly return strong for next season.

135 - Robbie Hill: Hill's record was 7-13 in a very competitive weight class. Sweeney states that Hill constantly wrestled against the captains of competing teams and defeated Southeastern's captain in a major Cohasset league meet win.

140 - Jack Murphy: Murphy, who Sweeney considers Cohasset's most technical wrestler, finished with a final record of 24-10 with twelve pins. He placed fourth at the Cohasset tournament in a difficult weight class and ended third at the Sectionals. Just barely missing a placement at States, Sweeney expects Murphy to make it into the medal round next season.

145 - Andrew Littauer: Littauer finished 19-9 and defeated all his opponents but state-place winners. His highlights were the strong finish at third during the Sectionals and placing second at the Cohasset tournament. Sweeney sees Littauer as a strong leader for next season.

152 - David Toomey: Toomey ended 24-8 in what Sweeney considers a great finish to a good career. He took third place in the Sectionals in which he defeated his arch rival. Toomey is a four year varsity letter winner whose captainship from 2007-2009 was highly valued. He placed at the Cohasset tournament three times and twice at the Sectionals, finishing with a career record of 82-46 with 44 pins.

160 - Mike Froio: This year, Froio made the Wall of Fame with his fourth place finish at the States. He won the Sectional Championship with an overtime win and defeated quality opponents at the State tournament, qualifying him for the All-States. He was a captain from 2007-2009 who has placed at the Marshfield, Cohasset, Sectionals, and States tournaments.

171- Thomas Flibotte- Flibotte ended his sophomore wrestling year with 18-7. Sweeney states that Flibotte is able to win many matches based on athleticism and will break out next season with limitless possibilities. His highlight was beating an Oliver Ames opponent in overtime late in the season. Flibotte took fifth in the Sectionals and fourth in the Cohasset tournament.

189 - Cam Washak: Washak is only a second year wrestler who has shown great potential with a season record of 8-15. He had terrific wins in both the Hingham and Hanover matches, leading to Cohasset victories. Sweeney says Washak performed well under pressure and will be a solid starter for next season.

215 - Alex Kinnealey: Kinnealey had a good season in which he greatly improved, ending with an 8-10 record. He constantly battled much heavier opponents when he wrestled up a weight class and Sweeney calls him a tireless worker who is always applying new moves.

• Ross Collins-Wooley: Although Collins-Wooley was stuck behind Toomey and Froio for a starting position, Sweeney states that he made the best of the situation by working with the younger wrestlers and acting as a coach. A mid-season injury left him unable to compete in the second half of the season, but he continued to motivate his team as a Captain.

• Sean MacCarthy: MacCarthy ended 6-3 on varsity after backing up Murphy and Littauer. He had a huge win over Southeastern when many team members were out with injuries, and his fifteen JV victories reveal enormous talent.

• DJ Weiss: Weiss came out late after a football injury, but Sweeney believes he has learned quickly and is as strong as anyone on the team. Next season holds great promises for him.

• Justin Yeager- Yeager was 5-0 at the varsity level and 18-0 at the JV level, making him the only undefeated Cohasset wrestler. Although caught behind Toomey and Littauer for a varsity spot, Yeager managed to have some big varsity wins and has tremendous potential for next season.

• Matt Brooks and Billy Mack: Both wrestlers made excellent strides this season with a few strong varsity wins. Sweeney claims that their future on the Cohasset wrestling team couldn't be brighter.

• Chris Brash and Robert Weiss: Sweeney states that these two provided further proof that the freshmen wrestlers are amongst the toughest. Both improved throughout the season with notable JV wins and will be solid varsity wrestlers in the upcoming years.

A note from the coach:

Finishing 13-7-1 proved a solid season for a young team, highlighted by wins over BC High and Hingham. Unfortunately, the 119 and 275 pound weight classes had to be forfeited. The Cohasset kids that are not participating in a winter sport need to step-up and give wrestling a try. Yes it's hard, but it's great to do something different and challenge yourself! The Cohasset student body has at least six kids in each of those weight classes that could have wrestled and helped the team have a record of 18-3. We lost four matches directly because of forfeits. To students: try something hard and you might learn something. To parents: push your kids to participate! I would like to end this season with a special thanks to the Cohasset Wrestling Boosters for their support, Tim Treese for filming our matches, and Rachel Littauer for scoring.

Looking back on an exciting season

I've been watching and cheering brought games into the final seconds, and just a few nights before one of them came from way behind to win.

In Braintree I watched two barnburners last week, with Pembroke missing a three at the buzzer against Abington and the Cohasset girls ending their state title defense on a Millis buzzer-beater off a rebound that took just the right bounce for a very good Millis team.

Millis, by the way, went on to win the Division 4 State Title at the Garden.

For the Cohasset ladies, I have to give them all the credit for playing their hearts out. Win or lose, they're still champions, and one of the absolute best teams I've watched over the years.

Thanks to the band for keeping the crowd going. Was that Alan Parsons Project you were playing?

Abington won its next game, beating Scituate, then lost the state-semifinal at the Garden.

After watching the way the Green Wave went about beating the Sailors, it really made me think about how good Pembroke really was. It got the what-ifs going here.

In all honesty I was hoping for a Pembroke-Scituate sectional final.

I was loving the thought of Matt Devine against Scituate's big guys, and Sam Nagle against Rodney Beldo.

Either way, Pembroke was a joy to watch this season.

In Scituate, the boys 84-79 win over top-seeded Wareham was a wonder to watch.

I do have a question about Abington's mascot. Don't get me wrong, I really like it, but at a quick glance I couldn't tell if it was a green wave or a really ticked off alternate universe green Smurf.

While they couldn't repeat the magic in the final against Abington, Scituate was still fun to watch, and my seven-year old daughter still asks about Rodney Beldo, who is now her favorite basketball player.

Watching them play, I personally became a big fan of Andrew McCarthy, Scituate's big center, who at times dominates like nobody I've seen, and Anthony Parham, who just comes to play hard and every once in a while makes your jaw drop with a powerful move that you just don't expect.

Speaking of the Scituate boys, I'm going to pass along a thought from coach Matt Poirier that does have merit.

Poirier wanted to know why it's called boys basketball rather than men's basketball.

When I look at these players, a lot of the time with my neck craned upward, yes, I'm short, talk to them and watch them play, I can understand his point.

"I said it last year too. One thing I'd like changed is that the state calls them boys," Poirier said after the finals loss. None of my fellows are boys. They're young men. I'd like the word changed. Young men's basketball."

I'll go with that thought, and congratulate Poirier for a fine season, and for sportsmanship, crediting Abington for playing better than his team, rather than making any excuses.

I'll make one.

It was my fault.

After I wore red and blue Clark Kent colors to an earlier tough win, I started wearing those colors to all the Scituate games I went to as a little superstition.

Saturday at UMass I went with a fancier black and gray look.

This, of course, goes with my blaming myself for last season's Sox loss to the Rays when I couldn't find my mini replica Red Sox bat before game seven. We all know what happened next.

Don't think I'm leaving out the Cohasset men's team.

They gave me two of my favorite moments of the season with two amazing wins over Norwell.

I'm sure you were either there or read about them and the heroics in both games.

Have to say Dan Martin was another of those big guys I loved to watch.

With coach Bo Ruggiero at the helm, I can see Cohasset getting even stronger over the next few seasons.

Hockey was also pretty exciting this season – exciting and a little unpredictable.

With Norwell, Scituate and Pembroke going head-to-head throughout the season, I never really had an idea who was going to win, or if anybody was going to.

Early on I would have guessed Pembroke, then I saw the Pembroke/Norwell game in Hingham where Ryan Kulik scored with 14 seconds left for a tie.

That just confused me more.

Then there was Cohasset, who made a sweet tournament run, downing Avon and Medway in the first two rounds. Both teams were favored on paper. Guess that's why you play the games. Nice job guys.

I guess the point here is that of the four towns I cover, I was lucky enough to have five really, really good hockey teams.

Congratulations to Norwell for getting to the top of the ladder and good luck tonight.

Gotta thank the Whitman-Hanson/Pembroke girls hockey team, who also got the heart pumping with a shootout win over Concord-Carlisle in a tournament quarterfinal game last week.

One thing about that game, though, is that it made me remember one thing. I'm in New England now. My feet still haven't warmed up after that game in Canton, and I've already been to the beach twice this week.

Ok, my kids wanted to see the beach and then collect rocks when it warmed up over the weekend, but it's still the beach.

That was more that I was at the beach in three years in Florida.

Still, I'm about ready for spring.

Seventh grade hoopsters going dancing

Cohasset's Seventh Grade Boys Patriot League Travel Basketball Team, after dropping a tough game against defending champion Silver Lake on Saturday night, capped a strong regular season with a playoff clinching win against Pembroke this past Sunday.

On Saturday night, Cohasset traveled to the Halifax Middle School gym to face the defending champion Silver Lake squad.

Silver Lake came our firing, bent on avenging a loss to the Boys in Blue last month.

The Cohasset five battled throughout, but Silver Lake's fast break attack ultimately carries the day (night) and Silver Lake earned a hard fought win.

In defeat, Cohasset was led by the strong inside play of Mark "Skywalker' Rattenbury, who relentless attacked the rim and led all scorers with 14 points.

Sunday dawned a new day, and with spring fever in the air, Cohasset closed out the regular season at home against Pembroke, needing a win to clinch the 5th seed and a rematch in the playoffs against Silver Lake.

The Cohasset Five came out firing, and its relentless press fueled the Big Blue attack.

Rocco Laugelle forced several turnovers, and Rocco (7 first half points) and Rattenbury (10 first half points) led the Big Blue in first half scoring.

Brendan "the General" O'Connell relentlessly pushed the ball up the floor from the point, and the General and center Joe "Buck" Buckley combined to shred the Pembroke press and create scoring opportunities for Skywalker, along with Dakota "D-Train" Achin, and Liam "Sir Charles" Burke. At the half, Cohasset held a nine point lead.

Cohasset put the game away in the first minutes of the second half, keyed by the sweet shooting tandem of Henry "Chopper" Brown and Chris "Hoops" Haggerty, and the rebounding and inside defense of Mark "the Eraser" Brown. Mark McKenna efficiently ran the offense from the point, and Jack "the Magnet" Conte and Doug "the Professor" Fitzgerald played stifling D on the wings. At the final horn, after a strong team effort by all, Cohasset walked off with a playoff clinching 44-25 win.

On to March Madness! Cohasset now travels to Halifax for a 2 pm Saturday showdown with defending champion Silver Lake, with the winner to face #1 seed Bridgewater at Halifax's Middle School Gym on Sunday at 2 pm. Go Blue!

said. "It came down to the last shot. I couldn't be prouder of these kids. It was a great effort."

The Skippers led early, taking a 12-5 lead in the first quarter.

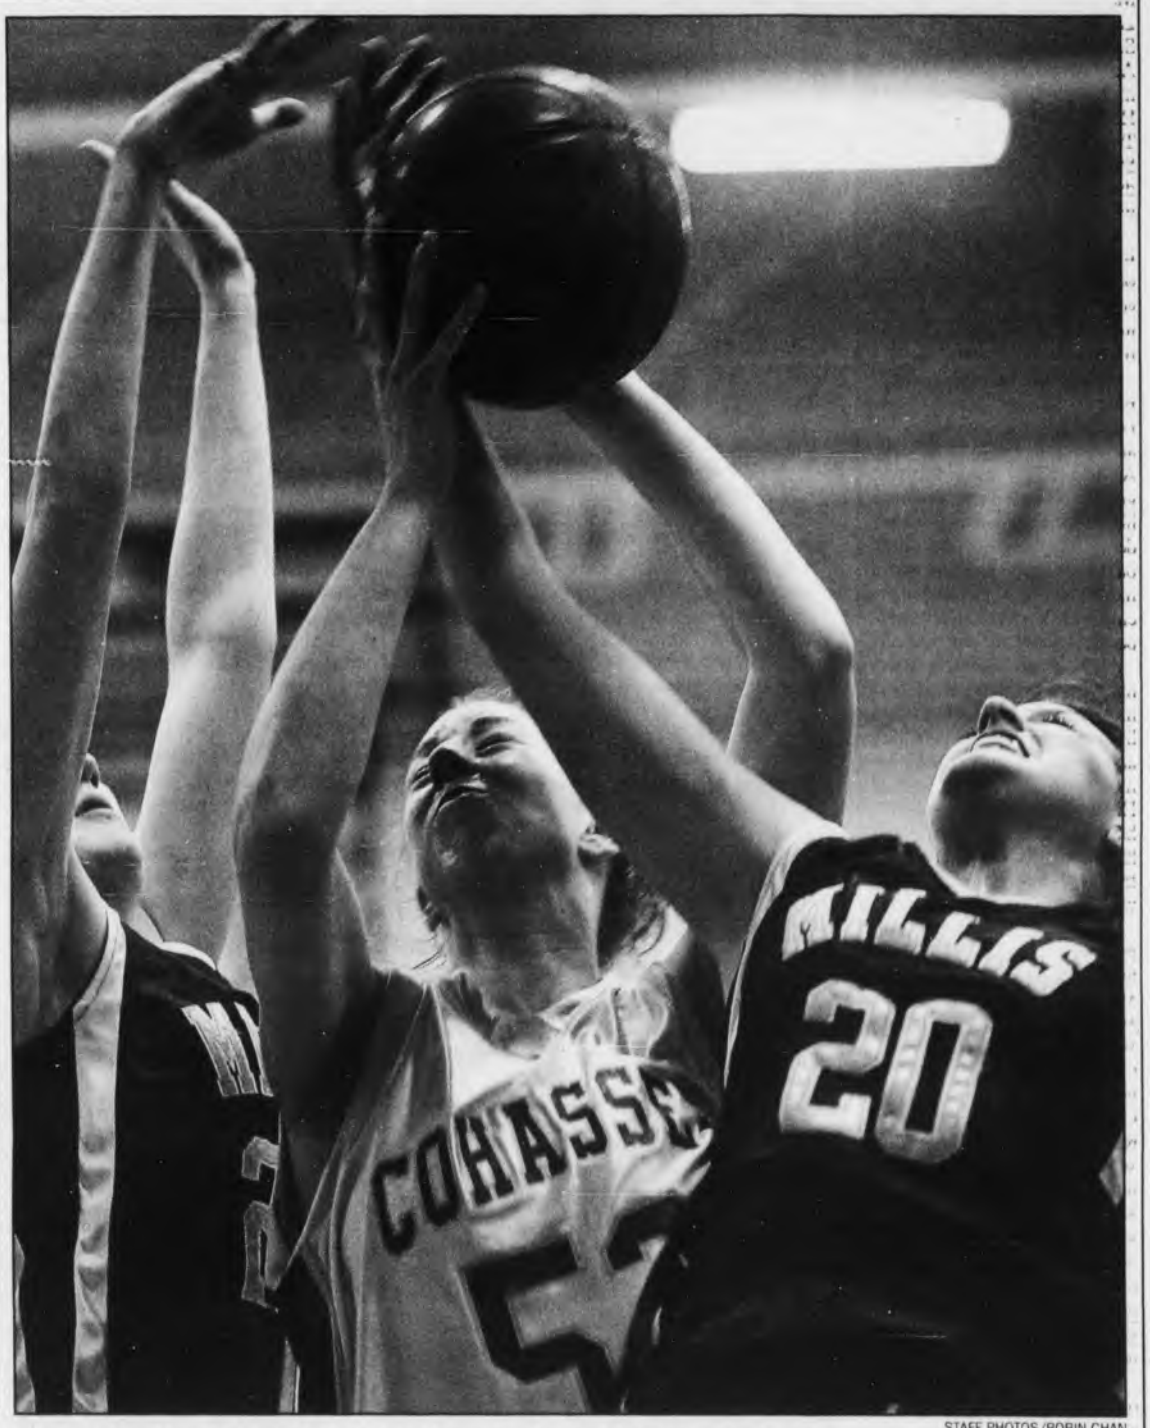
Millis wasn't ging away though.

The Mohawks came back to cut the lead to 12-11 at the end of the quarter before Cohasset upped the lead to 18-11 on a Tori Lehr three and a steal and drive by Kelly.

Millis responded with 12 straight points, taking Cohasset out of its game with a full-court press to gain a 23-18 advantage and led 23-20 at the half.

"We were ready for the press," LeVangie said. "We just didn't execute well."

Cohasset regrouped and began to beat the press in the third quarter, taking back the lead 26-25.



The quarter ended in a 30-30 tie and the teams hung close until Tori Lehr hit a putback inside and the freebie for a 41-38 lead with 4:12 left.

The loss was just Cohasset's second of the season and the fourth in two years.

Millis advanced to the Division 4 state final at the TD BankNorth Garden on Monday, where it defeated Georgetown 60-43.

Samantha Crough grabs the offensive rebound and draws the foul while hitting the basket during third quarter action.

Cohasset's Sammi Lehr (52) battles for the ball with Millis's Amy Ingraham during second quarter action.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

FROM CAMP TO COLLEGE:
FIVE TIPS TO EASE THE TRANSITION

The transition to college can mean facing changes to one's lifestyle, but summer camp can help ease that transition to independence.

The American Camp Association, New England has compiled a list of some of the major advantages and skills children learn that help them make a smoother transition into college life after participating in overnight camp programs.

Five Life Skills Overnight campers learn:

1) Separation: Knowing how to survive and thrive in a residential community away from home and away from parents and family is key. Resident camp experiences boost independence simply because children get to experience life away from their families.

2) Self-awareness/empowerment: Living away from home in the residential community of summer camp enables children to learn all kinds of key lessons about themselves and the unique role they are capable of playing in a group. Many individuals with very valuable group development skills discovered them at camp.

3) Social skills: Camp experiences build social skills. Living closely with strangers in a small space (cabin, bunk, tent, or yurt) provides added incentive to learn the give and take necessary for successful community living. The ability to get along with others and tried and true methods of making friends make the transition to college much easier for experienced campers.

4) Independence: Camp requires children to take care of themselves and care of their stuff. And, when problems arise, camp living enables children to rely on themselves for solutions or to reach out to others who can assist them. A rescue from a loving family member isn't an option. It's not an option at college either.

5) Community Building Skills: Experienced resident campers know first-hand how to be members of the community, a tremendously important skill in making a successful transition to a new college or university environment. Whether it's tapping the expertise of others who know the ropes, discovering the most important resources, or identifying the people in the know, community building skills are essential survival skills.

Cohasset Maritime Institute expanding high school rowing

Cohasset Maritime Institute is offering an expanded High School Rowing Program this spring for all interested South Shore Region High School Students, novice to experienced.

The new program includes added days to make smaller class sizes with more individual attention, as well as added coaches, including a recent U.S. National Team Rower and New England boarding school rowing coach.

The program begins the week of March 30th and runs twelve weeks. Classes are twice weekly and begin with land workouts, including skills training, erg time, running and strength training. Once our New England weather permits getting on the water, teams will be put together based on individual assessments, determined by the coaches.

More information as well as downloadable forms and waiver can be found on the CMI website, www.rowcmi.com.

Please mail the applications to CMI 40 Parker Ave., Cohasset MA 02025 or dropped in the CMI mailbox no later than Wednesday, March 18th 2009.

Any questions please call Susan Wilcox 781.338.1998 or Lisa Hewitt Dick 781.383.0204.

Everett A. Morse

Lived in Cohasset

Everett Abraham Morse, 96, of Hanover and Cohasset, died March 4, 2009 at Harbor House in Hingham.

Born in Boston, he was the son of the late Irvin L. Morse and Margaret E. (Rumer) Morse. He graduated from Milton High School and the Norfolk County Agricultural School. In 1933, he moved with his parents to Hanover, where he established Twin Cedars Farm on Whiting Street, raising poultry and producing hatching eggs which were sent all over the world.

In 1942 he married his beloved Eleanor Murphy and they raised seven children working side by side on the farm. Everett's entire life was devoted to his family, friends and community.

He lovingly cared for his wife Eleanor until her death in 2001. During his wife's illness, he was an active member of the Alzheimer's caregiver's support group in Hanover and continued his involvement long after her death, lending his experience to others. In later years, he was a member of the Chanticleers, enjoying the camaraderie of his peers on the South Shore.

After living in Hanover for more than 70 years, Mr. Morse moved to Cohasset in 2005 to live with his youngest son, Sam and his family. In 2007, he moved to Allerton House in Hingham where he lived very happily and independently until his recent illness, making many friends and sharing life stories with his fellow residents.

Mr. Morse will be lovingly remembered by his four daughters and three sons, Marcia Morse and her partner Louis MacKeil of Chatham; Susan Wienczkowski of Lafayette, Colo.; Margaret Anglin and her husband Jeremy of Waterloo, Ontario; Eleanor Haskell and her husband Stephen of Seattle, Wash.; Everett Morse III and his wife Jennifer of Baltimore, Ma.; Martin Morse and his wife Karen of Savoy, Ill., and Samuel Morse and his wife Patricia of Cohasset. He also leaves 12 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren, many nieces and nephews, neighbors and friends.

A funeral service will be held on Friday, March 13 at 11:30 a.m. at the Magoun-Biggins Funeral Home, 135 Union Street, Rockland. Interment will follow at Hanover Center Cemetery. To sign the online guest book, visit www.magoun-biggins.com

Donations in his memory may be made to the Scituate Animal Shelter, PO Box 823, Scituate, Ma 02066.

Elizabeth Rose Cosgray

Formerly of Cohasset

Elizabeth Rose Cosgray

Elizabeth Rose Cosgray, 82, of Sacramento, Calif., former resident of Cohasset, died peacefully of Parkinson's Disease at her daughter Sara's home surrounded by her loving family and friends.

Born in London, England, she was the daughter of Lillian and George Boorman, and was born in London, England, Jan. 30, 1927. She immigrated to the United States in 1957. She was a professional travel agent and traveled the world extensively.

She was preceded in death by her first husband, John Donald Malone, and is survived by her spouse Donald L. Cosgray.

For 30 years she enjoyed the home that she and her husband Donald Cosgray designed and built on seven acres, known as Burr Meadow, in Cohasset. There she enjoyed entertaining, her gourmet club, gardening, needlepoint and the company of family and friends. She was a voracious reader all her life and instilled the love of reading in all her children.

In 2002, she and Donald retired to Sacramento, Calif., where she continued with her love of gardening and reading.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Cosgray leaves five daughters and their families; Diane and spouse Fred Shane of Spotslyvania, Va., Sara Malone of Sacramento, Calif. Linda and her spouse Chris Carlson of Rindge, N.H., Francesca Ernst of Beverly, and Judith Elizabeth Malone of Quincy. She also leaves step-daughter's Betty and her spouse Ken Twombley of Dudley, N.C. and Brenda and her spouse Steven Caswell of Weymouth, and their families. Her grandchildren include Jennifer and Larry Shane, and Casey Carlson. She is also leaves close friends, Valerie Knippschild, Robert Oakes, godson of Sara and grandson of special friends Diana and Paul Caravallo.

A celebration of Mrs. Cosgray's life will be held at the First Parish Church, 22 North Main St., Cohasset, March 19, at 4 p.m., with a reception to follow. A private internment will take place at St. Joseph's Cemetery, Boston, on March 20.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests that you consider a donation to The Parkinson Association of Northern California (PANC), 900 Fulton Avenue, Suite 100-5, Sacramento, CA 95825.

Drop off plan goes into effect

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

Hello everybody, and happy Friday the 13th! However, the only horrors that this infamous day holds for those at CHS is the potential sight of boys in skirts at the Mr. Skipper pageant tonight. Monday, on the other hand, may have brought some horrors for some due to midterm reports that were sent out. Also on Monday, we began a new drop-off system for the morning: Middle school parents dropping off students will still go to the main driveway in the morning, but parents dropping off high school students will now enter the other driveway and turn around in the faculty parking lot. This change was made to hopefully alleviate the long line of cars in the morning that often makes me late. I, for one, will be thrilled if this helps in any way to prevent any further tardies.

Tonight at 7pm is Mr. Skipper! In only a matter of hours, a new candidate will be given the noble title of being our beloved Mr. Skipper by exhibiting their talent, fashion, and intellect. And it's sure to be a full house tonight, so grab your seats early!

The drama club put on their final performance of the one-act festival entry, "Crimes of the Heart" this past Thursday. Although the cast and crew didn't advance to the semi-finals in the Massachusetts Drama Festival, they still performed great both at Prelims and at our very own auditorium. Other sad news is that our girl's basketball team lost last Friday against some far-away town called Millis. They played a great season, though, and we look forward to seeing them do it all again and more next year! And with that, I leave you all to a wonderful weekend! Arrivederci!

Top spot at regional Spelling Bee

Comcast has announced that Cohasset's Reed Westcott will compete at the Comcast South Shore Regional Spelling Bee. Westcott, a seventh-grader, won the qualifying bee at Cohasset Middle School this month, earning the opportunity to compete in this spring's Comcast South Shore Regional Spelling Bee, the local qualifier for the Scripps National Spelling Bee at the end of May in Washington, D.C.

"We are very excited to see Reed at the regional competition and look forward to sending a student from the South Shore to Washington, D.C., to compete at the national bee in May," said Mary McLaughlin, vice president of Comcast in Boston and southeastern Massachusetts. "We are proud to be sponsoring the Comcast South Shore Regional Spelling Bee as part of our ongoing commitment to invest in the local communities we serve."

The South Shore Spelling Bee will take place at Lombardo's in Randolph on Saturday, March 21. Westcott will compete against 25 other local students for the opportunity to move on to the Scripps National Spelling Bee.

"We are grateful to Comcast for sponsoring this competition, which is such a great opportunity for local students on the South Shore to receive public recognition as academic 'All Stars,'" said Lisa Morrissey of LIDO Consulting Group, who organizes the regional bee. "This is a great showcase for local students who want to put their spelling knowledge to the ultimate test."

Pilgrim Arena offers scholarships

Applications for ten $5,000 scholarships are available at the Pilgrim Skating Arena, 75 Recreation Park Drive in Hingham.

Interested seniors must pick up and sign for the application in person at the arena pro shop. Completed applications must be returned by Wednesday, April 15.

Applicants will be judged by members of the Scholarship Committee of the Board of Directors at Pilgrim Arena.

For more information, please call Hoby Taylor, 781-749-6660.

Kindergarten registration at Osgood School

Kindergarten registration for the 2009-2010 school year takes place daily, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., at Osgood School. Parents will be asked to indicate interest in full-day kindergarten or half-day kindergarten at the time of registration. Parents are encouraged to register early to facilitate planning for the program.

Children who turn 5 on or before Sept. 1, 2009, are eligible to attend kindergarten. A birth certificate and proof of residency are required in order to register.

Call Osgood School at 781-383-6117 for more information.

IT'S HAPPENING

Unicorn Singers

The Unicorn Singers will celebrate their 30th anniversary on April 4 with a performance of Te Deum x4. The concert will feature four composers' settings of the sacred text, spanning four centuries. The concert will take place at House of Prayer, 916 Main St., Hingham, at 8 p.m., on Saturday, April 4.

Through the years, some of the South Shore's finest singers have performed in the chorus and many will return to join current singers for this special event. A small orchestra of trumpets, oboes, timpani and organ will complete the ensemble.

Tickets in advance are $15 at Nobles in Hingham Square.

Alzheimer's group

Cohasset Elder Affairs is seeking individuals caring for a loved one with Alzheimer's disease to attend five 90-minute weekly group sessions, with approximately five to 10 other family members. The sessions will offer information on AD, its symptoms, tips for improving communication and interaction, and strategies for reducing caregiver stress. The program is under the direction of Dr. Maureen O'Connor, Boston University Alzheimer's Disease Center. The person with AD is not involved in any way.

Call Cohasset Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112 to register or for morer information.

Walker to preach at Beechwood Congregational Church

Beechwood Congregational Church, 51 Church St., will present the Rev. Liz Walker as a guest preacher at 10 a.m., on Sunday, March 22. "Jesus' Sacrificial Love" will be the subject of Rev. Walker's sermon. All are invited. There will be refreshments and fellowship following the service in Merritt Hall.

COURTESY PHOTO

Rev. Liz Walker will be in Cohasset on March 22.

Rev. Walker is an ordained elder at Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church in Jamaica Plain, where she works in the youth worship ministry. She is also an entrepreneur, documentary film producer and a humanitarian working in East Africa. When God called her to the ministry, she stepped down from the WBZ News anchor desk, after 21 years as one of Boston's most popular television journalists.

A 2005 graduate of Harvard Divinity School, Rev. Walker has long been involved in many community service organizations and projects. She has a special interest in the victims and survivors of domestic violence, and helped found the Jane Doe Safety Fund, a grassroots organization that supports domestic abuse shelters and safe houses around the Commonwealth.

In the summer of 2001, Rev. Walker traveled to Sudan on a fact-finding mission on the controversial slave trade there. Sudan is the scene of the worst human rights atrocities in the world. She was so outraged by what she saw, that she co-founded the humanitarian organization "My Sister's Keeper," which focuses on economic and educational initiatives for Sudanese women and girls. Rev. Walker shot her own footage during that first journey and produced a number of television specials including one that earned the Edward R. Murrow Award from the New England Radio Television News Director's Association in 2002. She has since returned to Sudan many times and has completed a new documentary "A Glory from the God," which profiles the work of "My Sister's Keeper."

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

The Best & The Brightest

Braintree Forum, Cohasset Mariner, Duxbury Reporter, Hanover Mariner, The Hingham Journal, Kingston Reporter, Marshfield Mariner, Norwell Mariner, Old Colony Memorial, Pembroke Mariner & Reporter, Scituate Mariner, Wareham Courier, Weymouth News

We know there are many bright, talented and caring young adults in our communities. Coming the week of May 24th, a special section entitled "The Best & The Brightest" will appear in the COHASSET MARINER to celebrate their accomplishments.

Please help us find these remarkable teens and young adults by filling out the nomination form on this page. You can nominate an individual between the ages of 16 and 21 who, you believe, deserves to be honored, whether it be for academic achievement, volunteerism, athletics, artistic acumen or the pursuit of excellence in another field. Here's your opportunity to get involved.

You can bring the form to the Community Newspaper Company office at 182 Standish Ave., Plymouth, MA 02360; mail it to Beth Doyle at the same address; or fax it to 508-591-6601.

Outdoor exploration on Big Island, Hawaii, from volcanoes to snow

Tania Mejer
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

PUNA, HAWAII — We blew past a "road closed" sign at the end of Highway 130.

Beyond the taillights of the SUV we were following was pure darkness. I wondered if my mother and I would have to explain to the car rental agency why we had gotten stuck late at night in a desolate lava field, miles from Hawaii Volcanoes National Park.

But when a glowing red river came into sight, it was so thrilling such thoughts didn't matter anymore.

We were with about 30 locals (some of whom had generously offered to let us follow them) standing inches away from flowing molten lava at the Kalapana viewing area — the caldera of active Kilauea volcano about 20 miles away. Shades of red, white and gray swirled, gurgled and popped in a lava pool, occasionally spraying molten rock in miniature fireworks-like displays.

It's no wonder some locals packed a cooler just to watch — this process of earth expansion as lava flows to the sea is mesmerizing.

Nearby, two kids poked red-hot rock with a signpost. But others warned you really don't want to take a chance of angering Pele, one of the island's most revered deities, the goddess of fire and creator of this spectacular display.

As the lava moves, so does viewing. A week earlier, to see the flow you'd have to hike for hours, we were told. The day after our visit, authorities closed off the area, later reopening it after setting up a "safe" viewing site. Pele is unpredictable.

When the lava was beginning its inexorable slide earlier in the week, we were busy kayaking on the other side of the island in South Kona's Kealakekua Bay, beneath lava tubes in towering cliffs with Kona Boys (www.konaboys.com). After we propelled ourselves through the surf into the calm bay, a school of spinner dolphins gracefully approached. We watched them play while our guide related some history — including the use of the lava tubes as burial ground for royalty.

Some of the islands numerous waterfalls can be found at Akaka Falls State Park.

Beneath our kayak, an extensive reef teemed with aquatic life that revealed history of a different sort. Kealakekua Bay is considered the island's prime snorkeling spot. Our best snorkeling adventure came at night, a little farther to the north.

Huge flashlights in hand, my mom and I plunged off the side of a boat operated by Bottom Time (www.bottomtimehawaii.com) into the darkness. With the waters illuminated by divers from below and us from above, we waited patiently for the guests of honor. I knew they were close when I heard shouts of excitement rendered unintelligible through snorkels.

Slowly, a thin, alien-like wing came into view, and the next thing I knew, I was face-to-face with a manta ray, giant mouth agape to feast on the plankton that our lights attracted. Within minutes, dozens of the gentle giants - some of their wingspans more than double my height — curled their horns while they swooped and rolled below, tickling my legs as they dined.

Between molten lava and manta rays, it's hard to imagine a better use of the evening hours. But as astronomers know, the sno-capped summit of Mauna Kea - a dormant volcano 13,796 feet above sea level — is perfect for taking in the celestial view. We shivered through a glorious sunset there before a guide took us own the icy road several thousand feet (and up several degrees in temperature) to identify constellations. We even got to see Saturn through a small telescope.

Lava fields at the Kalapana viewing area in Puna.

Some locals like to play in the wintertime snow — bringing surfboards up the mountain for use as snowboards. Others haul snow to build snowmen on the beach.

But I was happy to trade in my parka for a bikini at swimming holes and beaches where giant sea turtles sun on the rocks.

The Big Island's diverse terrain also includes the dense green rainforest and fields of Waipio Valley, where Ohia Lehua trees are plentiful. Our guide from Hawaiian Walkways (www.hawaiianwalkways.com), explained the tree was named for two lovers who had angered a jealous Pele, and that to pick the beautiful red, urchin-like flowers of this tree would be to separate them.

When my mom and I pressed on to Ka'u, the southernmost point of the United States, I vowed to jump off the imposing cliffs into the sea like locals do. Alas, the waters were rough, no one else was jumping, and I couldn't see the way back up. After all our Big Island adventures, I think my mom was just as happy I didn't take the plunge.

WICKED LOCAL Web Jams

Listen up and vote for your favorite band

The Jackson Wetherbee Band and Eyeball Kid rock the Wicked Local Web jams stage this week. Check out wickedlocalcohasset.com and click on the Web jams link on the homepage.

Tune into "Sally Sees" by JWB, a South Shore-based band playing funky acoustic rock blended with blues and reggae. Then give a listen to "Out of Blood" by indie-rock band Eyeball Kid, another talented South Shore group.

Be sure to vote for your favorite, as many times as you like — voting is unlimited. Deadline for voting in this match up is Sunday, March 29.

Ready to rock? Wicked Local Web Jams is calling all local bands to gig online. We are currently lining up bands for our second Web Jams bracket of eight set to launch in May. E-mail your band bio, photo and MP3 files to Alice Coyle at acoyle@cnc.com or Seth Jacobson at sjacobso@cnc.com. For information, call 508-967-3505.

Police work goes to school

Officers visit CHS law class

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

If you stumbled upon the high school student parking lot on Wednesday morning, you may have thought something was awry. A police cruiser had its blue lights flashing and another car was parked in front of it. Three uniformed police officers stood among a crowd of teenagers. And a teenage driver was being pulled from the car and handcuffed.

However, if you looked closer and you would have seen this was not a real-life arrest, rather the whole scene was part of an orchestrated learning experience for the high school's Introduction to Law class.

During the month of March, uniformed Cohasset police officers have been making weekly visits to the high school to give the students a flavor of what enforcing the law is all about.

While sharing stories about the crime of Cohasset to talking about search and seizure to visiting the police station, the police officers and students gain a rapport.

"The students really enjoy it and their feedback tells us that they gain insight and appreciation for the work of police officers," said social studies teacher Jack Buckley.

Schools mull over field fees

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Inch by inch, the School Committee is moving toward a final resolution on their long debated facility use policy. With a full audience of youth sports and booster club leaders, the School Committee tried to iron out the issues with field usage fees Wednesday night.

The discussion is not a new one, but has reached a point where the School Committee and the users feel a consensus needs to be reached. The Recreation Department recently implemented a field-use policy for their fields (Beechwood, Milliken and Main Street baseball fields). The School Committee has an updated draft of their facilities fee schedule, but wants to be sure it is fair and equitable.

"We're trying to come up with some policy that's fair and accomplishes what we're trying to accomplish and what recreation is trying to accomplish," said School Committee chairman Rick Flynn.

As a bit of background, some number of years ago the $200,000 line item for the maintenance of the fields was moved from the school budget to the Department of Public Works.

Yet, the school budget still has regular and incidental costs associated with the use of their buildings and fields, Flynn said in a phone interview. The school pays for the irrigation system at the Deer Hill field as well as the water, heat and light bills for all the school buildings. The high school gym floor needs re-finishing every year. It is the School Committee's feeling that part of these bills should be partially borne by groups

Resident to head to Guinea with local donations

Elsa and Nate Fever, 4, hold items that will be donated to the West African Children's Fund.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When Cohasset resident Cheryl Fever travels to West Africa in May, she knows is going to make a difference. With the generosity of local residents and business, Fever will arrive to impoverished villages in Guinea with boxes and boxes of clothes, shoes, books and personal care items.

Fever is one of the directors of a non-profit group, the West African Children's Fund, Inc. Founded in 2008, the organization provides support and services to poor, rural villages of Guinea, located on the west coast of Africa. They work closely with individuals who live and work in the villages to ensure the money and items donated will build a foundation to a better life.

Since the beginning of the year, Fever has been seeking donations from local businesses and residents. Through her efforts, she has gathered literally a garage full of cardboard boxes with clothes, toys, and books as well as $15,000 in monetary donations. Fever will leave on her third trip to Guinea in May.

On her month-long trip in May/June, Fever has plans to purchase a parcel of land for one of the villages in addition to doling out the items.

"We want to help the people be self-sustaining by empowering them," said Fever, 33. The farmland would allow the village to grow food and raise livestock.

Vital to the effort in her eyes is building a place where the children can get some sort of education.

"I want the children to be able to learn how to write their own name, read French, just basic skills," Fever

Cohasset Mariner 'drop box'

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The large, brown drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Shuttle bus loop to be discussed

The public is invited to learn more about the proposed 7-mile shuttle bus loop designed to connect the train station with Cohasset neighborhoods and business centers. Planning Board member Clark Brewer, who is leading this effort, will speak at Cohasset Library from 7:30 to 9 p.m., on Tuesday, March 24. To read more about the shuttle bus, refer to the article in the March 6 Mariner.

Veterans luncheons are scheduled

A Veterans Camaraderie Luncheon was initiated in September 2008, at Hearth 'n Kettle, 151 Main St., Weymouth, at the Main Street intersection. By popular demand, the luncheons will continue beginning at noon, on the third Wednesday of each month. Luncheons are scheduled for April 15 and May 20.

The luncheons allow the sharing of war anecdotes and help veterans avoid isolation, depression and collateral medical conditions that are often serious side effects of their experiences. Cost is $16 for a great meal. No reservations or prepayment are required. All veterans are welcome.

For information, call coordinators Paul Salvas at 781-337-0533 or Joe McElroy at 781-383-0505.

Police Beat

Registry query leads police to car in hit and run

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A Cohasset woman has been charged with drunk driving after a hit and run accident involving two people on bicycles Saturday (March 14).

Witnesses at the scene along Route 3A by Sohier Street were able to provide police with a description of the type of car; a side-view mirror from the car was also found at the scene.

Police received numerous 911 calls at 3:15 p.m. about two people on bicycles who had been struck by a Nissan Altima that had fled the scene. The bicyclists were traveling north when the car that apparently swerved inside the fog line hit them from behind.

Officers administered first aid to the victims, a 51-year-old Hull man and a 30-year-old Quincy woman.

The Cohasset Fire Department transported both victims to South Shore Hospital where the man was treated and released. The woman was later transferred to Brigham and Women's Hospital with serious injuries.

Chief James Hussey said police queried the Registry of Motor Vehicles about how many of that type of car and color were registered in town. Another call also came in about a car fitting that description that was swerving along N. Main Street.

At 3:46 p.m., a Cohasset officer located the suspect vehicle at a residence on North Main Street. After further investigation, the operator, Pamela E. Hickey, 64, of Cohasset, was arrested. Hickey was arraigned Monday (March 16) in Quincy District Court on charges of operating under the influence of alcohol and causing bodily injury; leaving the scene after causing personal injury; failure to stay within marked lanes; and failure to slow for bicyclists.

At arraignment, Hickey was told to abstain from alcohol and drugs, with random testing, and to attend an outpatient substance abuse program.

Witnesses at the scene along Route 3A by Sohier Street were able to provide police with a description of the type of car; a side-view mirror from the car was also found at the scene.

Drug arrest

A 20-year-old Cohasset man was arrested for illegal distribution of marijuana after two police officers observed an alleged drug transaction in the Town Parking Lot on Tuesday (March 10) at about 2:30 p.m.

Two Cohasset officers were talking as they were parked side-by-side in unmarked cars when they observed a car with four occupants enter the parking lot. The occupants appeared to be looking for someone, police said. Minutes later another car pulled into the lot and the officer recognized the passenger as someone who had been involved in drug transactions in the past. The officers continued to observe a drug transaction take place and made the arrest.

Chief Hussey said decriminalization of penalties for possession of less than an ounce of marijuana in Massachusetts does not effect distributing the drug. Distributing less then an ounce is still a criminal offense, he said.

OUI arrest

Police arrested a 28-year-old Mattapan man on Hull Street in Cohasset at about 9:20 p.m. on Wednesday (March 11) after Hingham police reported an erratic driver in their town. The Hingham officer caught up with the car on Hull Street in Cohasset and asked permission to make the stop in our town, Chief Hussey said. Cohasset police were able to charge the man with operating under the influence of alcohol and marked lanes violation based on their investigation and the observations provided by Hingham.

Summonsed

A 42-year-old Scituate woman is being summonsed for driving after insurance revocation following a traffic stop on lower King Street on Thursday (March 12) at about 1:45 p.m. An officer on patrol on Route 3A conducted a random check on the car's plate through the mobile data terminal in the cruiser that revealed the car had no insurance. The officer pulled the car over on lower King Street.

Dead end

The driver of an 18-wheeler did not realize that Steep Rocks off Jerusalem Road was a dead-end and got "stuck" there being unable to turnaround after trying to take a detour around some roadwork, police said. An officer provided assistance in directing the truck that eventually got out of there. A shrub owned by a resident was damaged during the incident and the truck company will replace the shrub, police said. The incident occurred at about 4:40 p.m. on Monday (March 9).

Power outage

A motorist, who reported traveling about mid-way along Forest Avenue when she heard a loud bang and fireworks came raining down on her car, had actually witnessed a power outage occurring in the area due to multiple fuses being blown. She called the station at 5:37 a.m. on Wednesday (March 11). For the next two hours, police were subsequently showered with calls from Surry Drive, Jerusalem Road, Forest Avenue, Hull Street, Grace Drive, Spindrift Lane, and Heather Drive about power outages. National Grid responded and made the necessary repairs.

Accident

A 2000 Honda, owned by a Plymouth resident, was unoccupied and parked on Elm Court, when it was struck by a 2000 Dodge driven by a Cohasset woman who as backing out of her driveway.

The Plymouth resident arrived and the two motorists exchanged papers; and the Honda left the scene.

The Cohasset woman soon realized that she needed more information from the other driver and provided police with a plate number and description of the Honda. Police stopped the Honda on Beechwood Street and as it turned out the Plymouth resident had an expired license. She is being summonsed to court for operating with an expired license, police said.

Denied alcohol

A cook from the Red Lion Inn reported two men ordered food but were denied alcohol and left the restaurant on foot. The incident occurred at 9 p.m. on Sunday (March 15). The men had apparently walked out without paying.

An officer located the men. They paid the bill and the officer transported them home to Atlantic Avenue.

Correction

Information provided in last week's police wrap-up mistakenly switched two vehicles involved in an accident on Ripley Road. The news brief should have said the vehicle plowing the driveway was a 2006 Ford, owned and operated by a Cohasset resident, and the vehicle traveling along Ripley Road was a 2004 Ford, operated by a Weymouth man.

NEW FACES IN TOWN POLITICS

On-the-go mom for Rec Commission

Kathryn Lydon

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Kathryn Lydon is a busy woman.

As a mother of two with a full-time job, Lydon is on the go nearly constantly.

"I don't have a lot of down time," said Lydon, but what she does have is a love for and interest in the town's recreation program.

Ever since moving to Cohasset four and a half years ago, Lydon has turned to the Rec Department to keep her children busy and active.

"I have two children at two completely different stages, two different age groups," said Lydon. Her son, Jimmy, is 13 and her daughter, Libby, is 9. Ensuring there are recreation options for all kids (and adults, too) is one of her goals, if elected.

"The recreation department is something that benefits our community — our children, our seniors and everyone that lives here — that's why I want to be a part of it," said Lydon, 42.

In her experience as a parent, the recreation programs are extremely welcoming — something that she values.

"Both my children have been very involved in the recreation programs. It's a great way to learn about the community without boundaries, it brings everyone to the same level," she said.

Kids who may not be the all-star athlete or top student can feel welcome and included at the rec programs, Lydon said.

More than that, she said the programs encourage mingling between age groups.

"It's okay for a sixth grader to talk to an eighth grader," said Lydon where at the middle school there might not be the opportunity.

One of her goals if successfully elected to the Recreation Commission would be to see that there are programs for the pre-license high school crowd (ninth and tenth graders).

"As a mother, I'd much rather have my kids be at a supervised programs, not just hanging out," said Lydon. She added the Rec Center, formerly known as "the garage," has a lot of possibilities for future programming.

Her son attended the Summer Xtreme program geared toward middle school students. Both she and her son loved the program, which takes kids on age-appropriate field trips.

One of the challenges facing the recreation department is making sure the word gets out there about the programs.

"Parents need to understand what we have — and that we offer programs at a reasonable cost," said Lydon. Keeping programs fresh to keep up with the kids' interest is a challenge, while competing with the many other recreational opportunities available to kids.

The Recreation Commission is one of the longest commitments in town politics. A Recreation Commissioner is elected to a five-year term; only the Planning Board rivals that length of term.

Lydon, her husband, James Lydon Jr., their two children, Jimmy and Libby, and two cocker spaniel puppies, Gabriel and Stella, live at 23 Forest Ave.

Lydon is the sales manager for Waste Management for all of New England and she loves her job. But, although she works 65-hours a week, she says her "full-time" job is being a mom.

The Lydons' favorite part of the Cohasset is spending summer days at Black Rock Beach, which is a just a short walk from their home.

"The first nice day of summer, the Lydons will be at Rocky Beach," she says with a laugh.

In a run for Planning Board

Jean Healey Dippold

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

If you're up early enough, you might see Planning Board candidate Jean Healey Dippold doing her morning run from her home right outside the village to Sandy Beach around Little Harbor and back home.

Although once a marathon runner, she now mostly runs for the enjoyment of it.

Healey Dippold is the sole resident seeking election to one available five-year term seat on the Planning Board.

A relatively new resident of Cohasset (she moved to her home at 93 South Main in June 2008), Healey Dippold is no stranger to the area.

She grew up as the oldest of five kids next door in Hingham. Her father, Paul Healey, has served on the Hingham Planning Board for over a decade.

"I know (being on the planning board) takes a whole lot of time and commitment. From watching my dad have a pretty good idea of what I'm getting into," said Healey Dippold, 30. Her mother, Esther Healey, is a member of the Hingham School Committee.

"I'm looking forward to making contributions to the town of Cohasset," she said of her reasons for running. She brings her background as an attorney to the table. For her day job, Healey Dippold works as an attorney in the Office of the Attorney General for the consumer protection division. Her role is both of a regulator and a prosecutor, helping those who have been defrauded or treated unfairly.

— Jean Healey Dippold

She said if elected she plans to the planning board with a fair and balanced approach and carefully weigh the concerns of concerned citizens, abutters, and developers.

Protecting and preserving the reasons she and many others love Cohasset would be one of her primary objectives.

"I've lived quite a few places and this area is one of the most beautiful," said Healey. She lists off Cohasset's natural beauty, good school system, small town atmosphere, proximity to Boston and historical character as a few of the reason she chose to live in Cohasset.

"As a planning board member I'd have to balance the natural beauty, historical character with the desires of the owners of residential and commercial property," said Healey Dippold. "I want to keep the best interests of the town at the forefront."

A big believer in master plans, she said it can help keep the town on track, "the planning board has a really strong role in that."

Healey Dippold has quite an extensive local family. She is the oldest of five siblings and the eldest of 40 grandchildren. She has more aunts and uncles than she can count on her fingers and toes. "And everyone tends to live close by," she said with a laugh.

As a former rugby player, Healey Dippold is not easily deterred. As an attorney, she is used to thinking on her feet

"As one of the few woman in the courtroom, I am definitely used to challenges and used to facing them head on," said Healey Dippold.

Owning her own home has given her some new interests including yard work and antique restoration.

NEW FACES IN TOWN POLITICS

It's time to give back

Helene Lieb

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When Helene Lieb and her husband Ed Lappen first stumbled upon Cohasset 28 years ago, they almost immediately fell in love with the town.

"We just thought it was the most beautiful place we'd every seen," said Lieb.

Now, after spending close to three decades in town, seeing two children through the Cohasset school system, Lieb is seeking a seat on the School Committee.

With her two children out of Cohasset schools and pursuing further education, Lieb, 55, feels she now has the time, energy and state of mind to serve, "it's time to give back to the school system that gave my family so much."

Lieb is one of two residents seeking a School Committee seat and two seats are available. Paul Schubert is the other candidate (see related story). Lieb lives at 18 Deep Run with her husband and current Advisory Committee member Ed Lappen. Her son, Russ, 24, is in a masters program at the University of Vermont and her daughter, Mia is currently a junior at Middlebury College in Vermont.

"Both of them love Cohasset and love the education they got here," Lieb said.

For the past 20 years, Lieb has worked as a psychologist in Hingham at a group practice. However, she brings a strong math background (she majored in mathematics) and even taught math for a time.

"The School Committee's role is to get the best education system we can get for the taxpayers in the town."
— Helene Lieb

Right now, Lieb is trying to make herself literate in the challenges and realities facing the school committee. She's talked to past and present members of the committee, reviewed the budget and familiarized herself with many of the new initiatives in the school district.

"The School Committee's role is to get the best education system we can get for the taxpayers in the town. We want to build a system that educates all the children...the school committee has to think about all the kids," from those in special education to the top achievers to everyone in between, said Lieb. "All students need to be challenged."

The goal in this economy is to keep the system strong and figure out new ways to get the same (or better) results.

"The silver lining in this is it is forcing us to think out of the box. Sometimes when we get squeezed, it forces to think creatively," said Lieb.

A passionate supporter of alternative energy, Lieb hopes to encourage the school district to look for energy efficiencies and find ways to conserve resources. In the process, they may save some dollars too.

Lieb said she will strive to look at all the options before going to the town to ask for an override, "we have to be very careful when we think of things like overrides — it has to be the last, last, last resort."

Over the years, Lieb has volunteered in various roles in the school system. When her kids were in the school system, she co-founded a family math night at Osgood, she and her husband shared the role of treasurer of the PSO for a time and she served on the high school school council and volunteered for other enrichment programs.

Now she aims to bring her experience in the school system to the School Committee without any agenda.

"I don't have a kid in the system. There is no special agenda, I just want every kid to be excited about learning," said Lieb.

Volunteer is ready for elected post

Paul Schubert

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For nearly three years, Paul Schubert has been a regular attendee of School Committee meetings. On many occasions, Schubert and the Mariner reporter have been the sole members of the audience.

Schubert hopes the time he has put into getting to know the budget process, vocabulary and issues will give him a leg up when, if elected, it comes time for him to sit on the other side of the table.

"I hope I have that base of knowledge so I can start to contribute right away," said Schubert.

Schubert is one of two residents seeking a School Committee seat and two seats are available. Helene Lieb is the other candidate (see related story).

"I've always wanted to be involved in the school system and almost since I moved to Cohasset I've been a volunteer," said Schubert, 47.

A cardiologist by trade, Schubert has shared his knowledge with students through volunteer lectures on the heart and magnets. Schubert is also on the board of directors of the Cohasset Education Foundation.

Educated in a public school system, Schubert said he is passionate about public education. It was the reputation of the school system and the love of a house on Sohier Street that made the choice to move to Cohasset in 1997 an easy one. Being near the water and having a great beach didn't hurt either.

Schubert lives at 155 Sohier St. with his wife, Cindy, and two sons, Nicholas, 13, and Alexander, 10.

"Being a small school system has its benefits, the teachers get to know all the kids...that's something that you usually don't get outside a private school," said Schubert.

"I hope I have that base of knowledge so I can start to contribute right away.'
— Paul Schubert

While the subject of MCAS scores and college acceptances are important measures of success and often come up at School Committee meetings, Schubert said it can take many years for results to show — the schools and students are a long-term investment.

"You don't always see the results right away," said Schubert. "Ten years down the line a student might be in a situation where they draw on what they learned here."

Yet, Schubert said he is cognizant of the fiscal challenges that lie ahead for the town and the schools.

"The state and federal government are trying to do the best they can to help out the towns, but Cohasset is going to be low on the priority list...there are a lot more towns and cities that need a lot more money than we do here," said Schubert.

One of the issues he hopes to address in some way is the growing number of fees (for athletics, bus transportation, parking) paid by parents.

"Our job (on the school committee) is to get a good school system at a decent cost to the taxpayer," said Schubert.

In his spare time, Schubert is a bit of a history buff (ask him the history behind his home on Sohier Street), an avid reader and gardener.

WEDDING

COURTESY PHOTO

Mr. and Mrs. Aneish S. Arora.

Arora – O'Neil

Ed and Kathie O'Neil of Cohasset announce the marriage of their daughter, Caitlin M. O'Neil, to Aneish S. Arora, son of Sat and Manju Arora of Media, Pa., on Aug. 23, 2008. The Rev. John Mulvehill performed the ceremony at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset.

Sister of the bride Maggie O'Neil of South Boston served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were the groom's sister Kaveri Arora, cousin Lauren McKay, and friends Tiffany Bolster, Katie Devine, Jill Magner, Leah Patterson, Alyssa Reed, Jessica Stevens and Monica Wilson.

Tim Patterson served as best man and Rick Wetmore as a groomsman.

The bride is a 1999 graduate of Cohasset High School and received a bachelor of science degree in finance from Villanova University in 2003. She is a management reporting analyst with MFS Investment Management in Boston.

The groom is a 1998 graduate of Episcopal Academy in Pennsylvania and received a bachelor of science degree in finance in 2004 from Temple University. He is employed by The Meketa Group as an investment analyst.

Following a Hindu ceremony and reception at the Seaport Hotel in Boston, the couple honeymooned in St. John. They reside in Norwell.

Email marketing workshop on Tuesday

On Tuesday, March 24th, 8-9:30 a .m. at the Focus Gallery, 15 Depot Court, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a free seminar titled, "The Power of Email Marketing."

Presented by Zak Barron, Regional Development Director from Constant Contact, Inc., this seminar will help business owners integrate email marketing into their customer communication strategy. It provides an overview of email marketing, including best practices, winning strategies and case studies.

You do not need to be a Chamber member to attend, all are welcome.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

AH, SPRING

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone doing today on the First Day of Spring, 2009? Hooray! I know that I have had it with all the snow and cold weather and want it to get warmer and warmer every day. Many activities are happening in the upcoming week and it would be nice for many of you to be able to take part in them.

MEMORIAL EVENT

For everyone who is looking for a great night out in the memory of a wonderful man, here is an event that will fit the bill. Tomorrow night, March 21 is the Sixth Robert A. Goyette Memorial Scholarship Fund-Raiser. Robert "Bob" Goyette, also known as "The Chief" was very well known here in town and a fundraiser in his honor has not been held for three years. This year's event will be held on Bob's birthday that gives the evening even extra-special meaning. The theme this year after such a cold, long winter is a Hawaiian Beach Theme.

Over 24 scholarships have been awarded to deserving Cohasset High School Seniors as well as a generous donation to the NY Port Authority Police after the 9/11 tragedy. The time of the event is 7 p.m. to midnight and the cost is $15 per person. The location is the Sons of Italy Hall on Route 3A in Hingham. The dress is casual and Hawaiian attire is so encouraged. The meal will be Bob's favorite of spaghetti and meatballs and will have plenty of salads and desserts for all. The favorite sportscaster, Butch Stearns from Fox 25 News will be the emcee. Many great prizes such as Bruins, Red Sox and Patriots items will be raffled and auctioned off and so much fun will be had. If you are unable to attend but would like to make a donation please send a check made payable to "The Robert A. Goyette Memorial Scholarship Fund and can be sent to The Robert A. Goyette, MSF, PO BOX 333, Accord, MA 02018.

FAIRFIELD

Isabelle Bertolami of Cohasset, daughter of Meg and John Bertolami of 24 Steven's Lane, was named to the 2008 fall semester dean's list at Fairfield University, Fairfield, Conn. Isabelle is majoring in marketing.

Erika Julie Gjesteby of Stow, daughter of Pamela G. Gjesteby of Stow and Rolf N. Gjesteby of Cohasset, was also named to the dean's list for the 2008 fall semester at Fairfield University. She is the granddaughter of Arne and Martha Gjesteby of Cohasset and Charles and Terry Gargaly of Wallingford, Conn. Erika is majoring in political science.

To be selected to the dean's list, a student must attain a grade point average of at least 3.5 or a possible 4.0.

BU GRAD

Boston University awarded academic degrees to 1,536 students in January 2009. Among the graduates was Matthew F. Teague, who received a master of science degree in computer science.

Deep one-act drama delighted audience

Drama festival entry performed for Cohasset residents

By Kathryn Hillman
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Two weeks ago, Cohasset High School participated in the Massachusetts High School Drama Guild Festival. Each competing school puts on a one-act play under 40 minutes. Cohasset High School performed "Crimes of the Heart," a Pulitzer Prize winning play. Three of the eight schools in each competing faction move on. CHS unfortunately did not move on to the semifinals, but they did put on a performance of their play for the town of Cohasset last Thursday night. It was an excellent performance.

It was a small cast, with only six actors in total. The cast was: Eleanor Baumgarten (Lenny Magrath), Greta Shwachman (Chick Boyle), Mark Seraikas (Doc Porter), Elizabeth Crawford (Meg Magrath), Lauren Mack (Babe Botrelle), and Sean McCarthy (Barnette Lloyd). The play was directed by Mrs. Stephanie Noble and Mrs. Barbara Baumgarten. Students, Andrew Bell and Andrew Fewsmith were the producer and stage manager, respectively. Mr. Allen La Fountain and Ms. Nina Berkowitz handled set construction and art, and Mr. Steve Dooner was a consultant for the play. The remaining members of the production crew included students, William Mack (Crew Chief), and the Stage Crew: Andrew Bell, Emily Baumagarten, Logan Pratt, Tara Goodwin, Chris Quebec, Garrett Canney, and Andrew Burnett.

The setting of the play was Hazlehurst, Miss. in the Autumn of 1973. The play centers on the lives of three sisters who have been going their separate ways until circumstances bring them back together. The set was the kitchen of the house in which the oldest sister (Lenny Magrath) is living. The plot centers on an incident that happened a few days before the play began: the youngest sister, Babe Botrelle, shot her husband Zachary in the stomach. Meanwhile, Lenny is taking care of their ailing grandfather, and Meg, the middle sister, has just come back to town after having left to pursue her dreams of becoming a singer. Meg must confront her ex-lover, who is now married. Babe is trying to cope with her husband and an affair she recently had (which led to her shooting him). Lenny is trying to come out of her shell and move on with her life. All of their stories are woven together in this short, but deep, one act drama.

This play was extraordinarily well cast and well executed. The whole play had a lot of energy and a very dark humor; all the actors were in the moment for the whole play. All three actors playing the sisters, Eleanor Baumgarten, Elizabeth Crawford, and Lauren Mack, received acting awards at the drama competition, and it was easy to see why. They played off each other very well and made the whole play seem very natural. The other actors were very good, too – they added a lot to the plot and atmosphere of the play.

This play was excellent overall. The actors, crew, and directors had clearly put in a lot of time and effort, and it was very noticeable. "I thought it was excellent," said one audience member after the show. The set was well done, the costumes were reminiscent of the period, and the acting was energetic and enthralling. Mrs. Baumgarten (a director) said, "I love this play and I love what the cast has done with it…they just came together and entertained their audience." The audience certainly agreed. Congrats to the cast and crew for a job very well done.

Helping halfway around the world

said. Her goal is to bring back news and photos of the progress made to let the people know how their donations made a difference in one village.

"I want to be able to say to the generous people who donated, look at what we did," said Fever. She has plans to return to Guinea again in December.

"When you donate to Goodwill or those yellow boxes, you have no idea what happens to it. I will be hand distributing these items to the people who need it most," said Fever.

"Obviously I can't go to every village; there's a huge need and it is hard to say no, but you have to turn some people away."

Although she recognizes she can't help everyone or fulfill their every need, she knows what she is doing will help someone and that is what drives her.

Fever is fitting in her efforts for the non-profit in between a full-time job at a boutique commercial real estate advisory firm in Boston and being the mom to three children. She approached many local businesses to ask them to contribute what they could to the West African Children's Fund.

"She came in and was very excited about her project and trip; she showed us photos of her prior trips," said Kathi Yeager, owner of Shoe Market Kids in Tedeschi Plaza. "I wanted to contribute to her cause because you could actually see where the shoes where going and (in the photos) you could see their reaction."

The local connection of knowing Fever would be personally delivering the shoes and making sure they fit the recipient gave her even more of a reason to give.

Yeager put together about 10 large boxes of shoes to be sent to Guinea, "I have more here for her now, too."

Jacqueline Cardinale of Beanstalk Consignments in Hingham also was drawn to Fever's passion, drive and felt good knowing the clothes would be hand delivered.

"We have so many great clothes and sometime when you donate something you don't know where it ends up," said Cardinale. "With this, I know the clothes aren't going to get wasted and they will be going to people in need."

Beanstalk Consignments put together over 30 huge trash bags full of clothes for the West African Children's Fund. Cardinale sees this donation as the first of many, "I was happy to help."

Hingham's children's store Carolann's gave boxes of clothes, Designer Consigner in Hingham donated adult clothing, and Daley&Wanzer moving company brought 35 large boxes of donations collected by a native Guinean in Gainesville, Florida to Cohasset. Village shops Ports and Twist contributed to the cause as well.

Cheryl Fever has also raised money for her fund by selling drums from Guinea.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Cheryl Fever, right, has collected boxes of donated items such as soccer balls, clothing, books, and shoes for the West African Children's Fund. Her children Elsa, 4, and Nate, 4, hold up some of the donations.

"We want to help the people be self-sustaining by empowering them."
— Cheryl Fever

Fever was both surprised and grateful at the generosity of local residents and businesses. Despite the economic times people found a way to give, she said.

"Everybody I asked has given so generously…I wish there was a way to thank everyone who has helped make this a success."

Last Friday, her garage was packed with cardboard boxes full of clothes, shoes, toys and personal hygiene products. This week, the boxes left Cohasset and will be shipped in a sea container bound for Guinea.

Fever has traveled to six of the seven continents was struck by the people of Guinea.

"These people have nothing but they are happy, they smile and they are gracious," said Fever, citing an example when an older Guinean woman insisted on giving up her seat for Fever.

Tied into her involvement in Guinea and helping children, Fever is an advocate for international adoption and she and her husband have adopted three children from Russian orphanages. Even in the African orphanages she saw that there was happiness and that the children were loved.

"In Africa, even if a family can't afford a child, they take them in," said Fever.

She draws a sharp comparison to the Russian orphanages where her children lived before they came home to the United States. Children are vastly underweight and orphans who remain in Russia carry a stigma their whole life, she said.

"I was adopted and I always wanted to figure out a way to give that back to a child," Fever explained. She first adopted Aleks, now 6, then Nate, 4, and Elsa, 4. All three came from different cities and orphanages in Russia.

"I believe kids are so innocent. If you give them a chance, if everybody was treated equally and given the same opportunities, the world would be a much better place," said Fever. "But when kids don't have clothes or haven't eaten in a day and half and don't have clean water then how are they going to make it? They aren't."

Through her efforts and the West African Children's Fund, she hopes to make a difference in the village and for the children.

Fever will continue to seek and accept donations for another trip to Guinea in December. For more information about the West African Children's Fund, visit www.westafricanchildrensfund.org. Cheryl Fever can be reached at by phone at (617) 680-7033 or by e-mail at Cheryl@westafricanchildrensfund.org.

Calm waters at public hearing

Town Meeting will take up water rate increase

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Water Commission was expecting a big crowd at their public hearing about a proposed water rate increase. They had the town's facility management department set up about three dozen chairs in the water treatment plant's small conference room. They had their notes, explanations and handouts ready for the onslaught of feedback.

Yet, when the time came for the public hearing to begin only two citizens and the Mariner sat in the audience.

Whether this is an indication of an indifferent water user population, poor scheduling (the meeting was held Tuesday at 7:30p.m., also St. Patrick's Day) or something else is unclear.

Even more surprising is the two citizens who came out to attend the public hearing were in agreement — and even support — of the water rate increase.

The proposed water rate increase, which will be taken up in article 11 at Town Meeting March 28, will predominately affect 80 percent of the homes on Cohasset water; the increase will be equal to about $60 per quarter.

The primary driver for the rate increase is a sizeable jump in additional debt service. Water Commission chairman Glenn Pratt said over the next six fiscal years there could be several more rate increases due to increased debt service. The coming fiscal year's budget shows an increase in expenses by 17 percent, the largest portion coming from a $525,460 jump in additional debt service.

Beginning in 1996, the Water Commission began major work on the water distribution system and treatment plant. Roughly $34 million on spending for water system improvements have been approved by Town Meeting since the late nineties. The result has been roughly half the pipes in the system have been replaced with the funding.

"The next rate increase will likely be next year," said Water Commission chairman Glenn Pratt. There are several factors that are moving targets and could change over the next year.

"We are working on getting other sources of income" including wholesale water sale, said Water Commissioner John McNabb. The town is also looking at stretching out the bond repayment plans with the state and developing a plan for regular incremental increases to lessen the impact in a given year.

"Right now, we really can't say how much an future increase will be. I don't want to give a number out that's too high or too low," said McNabb. The Water Commission also pointed out there were not water rate increases between 1997 and 2005.

The proposed rate increase will affect the connections in Cohasset are on meters less than one-inch size and about 80 percent of Cohasset water users on are the 3/4 or 5/8 meter size. A percentage increase is difficult to give as everyone's water consumption is different, said Water Commission chairman Glenn Pratt, but the impact would be about $60 per quarter.

If the water rate increase is implemented a "typical" quarterly water bill for the use of 1800 cubic feet of water for a one-inch meter size will be $204.94, up from $145.73 under the current rate structure.

Water bills are the sum of three separate and distinct rates — two are fixed and one is based on the amount of water consumed in a given quarter. The proposal is to restructure the two fixed costs.

The "fixed rate tiers" are being restructured and increased. No longer will there be a separate tier for those water users with a 3/4or 5/8 inch tier. For those homes on the less than one-inch meter size the fixed rate would jump from $37.85 to $94.06 per quarter.

The other fixed rate tiers will increase by 6 percent. If a home already has a one-inch meter, they will not be greatly affected by this restructuring, in fact they may even see a decrease in their bills (if usage stays constant) because of the restructuring of the hydrant fee.

Leland Jenkins of 198 Jerusalem Road came to the public hearing to speak in favor of the new rate structure, particularly of the change in the hydrant fees. In 2007, Town Meeting approved the implementation of a "standby fire service" or hydrant fee and an increase in the variable water rate. This fee goes toward the maintenance of hydrant pipes and the cost to keep 400,000 gallons reserved in case of emergency every day.

The hydrant fee cost $15 per quarter for those using a less than one-inch pipe and $40 for those using one-inch or greater. Since no matter the size of the pipe, each household may need to utilize fire service, Jenkins thought the two-tier structure was unfair.

"I wanted equity and to make the hydrant fees equal across the board," said Jenkins. "I think it was a mistake on the water department. Now, it's fair."

Wayne Sawchuk of 432 Beechwood Street and a member of the Sewer Commission said the water rate increase would be especially hard on seniors living on a fixed income.

"People don't realize how little an amount of money some people live on in a month," said Sawchuk. He asked the commission to look at those users who are not using much water and consider giving them some sort of abatement.

"We're looking at programs to address that issue," said Water Commission Nathaniel Palmer, who joined the meeting on the conference speakerphone. According to the last billing cycle about 150 households used less than 400 cubic feet of water during the 90-day billing period (the number is inclusive of vacant and seasonal homes and stuck meters).

"In the end I think people will pay for a good, clean, sufficient quantity of water. We're lucky here to not have been restricted during summer months like other neighboring towns," Sawchuk said.

Schools close to final draft on field fees

It is the School Committee's feeling that part of these bills should be partially borne by groups that use the schools outside of regular school hours.

that use the schools outside of regular school hours.

"It's hard to put a hard number (to the cost of maintenance), but we're trying to recoup something," said Flynn by phone Thursday.

Under the new recreation field policy, there are several tiers but non-profit youth group/booster user groups are charged $10 per head; $5 goes into the general fund or $5 goes to recreation revolving fund for field maintenance.

The draft policy for the school's building utilization fee schedule breaks down fees into four separate categories. The first two user groups are similar; one is dedicated to school activities, charitable events and civic groups and the other for town of Cohasset recreation department. Both type of groups are not charged rental fees, but do pay for custodial, kitchen, school bus usage and an energy surcharge.

The third group is for non-school organizations like non-profit youth sports groups and booster clubs. There is an hourly and daily rate attached to this group for use of any of the school facilities, including the auditorium, Alumni Field and elementary school cafeterias. Fees vary from $25 to $50 for an hourly rate and $100 to $200 for a daily rate depending on which facility is utilized. Custodial, kitchen, bus and energy surcharge also apply.

The last user group category has the highest fees because it involves non-school, for-profit groups.

As the field policy is currently drafted, the cost for the youth sports escalate quickly due to the number of practice hours needed for each team and sport.

"Practice hours are the killers," said Flynn. "The amount of hours need to practice to be good at something makes the meter go haywire."

One option suggested by Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh was to charge a lesser amount for the practice hours. For example instead of the $50 hourly rate for the fields, it could be $10 or $15 per hour.

"We have no issue with being charged a fee, but we're coming up against spring registration and a policy (on school fields) has not been enforced or discussed," said Curt Mills representing youth lacrosse.

Flynn said the School Committee did not have any real input on the rec field policy and now is trying to come to a resolution that's going to be fair — or at least see them through this spring season. Some members of the School Committee met with members of the Recreation Commission and various youth sport user groups at a meeting in January to discuss the policy. However, Flynn said, other items like the school budget took priority and a follow-up meeting was never held.

School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said part of the problem was the town and the schools operate on separate budgets.

"We need to start to capture the maintenance of the buildings and fields through fees," said MacCarthy. The money collected by the Recreation Department goes into the general fund and could be used for any operational costs on the town side.

Member Lucia Flibotte said it was an unfortunate sign of the times that the town is a "fee for service" town.

Flynn proposed imposing a temporary $10 per head fee to match up with the Recreation Department's user fee cost until a final draft could be reached after the spring season. He said the best time to come to a resolution would be June when no sports are in season.

"We're not trying to put anyone out of business...and I don't think we'll ever cover the cost entirely," said Flynn. "(However) I don't want to leave money on the table."

The rest of the committee did not feel ready to impose even a temporary fee to see the schools through the spring.

"I don't want to be arbitrarily throw out a number," said MacCarthy.

As a result, the School Committee will have a facilities use sub-committee meeting on Monday, March 23 at 6:30p.m. in the high school community room. The sub-committee will make a recommendation to the full School Committee at their next scheduled meeting on Wednesday, April 1.

New faces, issues

Those who do not know better might think that apathy is alive and well in Cohasset.

Unless someone decides to run a last-minute sticker campaign – there are no races in this year's April 4 Town Election.

To the untrained eye in Cohasset the dearth of candidates seeking to challenge either an incumbent – or another candidate for an "open" seat – might mean that folks here just don't care about Town Government.

With many years under our belt on the Cohasset Mariner, we can most emphatically state that is certainly not the case.

We are not sure why – when in previous years Cohasset elections were hotly contested and controversial – that those times, at least temporarily, appear to be behind us.

This week we are introducing those "new faces" to you. We have decided to take a year off from our traditional "Question of the Week" which was usually reserved for those candidates in races, where two or more are seeking the same post.

We are pleased that residents have stepped forward to run for "open" seats (meaning the incumbent is not seeking reelection) on the School Committee, Planning Board and Recreation Commission. (Otherwise, a seat could go unfilled with the position being filled later with an appointment.)

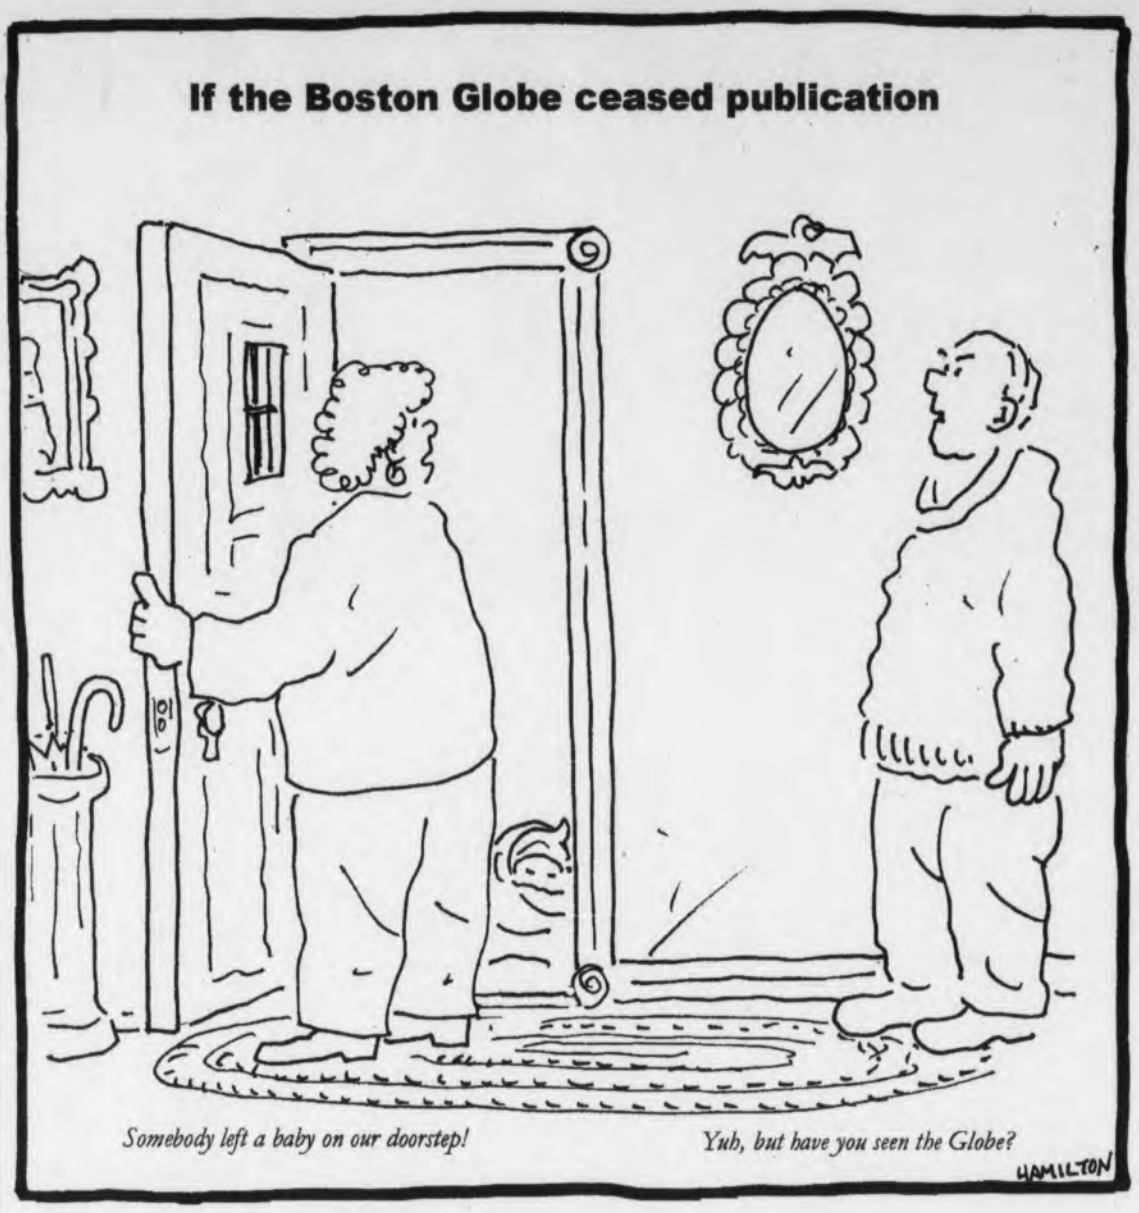
This week we are introducing those "new faces" to you. We have decided to take a year off from our traditional "Question of the Week" which was usually reserved for those candidates in races, where two or more are seeking the same post.

We congratulate those who are tossing their hats into the ring!

As we continue to face what has been dubbed as the deepest recession since the Great Depression – it is more important than ever that Cohasseters come together in the common goal of pitching in and helping the Town move forward.

If that means running for elected office, seeking a spot on an appointed committee or commission, or volunteering in town in some other capacity – then that is all for the good.

Issues facing Cohasset are not going to go away. We used to worry about rapid growth and development and what that might do to the town's unique character and that it could produce school overcrowding.



Now we worry that there won't be enough new growth, which could hurt the town's ability to raise enough revenue to maintain town services and programs.

Remember when the Cook Estate, Avalon and Cedermere were all going to come to fruition at roughly the same time? At the moment after several years, the Cook Estate is still an open field, Avalon has not broken ground, and Cedermere still appears to be on hold.

Who knows what the future will bring?

No one can say.

But what is for sure is that Cohasset will continue to need leadership and involved, committed citizens willing to roll their sleeves up and make a difference right here in their own backyard.

Grant gave arts a boost

TO THE EDITOR

Working closely with arts department chair, Nina Berkowitz, the Cohasset MHS Arts Boosters applied for and received the exciting news that it is a 2009 Cohasset Cultural Council (a local agency which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council) grant recipient. The grant has afforded the students in Cohasset High School's Honors Art Major class the privilege to participate in the creation of the beautiful Village Art Mural.

Not only was this an endeavor that allowed the students to experience the type of enrichment not otherwise offered in the regular school curriculum, but it provided them the opportunity to contribute a piece of their art form to be enjoyed by everyone in our community in a meaningful and lasting manner.

Once again, thank you for giving the Arts a Boost!

Hedlund praised for position on pay raises

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to commend State Senator Bob Hedlund for his position in not taking the recent legislative pay raise.

Unlike some local legislators who have also refused the pay increase, Senator Hedlund does not benefit from significant outside income as an attorney. Also, it is worth pointing out that Senator Hedlund voted AGAINST the 1998 Constitutional amendment that made pay hikes automatic, unlike those who voted for it and are now taking bows simply for saying "no thanks."

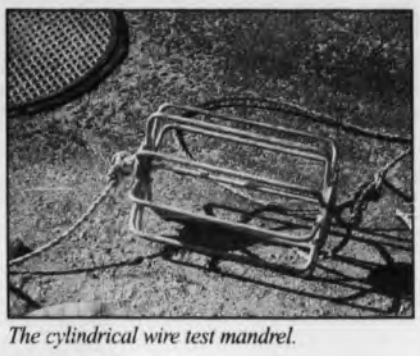
No room for pedestrian pathway



MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Things Don't Always Work Out The Way You'd Like... For several articles we've talked about the pedestrian pathway that was to be constructed behind the new guardrail at the edge of Jerusalem Road in the area where the collapsed wall is being repaired. To make a very long story short, after the new fence posts were placed and the edge of road curbing was placed, it became obvious that there is not adequate space for pedestrians to pass, even small ones.

The engineers had originally called for the posts that will support the pedestrian fence to be placed at the very inside edge of the stone wall (see arrow in photo). Instead, the realities of the construction site dictated that the fence posts be placed at least two feet further from the edge of the wall than expected to get the fence post penetration needed without impacting the existing wall. As a result, there won't be room for a pedestrian pathway at the Steep Rocks Way end of the work area. Because the edge-of-road area is a bit wider at the Bow Street end, the engineers are still trying to see if a pedestrian pathway could be worked into this end of the Jerusalem Road wall repair area. But, we don't have a definitive answer to this question as we go to press.

Also, in the above photo, you may notice that the curbing has been put into place. Sloped curb was chosen because it is significantly less expensive than vertical curbing, which helps keep the costs within our budget. Wooden highway-type guardrail will be installed just to the right of the curbing. Wooden guardrail was chosen because it meets the Massachusetts highway standards and is less obtrusive than the galvanized steel guardrails that are more universally used. As an interesting note, the Cohasset Department of Public Works (DPW) is actually purchasing the guardrail because the DPW can buy it less expensively than the contractor. The reason for this is that the Cohasset DPW belongs to a consortium of South Shore Towns that goes out for bulk bids on major road construction commodities, the net result generally being excellent prices. In fact, that is why the DPW is also buying the paving for the project, not the contractor LMH. The only paving LMH is responsible for is patching.

The cylindrical wire test mandrel.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Edge of the road.

Workers preparing the string.

North Main Street trench work.

Work on North Main Street — The bad thing about construction work on North Main Street is that it really messes traffic up. The good thing about construction on North Main Street is that the soil is very easy digging. The contractor, LMH has been able to really zip through the area to get the lateral sewer lines to the edge of property installed. In several days' time they have been able to install all the sewer services from the northern edge of the Common to Ripley Road along North Main St. All digging should be this easy! If it were, the project could have been finished by now. As we all know, it is not this easy and it isn't finished.

Sewer Testing on North Main St. – Midweek the contractor began testing the gravity section of the new sewer line on North Main Street adjacent to the Common. Since it is larger and a gravity line, the testing procedures are a bit different from those used on the low-pressure sewer lines used for the balance of the Little Harbor Project. The first test done was a mandrel test. This is a test to make sure that the pipe has no kinks in it that cause it to be reduced in size. A wire cylindrical cage-like mandrel, slightly smaller in diameter than the pipe, is pulled through the pipe between manholes. If it passes through, the test is "OK."

To get the rope that pulls the mandrel through the pipe a smaller string is blown through the pipe with compressed air. The string is then used to pull the rope through the pipe that ultimately will pull the mandrel through the sewer pipe.

After the mandrel test is completed, the new sewer line will be pressure tested. But, that's for another article.

Alas, the poor billionaires

HENSHAW

Get the picture.

The current economic crisis has reduced the number of billionaires in the country from 87 to 32 and has cost one of the wealthiest investors $24.5 billion of his personal fortune.

One of those investors not only has been stripped of his investment, but has been accused of shenanigans in amassing it.

"Our government is helping billionaires refinance their debt," said the deputy editor of a trusted business magazine. "There is a list of strategic enterprises and the state helps pay debt and backs loans."

No it's not Warren Buffet, Bernie Madoff and the government of the United States.

It's Oleg Deripaska, Yevgeny Chichvarkin and the government of Russia, that's who.

Who'd athunk it, that less than 20 years out of communism, with its failed five-year plans and gulags for the moneylenders, the former Soviet Union would harbor 87 billionaires, much less get up funds to save their backsides?

The dire straits into which the Russian economy has fallen was revealed the other day when Forbes Magazine published its annual Forbes Rich List, which accounted for 793 billionaires in the world compared to 1,125 last year.

When I was young and ice covered most of the earth, millionaires like the Rockefellers were held in awe. Now there are 6.7 million of them, a good portion of whom I figure shoot hoops or smite baseballs.

The richest man in the world, according to Forbes, is Bill Gates, the founder of Microsoft, who topped the list with a $40 billion stake, despite the fact that he lost $18 billion in the stock market collapse.

Warren Buffet, the chairman of Berkshire Hathaway, led the list last year but fell to second in 2009 when a loss of $25 billion dropped him to a mere $37 billion. But no fundraising dinners, please.

Third on the list was the Mexican telecommunications tycoon Carlos Slim Helu, although I would venture a guess that there are other Mexicans engaged in a clandestine export business whose take might top Helu's $25 billion.

For those of you who think of the people of Third World countries as poor and benighted, let it be known that two of Forbes top ten billionaires are Indians — not the Native American kind, but the Native Asian kind.

Mukesh Ambani, who deals in oil, is worth $19.5 billion, while Lakshmi Mittal, who heads the steelmaking firm of ArcelorMittal, is good for $19.3 billion.

The youngest billionaire on Forbes' list is Prince Albert von Thurn und Taxis, 25, whose family fortune is set at $2.1 billion in real estate and forestry. His fortune dates back to a time when the German emperor gave the family a postal monopoly.

Prince Albert is also a bachelor, girls!

The richest among those the Forbes considers young are Sergey Brin, 35, and Larry Page, 36, co-founders of Google, each worth $12 billion. Both are Stanford University dropouts in 1998 who started Google in a friend's garage.

The truth about bottled water

COMMENTARY

ANDREW MOORADIAN

After reading Pat Granahan's commentary: Put an End to Bottled Water (Cohasset Mariner March 13 about the Cohasset water forum), I had to submit these comments because the commentary was extremely misguided and fraught with misleading statements.

• Recycling: Plastic beverage bottles are among the most recycled packaging in this country and as of 2008, bottled water bottles are the number one item collected in curbside recycling programs. Beverage companies continue to reduce the amount of plastic used in their packaging. Rather than focusing on one beverage choice, it would make more sense for our government officials to focus on improving recycling rates for all consumer product packaging. Bottled water is one of thousands of packaged foods and beverages used by consumers every day and bottled water containers are fully recyclable and should be properly recycled through whatever system a local municipality has in place.

Overall, the bottled water industry, like many others in the food and beverage industry, works to reduce its environmental footprint. Furthermore, it is widely believed that the growth of bottled water has increased the amount of plastic bottles produced and released into the environment. The Bottled Water Industry is growing in favor of consumers choosing to drink a healthier beverage. The majority of new bottled water sales are purchased by consumers in place of sugar-based drinks like carbonated soft drinks and juices. Bottled water containers are on average 30 percent-40 percent lighter in weight than carbonated soft drink containers of similar size. Therefore by drinking bottled water there is actually less plastic being discharged into the environment

The majority of new bottled water sales are purchased by consumers in place of sugar-based drinks like carbonated soft drinks and juices.

• Regulation: Pat Granahan's statement that the U.S FDA regulates 30 percent-40 percent of bottled water is utterly false. Bottled water is a packaged food product and is the most regulated product on the shelf in the United States today. All bottled water is regulated under the FDA's Standards of Identity and specific bottled water regulations. Additionally, Massachusetts regulates bottled water with specific regulations for bottled water and has since 1985.

Bottled water is one of the safest products sold today. According to the Center for Disease Control, no one has ever been harmed or became ill from bottled water in the history of the United States. You cannot say that about tap water. Tap water, while tested at the source has huge problems in its delivery system; old, cast iron, concrete, etc. pipes under the street and copper pipes in homes. Bottled water is a packaged food product and never comes into contact with non-food grade materials. Also, while some companies chose to use municipal supplies for their source of water, it is not just "tap water" in a bottle that Pat claims, the water is stripped pure of minerals and chemicals and in some cases reintroduced with minerals for taste.

• Groundwater withdrawal: Pat Granahan tries to incite fear about ground water withdrawal by implying that bottled water companies will pump the ground dry. Ground water is a renewable resource; it recharges itself. A study conducted by the Drinking Water Research Foundation shows that annual bottled water production accounts for less than 0.02 percent of the total ground water withdrawn in the United States each year. There are many other industries that withdraw much larger quantities of ground water, ie., agriculture, sand and gravel operations, beer and soda companies, golf courses, and countless other industries. The bottled water industry uses minimal amounts of ground water to produce this important consumer product — and does so with great efficiency. Even though it is a small ground water user, the bottled water industry has been instrumental in encouraging states to develop comprehensive, science-based ground water management and sustainability policies and laws.

Vincent van Gogh (March 30, 1853)

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

His life: brief
His legacy: 800 paintings

His favorite color was yellow. He painted with speed and intensity, using multiple layers of paint and thick brushstrokes, to capture fleeting effects and emotions. A well-educated man, his early letters show also that he was profoundly religious. He hoped for popularity through his paintings, but really longed to create works that would lead people to a more spiritual understanding of life.

"I feel a power in me which I must develop, a fire that I may not quench, but must keep ablaze though I do not know where it will lead me."

As a young man van Gogh was torn between two vocations: painter and preacher. For several years he lived and worked among the poorest families in the mining districts of Belgium and later as a missionary in the slums of London. At various times he was a schoolteacher, bookseller, art dealer. Finally, at age 27, he decided upon art as a career. Only in painting, he later wrote, could he find a means to communicate his experience of a world illuminated by God's love. Always a champion of the downtrodden, he wanted to portray the courage and dignity of the very poor. His first paintings were scenes of farmers and laborers at work in his native Holland. Dark colors, browns and blacks, give them a feeling of heavy sadness.

Of all the great impressionist painters, he was the only one who achieved absolutely no success in his lifetime.

In 1888 Van Gogh moved to Arles, in Provence, the south of France, a bright and cheerful place. He chose vivid blues, bold reds, fiery oranges and bright yellows, daubing the colors onto his canvas in thick swirling globs. He was not popular in the small town. Seeing him dashing about, easel and canvas strapped to his back, hair wild and uncombed, clothes wrinkled, the locals took to calling him foux-roux (crazy redhead). Not even his devoted brother, Theo, a successful art dealer in Paris, could sell his paintings. People thought them odd. Take "Sunflowers," for example. According to the popular tastes of the time, a vase of flowers should be soft and light and peaceful. Van Gogh's sunflowers are not neatly arranged. They seem to explode out of the vase with a crazy abandon, looking almost as if on fire.

Early in 1890 one of his paintings was finally bought at a public sale in Belgium. One art critic in Paris actually made a few positive comments about his work. Van Gogh was then living, and painting in Auvers, at the home of Dr. Gachet who was treating him for depression. On July 20, 1890, two days after shooting himself in a field, Vincent van Gogh, age 37, died.

Of all the great impressionist painters, he was the only one who achieved absolutely no success in his lifetime. During the 1880s he produced more than 2,000 works. Few were even acknowledged. Fast-forward a century to 1987 when "Sunflowers" sold for $53 million. In 1990 "Portrait of Dr. Gachet" brought $82.5 million, at that time the highest price ever paid for a painting.

In 2008, four of Van Gogh's paintings: "Irises," "Self Portrait," "Portrait of Dr. Gachet" and "A Wheatfield with Cypresses" appeared on a list of the 15 most valuable paintings in the world.

Police officers visit CHS law class

Since 2000, police officers have made regular visits to Introduction to Law class as part of the class curriculum to talk about everything from probable cause to Miranda rights.

The program also includes a class visit to the police department headquarters on Elm Street and a tour of the Plymouth County jail. Although it's not a requirement, students — who have signed parental permission slips —are also invited to join police on a ride-along.

"They can really see what it's like from our side of things," said Lieutenant Bill Quigley, who has been involved in the program since its start. "This is not a traditional law class, it show how the laws apply to real life situations," where the police are experts.

Buckley agrees, "even though the class is fun, the basic academic component is understanding constitutional rights and the intersection of constitutional rights and police work."

The program also allows the students to interact with the students in a non-confrontational setting. While Quigley says the students are often stand-offish during the first class as the meetings continue the students warm up, ask questions and aren't afraid to volunteer.

That was the case on Wednesday morning (the officers' third visit) when the class headed out to the parking lot for the demonstration. Students were picked to play the parts of police officers and drivers. The three officers walked the class and the actors through their thought process from calling in the stop to dispatch, approaching the car, talking to the driver and occupants and keeping a keen eye out for anything suspicious.

"Our safety is paramount on one of these stops. At the end of the night, I want to go home to my kids, that's why we take all these precautions," said Sergeant Jeff Treanor.

In between the role playing and showing the students various police equipment, the officers included tidbits of advice and guidance.

Quigley showed the students a series of guns and asked them to determine by sight if they were real or fake. When each time the students couldn't agree, Quigley made his point.

"You have no idea if a gun is real or fake, loaded or unloaded. If you ever come across a gun, always treat it as loaded," said Quigley.

The students learned what could happen if a vehicle is pulled over and there is a can of beer, or marijuana joint, or a gun. The class got to see what it felt like to sit in the back seat of a police car.

"This is some place hopefully none of your will ever end up," said Treanor.

The kids responded positively and interested in what the officers had to say.

"I took the class because I am definitely interested in being a police officer," said sophomore Matt Brooks. "I love this class, it is probably the class I most look forward to everyday."

Matt got the chance to play the arresting officer in one of the role-playing scenarios, "it was definitely foreshadow."

What's most the most interesting thing he has learned from the police officers?

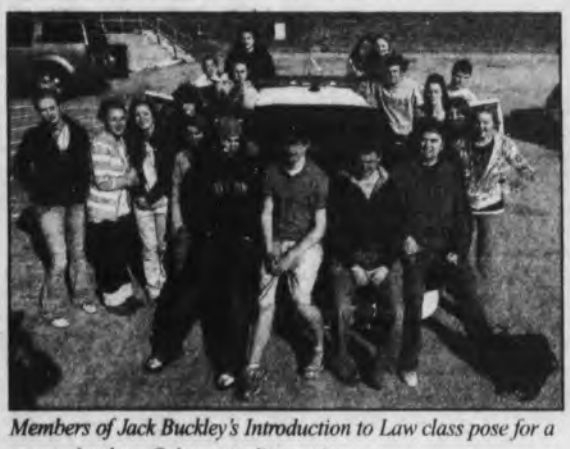
"How in a quiet town like Cohasset, there still a lot of excitement in the law," Matt said.

The program has even been successful in recruiting members of the Cohasset police force.

One of Cohasset's newest patrolman is a former student in the Buckley's law class. Officer Patrick Reardon graduated as part of Cohasset High's class of 2003 and he became interested in law enforcement partly because of his experience in the class and with the officers. Reardon came to the class on Wednesday morning after getting off his night shift.

"It's good for the students to have a positive experience with police officers," said Buckley.

During their last visit with the students the police officers give them ways to contact them if they ever have any questions or need help from the police.



"I enjoy doing it, it's rewarding and we benefit. The kids know us and they gain a rapport with us," said Quigley.

"It opens up the channels of communication and that's really important," said Treanor.

Police Chief James Hussey places a high priority on the program because of the positive interaction with the youth.

"What's important in every community is for the police to maintain a good relationship and rapport with the youth of the town," said Hussey in a phone interview. "The students learn what police work is all about and it allows some good communication to develop on both sides."

The Cohasset Police use a small amount of state community policing funds to pay for an officer who comes in during off-duty to teach. Most of the work is done by on-duty personnel or on a volunteer basis.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on one roll call and local senators' votes on three roll calls from the week of March 9-13.

$327 MILLION FROM RAINY DAY FUND (H 3415)

House 145-0, Senate 37-0, approved and sent to Gov. Deval Patrick a supplemental budget package that takes $327 million from the state's Rainy Day Fund to pay expenses in the current year's state budget. The package also contains new spending including $105 million for snow and ice removal costs from winter storms. Other provisions include increasing from 45 to 90 days the time during which the state Department of Revenue can process tax refunds without paying interest to the taxpayer; new assessments on mortgage companies and other non-depository institutions so that they are paying the same assessments as banks and a $286,943 reduction in funding for the governor's office. Supporters said that the package is a fiscally responsible one that is necessary to close the state's growing budget deficit. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

ONE PERCENT ACROSS THE BOARD CUT IN STATE BUDGET (H 3415)

Senate 9-28, rejected an amendment cutting most items in the current state budget by one percent. Local aid and any programs that bring in matching federal funds would be exempt from the cut. Amendment supporters said that this would save the state $140 million and help close the ballooning state budget deficit. They argued that a one percent cut is reasonable and is similar to action that families are forced to take in light of the economy. Amendment opponents said that across the board cuts are irresponsible because they treat all programs the same when in fact some would be severely affected by cuts and others would not feel much effect. They noted that many cuts have already been made and that any future ones will be done program by program - not on a one size fits all basis. (A "Yes" vote is for cutting most items in the state budget by one percent. A "No" vote is against the cut).

PROHIBIT PAY RAISES AND IMPOSE HIRING FREEZE FOR STATE WORKERS (H 3415)

Senate 9-28, rejected an amendment prohibiting pay hikes for any state employees and implementing a hiring freeze that prohibits any job vacancies from being filled unless "deemed critical to public safety." The moratoriums would go into effect immediately and last more than 15 months - until July 1, 2010. Amendment supporters said that these freezes would save an estimated $160 million that could be used to balance the state budget and/or replenish the state's Rainy Day Fund. They argued that no state employee should receive a raise when thousands of people in the private and public sector are losing their jobs and facing the loss of their homes. Amendment opponents said that the freeze in well-intentioned but goes too far. They noted that some collective bargaining raises for union workers are required and unavoidable because they were agreed to by the state. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment prohibiting pay hikes and implementing a hiring freeze. A "No" vote is against the amendment and favors allowing pay hikes and filling job vacancies).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

SEN. MARIAN WALSH GETS NEW JOB - Sen. Marian Walsh (D-Boston) was appointed by Gov. Patrick as the new assistant executive director of the quasi-public Massachusetts Health and Educational Facilities Authority (MHEFA). The $175,000 position has been vacant for several years. The appointment was ratified by the MHEFA board on the same afternoon of the Senate's defeat of a Republican-sponsored amendment prohibiting any job vacancies from being filled unless the position is critical to public safety.

TAX HIKES BEING BANDIED ABOUT - The worsening economic situation of the state has led to several tax hike trial balloons being floated on Beacon Hill. Other ideas are now competing with Gov. Patrick's proposed 19-cent-per-gallon gas tax hike and proposal to impose the state's five percent sales tax on some currently exempt items including alcohol purchased at stores, candy and sweetened beverages. Competing measures include a 25-cent-per-gallon gas tax increase; a hike in the sales tax from five to six percent and raising the income tax from 5.3 percent to 5.4 percent.

REMEMBERING GEORGE KEVERIAN - Former Speaker of the House George Keverian was remembered by friends and former colleagues during a service in the House chamber. The 77-year-old Keverian served as speaker from 1985-1991 after a revolution in which he wrested control from sitting Speaker Tom McGee. Among those in attendance was an array of former speakers of the House including former Speakers Robert Quinn, Charles Flaherty, Thomas Finneran and Sal DiMasi. Flaherty and Finneran were both convicted of crimes while DiMasi resigned earlier this year under a cloud of suspicion.

A PLETHORA OF PROPOSED LEGISLATION - House and Senate clerks continue to process the more than 6,000 bills that have been filed for consideration in the 2009-2010 session. Here is a look at some interesting ones

BAN PUBLISHING NAMES OF MINORS - This measure would prohibit television stations, radio stations, Internet websites, newspapers and magazines from broadcasting or publishing the name, home address or e-mail address of any minor under 18 whose image appears in any broadcast or photograph unless the parent or guardian gives written consent. A similar bill filed last year was shipped off to a study committee where it died.:

HEALTH NOTES

Asthma is a moving target

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In Cohasset we have seen a slight increase in cases of asthma, but much probably goes unreported because there's been no formal diagnosis and until it becomes serious, many just live with it.

With all the construction going on in Town and the inevitable dust, it's natural to assume there has been an increase in cases of asthma, but in the hunt for asthma data and facts, one finds that the disease is a moving and very blurry target. Asthma is a chronic lung disease, which inflames and narrows the airways and causes recurring periods of wheezing, tight chest, shortness of breath and coughing, often at night or early morning. It affects people of all ages, but it most often starts in childhood. In the United States, more than 22 million people are known to have asthma. Nearly 6 million of these people are children. In Cohasset we have seen a slight increase in cases of asthma, but much probably goes unreported because there's been no formal diagnosis and until it becomes serious, many just live with it.

Moreover, the exact cause of asthma isn't known. Researchers think a combination of factors (family genes and certain environmental exposures) interact to cause asthma to develop, most often early in life. Factors like:

- An inherited tendency (called atopy) to develop allergies including asthma
- Respiratory infections during childhood
- Contact with airborne allergens or exposure to viral infections in infancy or early childhood
- Susceptibility more likely in some people than in others.

Researchers continue to explore what causes asthma. One theory is the "hygiene hypothesis." Belief that our Western lifestyle — with its emphasis on hygiene and sanitation — has resulted in changes in our living conditions and an overall decline in infections in early childhood.

It's important to treat all asthma symptoms when first noticed. Recognition and treatment helps prevent worsening and causing a more severe attack, which may result in the need for emergency care and may even cause death. With today's knowledge and treatments, most people who have chronic asthma are able to manage the disease. They have few, if any, symptoms and can live normal, active lives without interruption providing they are aware of and can avoid the triggers present in their particular environment.

For successful, comprehensive and ongoing treatment, as always, consult with doctors and other clinicians on whom you can depend. A primary care doctor will diagnose asthma based on medical history, a physical exam, and results from tests. Generally, caregivers begin by assembling all the necessary facts. For this reason, it's important to answer a long listing of questions, some seemingly irrelevant. This listing, sometimes called an Asthma or Allergy Prevention Assessment is vital for correct diagnosis and treatment of the disease and identifying its causes. An Asthma Action Plan form is available from the Town Nurse or from MADPH.COM. They come in triplicate so the doctor, patient and the school can each have a copy.

All prevention/assessment lists have substantially the same categories of questions:

First are questions about the individual, symptoms and medical history. Has the patient ever been treated for allergies: show signs of wheezing, shortness of breath, trouble breathing, etc. There are questions about the person's environmental experience — evidence of animals or insects, pesticides, mold and moisture, carpets, peculiar odors, visible dust, houseplants, air fresheners, etc. Also, it's necessary to determine the level of asthma severity, whether it's intermittent, mild, moderate or severe. Severity level will determine the type of treatment a patient will receive and what environments to avoid. Finally the assessment may ask about related health conditions that can interfere with asthma management. Hopefully, early treatment will control the disease by preventing chronic symptoms such as coughing and shortness of breath, reducing the need of quick-relief medicines.

So, we have asthma, not always sure we have it or how severe or is it sniffles or the result of a disaster in the kitchen or a spill in the workshop? It's one of those diseases you're never completely sure about. Keeping your environment free of unusual or strong odors of any kind is one way to help maintain good lung function and normal activity levels. If you have questions about asthma, contact Mary Goodwin, the Town Nurse at 781-383-2210.

'Taxachusetts' could make a comeback

HEDLUND REPORT

ROBERT HEDLUND

It is not often I can say this, but I agree whole-heartedly with Senate leadership on this issue: that reforms must come first.

So much of the State House culture is based on symbolism. There's the Sacred Cod that looks down over the House chamber, a symbolic reminder of the historic importance of the fishing industry on the state's economy. The official seal of the Commonwealth features an American Indian with an arrow pointing to the ground, symbolizing peace. The drawn cutlass on the top of the seal, however, was a symbol of the state's willingness to take up arms when provoked.

It is a shame, however, that so many elected officials' grasp of symbolism ends with these historic, inanimate objects. Otherwise, they could perhaps understand why the general public looks upon the Legislature with such disappointment, frustration, and distrust.

While tens of thousands of Bay State workers are either getting pink slips, or taking forced salary cuts and furloughs, the Legislature has been awarded a 5.5 percent pay hike. And some in the State House, including Governor Patrick, are calling for a massive gas tax hike without first looking at enacting significant reform.

Both issues contain symbolism that can't be ignored and explain the continued stream of phone calls, letters, and Emails that I receive every day from voters frustrated over the appearance that elected leaders play by a different set of rules than everyone else, or that the Legislature is only interested in doing what's politically easy, instead of doing what's fiscally responsible.

Symbolism is the main difference between the transportation reform plans proposed by Gov. Deval Patrick and Senate leadership. As you know, Gov. Patrick's reform package includes a 19-cent gas tax hike. In contrast, the Senate plan does not include any toll, fare or tax hikes. Instead, it focuses solely on reforming our broken transportation systems.

My colleagues in the Senate deserve kudos for understanding the symbolism within this debate. Democrats and Republicans, conservatives and liberals, all agree that we cannot fully fix our transportation woes through reforms alone, that new revenues are going to have to eventually be part of the equation. They are also in agreement that new revenues must be accompanied by major reforms, otherwise the problems will just return. The disagreement is over what comes first: revenues or reforms.

It is not often I can say this, but I agree whole-heartedly with Senate leadership on this issue: that reforms must come first. This stands in stark contrast to the bills floated in recent months by some House Democrats that focused solely on revenues — such as a 10, 20, or even 50-cent gas tax hike, without any mention of reform. The House chairman of the Transportation Committee has all but said he won't support any transportation reform bill that doesn't contain tax or toll hikes of some kind.

The governor's proposal and the Senate bill contain a number of the same reforms including the abolition of the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority, reigning in fringe benefits, consolidation of administrative functions, and tort reform, which alone could save as much as $5 million annually.

One difference is that the Senate's bill would merge MassHighway, Mass. Turnpike and the MBTA into MassTrans, a new authority which would be run by a 9-member board of directors. The governor's plan would place the Transportation Secretary directly in charge of all transportation functions, with a three-member board advising him on MBTA operations. The Senate bill would also require transportation officials to analyze operating costs before service is expanded; a process that may have prevented the state from investing $500 million into a certain South Shore commuter rail line that now operates at a $10 million annual loss.

Pay raises

Back in 1996, I was one of 64 legislators – along with my former colleagues Rep. Frank Hynes, and the late Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray – who voted against a Constitutional amendment tying legislator salaries to the median income level. I felt that such an amendment was an example of faux-good government legislation; the bill appeared to be in the best interest of the people, but in reality it was filled with opportunities for political chicanery. We're seeing a great example of that now. Gov. Patrick, who is charged with approving our legislative pay rates, says that median incomes have now 5.5 percent higher than they were two years ago. Even if you buy the logic that the statistics used to calculate the median income lag behind what's happening in our country, I find it hard to believe that we will actually receive a pay cut two years from now.

Unlike some lawmakers, I am not pulling down large sums of "outside" income running lucrative law practices that just happen to dovetail nicely with their legislative work. My legislative salary is my primary source of income. However, I recognize the symbolism in accepting a pay hike in a time when so many are struggling. As a result, I will be donating my pay raise to a number of local charities.

Amending the state constitution to provide automatic legislative pay raises was a bad idea. We in the Legislature should be held accountable and actually vote on our pay raises as warranted. I also support a rule requiring votes on pay raises to be taken prior to state elections.

We will soon face another battle that will be draped in symbolism, involving Gov. Patrick's plan to tax flavored drinks, candy bars, meals, telephone poles, and just about any other inanimate object. It will involve the symbolism of fighting against a return to the '80s and our "Taxachusetts" reputation, and understanding that we cannot tax our way out of fiscal downturns.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund represents the Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Hingham, Cohasset, Weymouth, Hull, Norwell, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury.

Absentee ballots for the annual Town election

Absentee ballots for the Annual Town Election on April 4, 2009 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, April 3, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. If you will be in town on Election Day and you are able to come to the polls you should vote in person. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

1. Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by April 4, 2009 to be counted.

The Accu-Vote optical scan system will be used. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the oval to the right of your choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc. and will be read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

'Healing Field' planned for Memorial Day

The Sons of the American Legion is again planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day observances on the island that faces Veterans Memorial Park.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces. (Those who purchase flags will be able to pick them up after 10 days).

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

Got Turf? Party and phone-a-thon a success

The Cohasset Sports Partnership recently hosted two fundraisers for the "got turf?" campaign.

At "Pick a Brick" night, held at Atlantica Restaurant on Feb. 28, over 180 people gathered to show their support for building a new turf field at the current site of Alumni Field. A new turf field will significantly expand the availability of playing fields for town athletes without the need for additional land development and also maximizes an underutilized Town asset, the CSP said.

Doug Fitzgerald along with CSP's Bill Cavanaro Picking a Brick at the Sports Partnership's fundraiser held recently at Atlantica.

Over the course of the evening donors "bought a brick" for their families, in remembrance of loved ones, for special athletic events (ex. Girls Soccer South Champs 2008), or in their children's or family names. Many families bought a brick for each child.

Donors will be recognized with a brick or granite block depending on the amount of the donation. The Donor Field, a to-be built landscaped walkway shaped like a playing field, will be located adjacent to the entrance to Alumni Field.

On March 17, the CSP held a Phone-a-thon whereby 15 volunteers worked the phones tirelessly to solicit donations from residents. Many thanks to the all of the volunteers and especially to Lorraine Tarpey, who hosted the evening.

The got turf campaign has raised over $400,000 towards the goal of $550,000.

If the CSP is successful in raising the funds by mid-April the field could be constructed this summer for a September 1, 2009 opening. Engineering work is being done concurrently with the fundraising in anticipation of a successful campaign.

Bill Cavanaro, Vice President of the Cohasset Sports Partnership, said the fundraising has been great, especially given the economic situation.

"Fortunately this town has the resources to participate in this public/private partnership, and the proposed turf field will benefit the Town by capping its expense on the current Alumni Field," he said. "Since Alumni Field is now only used a few times a week, this makes great financial sense."

Currently the campaign has raised 70 percent of the private funds, approximately $400,000, towards the goal of $550,000. What has been surprising is that that amount has come from only approximately 220 families, the CSP said.

Said George McGoldrick, President of the Cohasset Sports Partnership, "We're buoyed by the fact that we've received the amount of private funding we have from such a small percentage of the families in the community, and know that we have a lot of other families we need to contact. We could use more volunteers to help us get over the top in the next thirty days. It would be a wonderful event for the Town to be able to start construction this summer and open the field in September. Any support we receive is greatly appreciated."

Residents who would like a permanent remembrance of their athletic achievements, to recognize a family member, or to donate in the name of a friend can call 781-383-1341 to reserve a brick. Donors may also go online to www.cohassetsportspartnership.org and buy a brick.

The CSP is a non-profit 501 (c) (3) organization affiliated with the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund. Donations are tax-deductible to the extent allowed by law and are eligible for corporate matching funds.

Building on success

Young CHS skaters done sneaking up on anyone

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

The work toward the 2009-'10 season for the Cohasset High hockey team really began in earnest with three games left in this past regular season.

The Skippers, featuring just four seniors, essentially played in six straight do-or-die games from that point forward. In the first five, the youngish squad found ways to pull out the necessary wins. First, there were the three final regular season "must wins" over teams they had not beaten previously (Rockland, South Shore Voc and Carver). This got them to the bare minimum postseason qualifying criteria: a .500 record (9-9-2)

"It was a great season and a great run,"
Cohasset coach Bob W. lsh

That was followed by "upset" wins of 8-3 and 4-1, respectively, in the state tourney over 11th seeded Avon and sixth seeded Medway.

The season finally ended with a 6-3 loss to three seed Blue Hill in the quarterfinals.

"It was a great season and a great run," said Skippers third year coach Bob Walsh after the ice chips had settled. "We saw a lot of players step up big, including a lot of the players who'll be back next year who stepped up into leadership roles as the season went along."

The Skippers will lose goalie Johnny Wade to the caps and gowns, along with top defenseman Ian Lyster, scoring line plugger Paul Pozniak (7-10—17) and checking line leader Andrew Bell (3-10—13)—all big losses.

"Johnny has been such a great story," said Walsh of Wade, voted a league all-star. "You're talking about a kid who made himself into a goalie at the all-star level and kept working at it until he was an all-star. He set a great example to everyone with that work ethic and commitment."

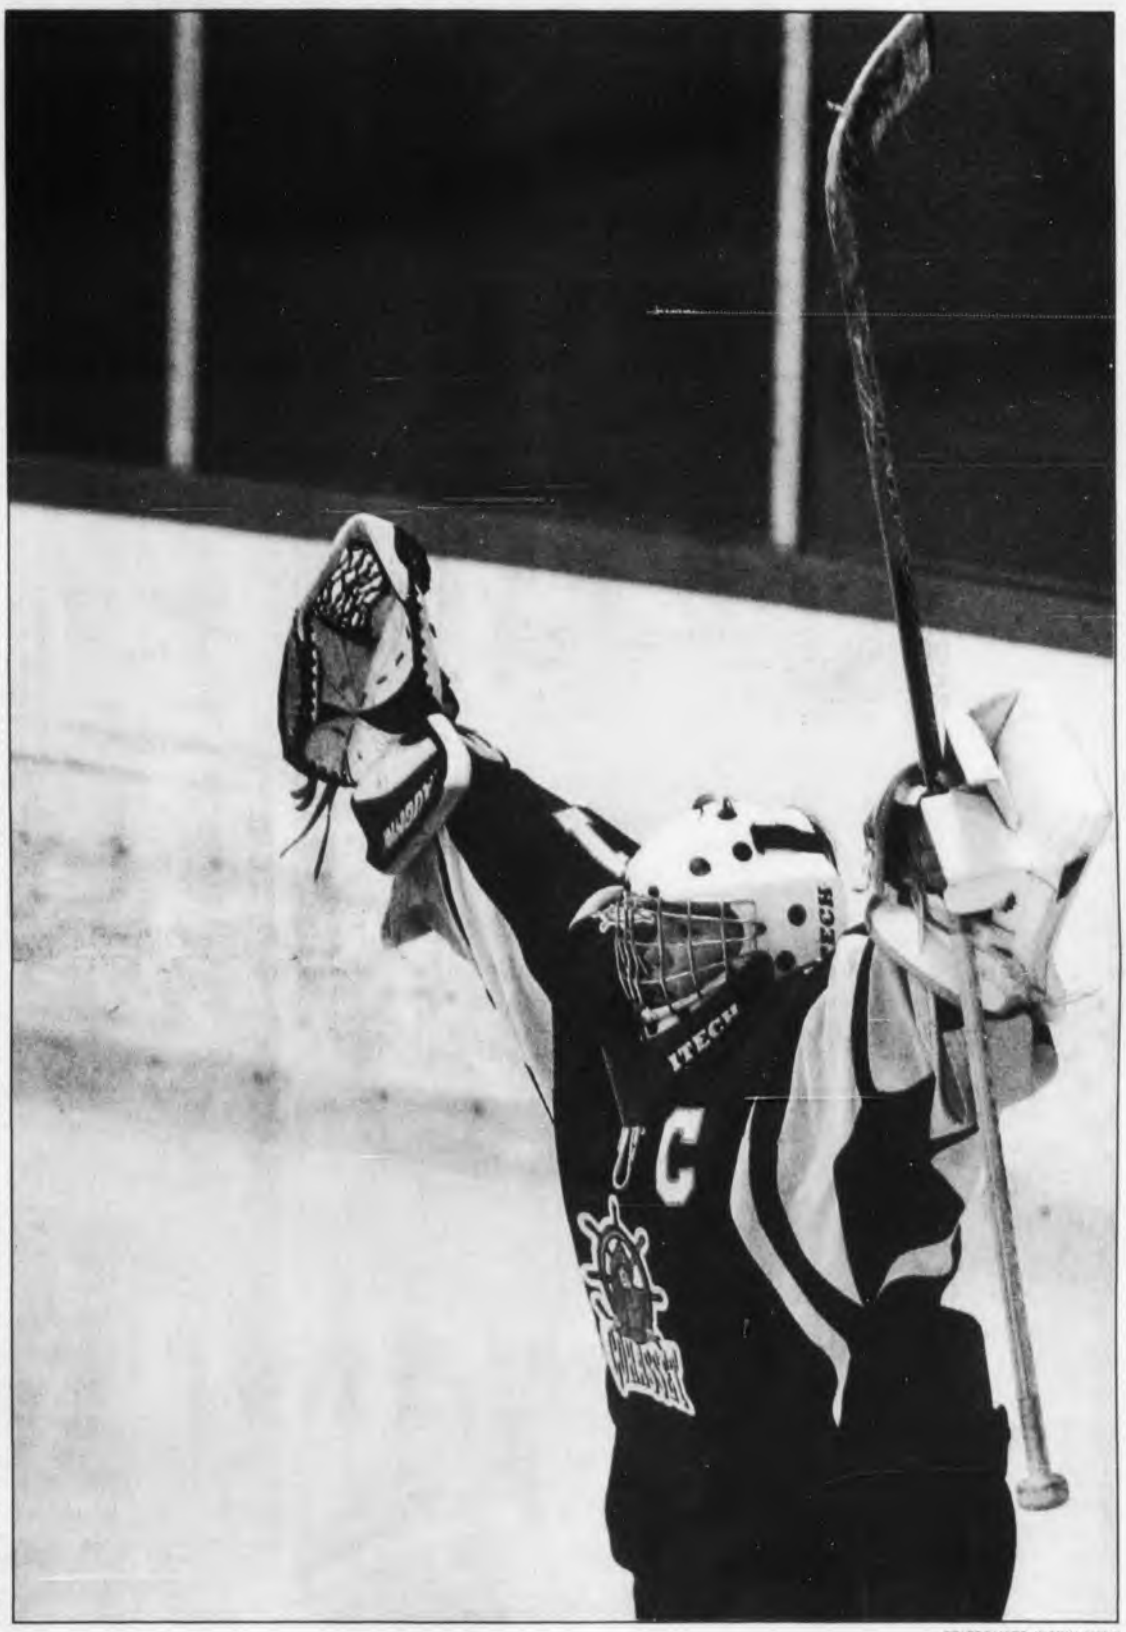
Walsh was pleasantly surprised by the emergence of several top notch defensemen from the underclass ranks this winter, but it came as great comfort knowing senior captain Ian Lyster was always available to throw over the boards when the game was on the line. He was voted along with Wade to the SSL Al-Star team.

"Ian was such a calming influence on the whole team," said Walsh. "He was definitely the leader in back, and the younger players followed his lead. We're really going to miss that maturity."

Pozniak was a true plugger. The majority of his points came as a results of simply outworking the guy who was put out there to stop him.

"We had two very different types of scoring lines that played together very well, and Paul was on the grinder line" said Walsh. "He and (junior) Conor Queenan were perfect partners out there. They'd just fly around and refuse to give up on anything. There were games when they carried us because the other team just didn't have an answer for guys who played like that."

Bell was the third member of that line for much of the season, and was built in the same mold as Pozniak. He agreed late in the season, though, to a move to center a checking line that had been struggling to find its identity. Walsh said that move turned out to be the final big piece of the puzzle for his team, and called Bell "one of the top stars" in the playoff wins over Avon and Medway.



"We're going to miss the four seniors we lose, but we've gotten better every year since I've been here, and I see no reason why that trend shouldn't continue next year," said Walsh. "We return a lot of talent. If the guys coming back do everything they say they're going to do in the off season, I'll like our chances to take a big step up next year."

Top returning players include leading scorers Brendan Doonan (16 goals, 15 assists), Anders Goetz (9-21—30), Andy McKenna (12-12—24) and Conor Queenan (14-8—22), as well as defensemen Brian Scott, Sean McKenna and Eric Bartucca—three juniors, three sophomores and a freshman.

Juniors McKenna and Doonan teamed with sophomore Goetz to form the top scoring line this year. All three are strong skaters who move the puck extremely well. Once they settled into playing together, the trio routinely teamed for goals that would not have looked out of place on Sports Center Top 10 reels.

Queenan was top scorer on the second line, and joined Goetz and Doonan on the South Shore League All-Star team, giving the Skippers a total of five selections.

"Up front, we saw some really good things in terms of new leaders emerging," said Walsh. "Doonan, Queenan and McKenna matured a lot in just a few months. Based o what they showed, I think the younger players we have are set to follow them."

Cohasset's Jonny Wade starts the celebration after their convincing 8-3 win over Holbrook/ Avon in the Division 3 South Sectional.

Sophomore Jack Nelson is the heir apparent to Wade in net, and he is following in his skate marks in more than a few ways. Wade was a defenseman when he first tried out for the CHS hockey team, as was Nelson. In fact, Nelson was skating a regular shift on the blue line this season when Walsh approached him about the idea of cashing in his small pads for the big ones.

"I watched the way Jack moved for a while, the kind of reflexes he had and I thought this might work," said Walsh. "I think he was a little reluctant at first, but he offered to give it a try and now I think he's sold."

It helped Nelson immensely that he had a young goalie coach to work with—former Xaverian netminder Cole Clifford.

"Cole has done an outstanding job of working with Jack, and the progress has been amazing for so short a time. Jack plans on getting into some good goalie camps this summer, and I really, honestly think that, at this rate, he'll be a very solid high school goalie come next December."

Sophomore Travers Craven and freshman Alex Evans, Johnny Collins and Sean McKenna alls saw regular shifts this winter— the first three up front, the younger McKenna in back. This quartet is part of what Walsh considers an outstanding crop of underclassmen.

The Skippers started the season with 25 players, including eight freshmen—both high-water marks for Walsh's tenure.

He'll be looking to several of these underclassmen next winter to step into the voids created by this spring's graduations.

"The talent is definitely there, and we got some great experiences under our belt this winter," concluded Walsh. "It's pretty exciting. I'm already looking forward to the start of next season."

Cohasset eighth-grade travel team to playoffs

Last Sunday, Cohasset's eighth graders knocked off the No. 2 seed Pembroke Titans 37-33 to reach the finals of the Patriot League Travel Basketball Championship.

Despite dressing only seven healthy players, this gutsy group of Cohasset teenagers managed to keep the score close until the final minutes when Nick Tangherlini drained four free throws to secure the victory for Cohasset.

Cohasset limped into the tourney, securing the No. 6 seed on the final weekend of the regular season. Cohasset, with only seven players in uniform, knocked off Silver Lake in Halifax 47-40, a night before falling to Pembroke in overtime 36-34 on the last day of the season. Cohasset finished tied for sixth with Abington, but due to Cohasset's victory over Silver Lake, Cohasset won the tiebreaker with Abington and qualified for the last playoff spot.

Saturday the determined Cohasset squad traveled to Bridgewater-Raynham High School for a rematch with Silver Lake in the first round.

Cohasset came out determined to attack the boards early with Myles Gabarini and Thomas Gilliat grabbing the early rebounds and putting them back in for easy baskets. With Gilliat and Gabarini drawing so much attention underneath, Colin Gideon-Murphy was left wide open to drain three pointers stretching Cohasset's lead to 12 points at halftime. Despite not scoring in the first four minutes of the second half, Cohasset's in your face defense was able to maintain the lead until the likes of Shane Haggerty, Conor Dooley and Tangherlini could get untracked offensively. Silver Lake's best effort was not enough to overcome Cohasset's early lead and Cohasset held on to advance to the semi-finals with a 41-37 victory.

Back to Bridgewater on Sunday for another rematch, this time with the second-seed, Pembroke Titans. This contest was even throughout, with the largest lead being five points when Pembroke put a little run together half way through the first half. After a timeout from Coach Bob Tangherlini, Cohasset caught their breath and with fresh bodies put a run together of their own to tie the score at 19-19 at the half. Craig Davis, Colin Gideon Murphy and Nick Tangherlini pressured the Pembroke guards into turnovers and Cohasset's front-court of Conor Dooley and Myles Gabarini were able to convert at the other end to keep this contest close.

Halftime could not have come at a better time, as the feisty Cohasset seven began to tire with four of the players battling the flu. The second half was a classic tug of war, with each squad matching each team's intensity until the closing minutes. With Pembroke trailing by a point and their leading scorer at the foul line, assistant coach Paul Davis notified the referee that one of the Pembroke players had a habit of entering the lane early. Sure enough as the ball went through the basket to tie the score, the whistle blew and both referees called the lane violation, disallowing the basket, Cohasset still led by one.

Pee Wee B1 team wins Gold Medal in Lake Placid

What a great weekend for the Coastal Stars Pee Wee B1 team as they traveled to Lake Placid to compete in the CHE American Cup tournament against teams from the Coastal Stars, Haverhill Massachusetts and Cranford New Jersey.

The Stars were able to get to the championship game by remaining undefeated in the preliminary rounds with hard fought games against Cranford, Coastal Stars B2 and the team from Greater Haverhill Massachusetts. They got their championship run started in the first round with a victory over Cranford New Jersey 2-0 on goals scored by player of the game Matt McQuillan with great passing from his line mates on the first goal.

Jack Shaw fired in a great shot from the slot later in the contest to add a well-needed insurance goal to solidify the victory. This was an up down hard fought game with everyone contributing to the team's shutout.

In the second game, B1 faced off against their in town rivals Coastal Stars B2 in what would turn out to be a back and forth very competitive 4-4 tie. In this game, the B1 team was able to once again combine strong skating and good passing on each of their scores.

The play of line mates, Liam Manning, Cam Mastrangelo and Derek Sloan accounted for three of the goals and helped Manning be named player of the game. Joe Deyeso also knocked one home and this was all because of hard work and determination from his entire line. This really was a great game to watch for all the parents and friends who made the trip and really showed how well both teams played all weekend, a real tribute to the entire Coastal Stars program.

Heading into the third game of the tournament, the team knew they needed either a tie or a win to continue into the Championship round. Once again, they didn't let us down earning a very tough 2-2 tie with the Greater Haverhill team.

In this game, the Stars were able to jump out to quick lead 1-0 on a goal by Domenic Calapa assisted by Jake Maher and Matt McQuiilan. The Haverhill team behind strong goaltending and continued pressure from their forwards were able to take the lead deep into the third period.

However, with a little over two minutes remaining, player of the game Jo Jo Carbone with help from Joe Deyeso and Jack Shaw was able to tie the score and move their team into the Gold Medal game.

As they entered the Gold Medal game against Cranford New Jersey, the Stars knew they would have to keep up their strong all around play to have a chance at winning the big prize. As with all the games, goalie Nick Barnhard, the tournament MVP, played tremendously in making sure nothing got past him in this hard fought contest.

Jacob Maher, the player of the game netted both goals on great passing from his wingers Domenic Calapa and Matt McQuillan for the Stars win. Stalwarts on defense throughout the entire tournament were defenseman Dylan Coppenrath, Gus Conway, Matt Johnson, Mats Nelson, Robert Reidy, and Conner Thompson.

They all continually kept Cranford at bay with solid checking and great passing to the forwards up front making sure goalie Barnhard could complete the shut out. Combining with this tough defense was the hard work of all the forwards with their tenacious forechecking and back checking keeping Cranford on their heels throughout the entire championship game.

This was truly a complete team effort and a great away to end the weekend trip. A special thanks goes out to all the parents for their time and support during the entire tournament.

CYBSA to hold player draft for upcoming spring season on April 2

The CYBSA will hold its roster selection draft on April 2nd, 7:00pm at the Cohasset High School Library.

The purpose of the draft is to allocate players to teams in all Baseball and Softball divisions with the exception of the Major League Baseball Division. Teams in the Major League Baseball division have already been selected.

Leagues included in the draft are:

Baseball Divisions:
Farm League (T-ball) baseball
National League baseball
American League baseball
Junior League baseball
Softball Divisions:
All Softball divisions

If you are interested in coaching in any of these divisions, then you should plan on attending the draft. All interested coaches must sign in at draft night and complete a coach volunteer form (CORI) in order to be eligible for any coaching position.

Note: The CYBSA will also be conducting a coach's clinic in early April. We will have some top notch talent offering tips on coaching all youth divisions. Final date, time and place TBD.

If you have any questions, feel free to email Erik Golz at Erik.Golz@adsfs.com or call 617-230-2559.

Pembroke was now forced to foul Cohasset and "Iceman" Nick Tangherlini sank all four free throws in the final seconds, allowing for a proud ride home with his dad, Coach Tangherlini. Cohasset now advances to the finals, next Sunday against Bridgewater and expects to get a much needed boost from the return of Connor O'Brien and Christian Davis from the disabled list.

The Bridgewater team Cohasset faces next Sunday in Bridgewater at 3:30pm has a record of 18-0 this season and has won the Patriot League the prior two seasons. Playing on their home court for the finals only adds to Bridgewater's overwhelming advantage, but if there is one group of kids who can pull off the upset next week it is this group of very skilled and passionate friends playing in their last basketball game before high school.

A little history on this Cohasset team: As sixth graders Cohasset drew the sixth seed and behind Christian Davis's late game three pointers knocked off a stunned Abington squad to reach the finals before succumbing to Bridgewater. As seventh graders, Cohasset was eliminated in overtime in the semi-finals when the clock operator failed to start the clock in the closing seconds allowing Whitman to score well after time should have expired. And now as eighth graders, they find themselves once again in the big dance as towns much larger than Cohasset are left home admiring the rebirth of basketball in Cohasset. A huge thank you to coaches Bob Tangherlini and Paul Davis for all their time and commitment and also to travel ball coordinator Chris Haggerty for his tremendous dedication to the sport of basketball in Cohasset.

Minutes add up in Read-a-thon

The 2009 PSO Read-a-thon came to a close this past week at the Osgood School, the Deer Hill School and for several Cohasset Middle School students. The minutes have been tallied, the money accounted for and the winners announced. At the Osgood School, students read a total of 87,433 minutes over three weeks and raised more than $6,000. All students received bright red rulers and top readers in each class were given Read-a-thon notebooks.

Deer Hill tallied a total of 238,857 minutes, with a healthy and spirited competition between classes. Read-a-thon notebooks were distributed to all students, along with beautiful silver bookmarks for top class readers and NASA decals for the top 75 readers in the school. Monies raised at the Deer Hill totaled $5, 941. All donated funds will go to supporting curriculum through special events, innovative teaching tools and learning programs. Top readers in each class also enjoy the privilege of choosing a book to donate to the school library, generously provided by Buttonwood Books and Toys.

Throughout the three-week event, students enjoyed a variety of related activities. Juanita Shenette shared her story as a woman who gained her literacy at the age of 54 and answered many questioned from interested Deer Hill fourth and fifth graders.

Guest Reader Day was a school-wide celebration featuring readers from our Cohasset community, including firefighters, librarians, police officers and our own Police Chief James Hussey. The staff at the schools supported this event with enthusiasm for reading both in and out of the classroom. The bulletin board recording the minutes read was an active spot for students and teachers alike to gauge the competition between classes.

The PSO Read-a-thon celebrates both community and reading for all with the support of the Cohasset Reads Together Program, our school staff, parents and, above all, our Cohasset students, who will hope to do it all again in 2010.

Green was the theme

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

Many students were spotted in the halls wearing some sort of Irish-related paraphernalia.

Hello everyone! The good news this week was that there was a half-day for students on Wednesday. The bad news is that everyday while driving to school it is challenge just to drive through town without throwing off my car's alignment. No matter though, because as a senior, I only have about 40 days left of these morning commutes. I cannot express in words how thrilled I am about this.

Green was the theme this past Tuesday, which was St. Patrick's Day. Many students were spotted in the halls wearing some sort of Irish-related paraphernalia. The "Eat Your Art" exhibit was held this past Wednesday. Although my entry and I missed the memo that it was held at 6:30 instead of 7:30, I heard from a very reliable source that all of the entries were just as delicious as they were artistic. The world wasn't ready for my "artistic-ulinary" talent, anyways.

Mr. Skipper was a huge success, as always, and raised quite a bit of money for the senior class. All of the contestants contributed to making the show spectacular, but only one can hold the title of the 2009 Mr. Skipper. And that title goes to this year's winner, August Oddliefson! Congrats, August!

The best part about this week, though, is the fact that spring has officially begun. I am personally very excited to be rid of all of this snow and embrace the warm weather up ahead. Hopefully we won't be getting any surprise flurries anytime soon. With that, I leave you all to a wonderful weekend! Until next week, arrivederci!

Lauren Mack is a senior at CHS; her column appears weekly during the school year.

Recreation Notes

Don't miss Recreation Fair Sunday at Cohasset High School

To register for any program, visit the Web site at cohassetrec.com, stop by the office at Town Hall or call 781-383-4109.

Recreation Fair, Cohasset High School – Join Cohasset Recreation for its first Recreation Fair at Cohasset High School from 1 to 4 p.m., on Sunday, March 22. Start off spring by celebrating the health, fitness and recreation opportunities offered in Cohasset. There will be fun for the entire family with giveaways and prizes from a wide array of vendors. Information about the 2009 Summer Playground Program will be available.

Red Sox Games – Join Cohasset Recreation and watch the Boston Red Sox play this year. Package price includes bleacher seat and round-trip transportation. This is for Cohasset residents only, with a one-game limit per family with a maximum number of five tickets within an immediate family. Price per person is $36. All games are at 7:05 pm. Buses will leave Cohasset at 5:30 p.m., and return approximately at 10:30 p.m.

Schedule:

Friday, May 8, versus Tampa Bay Rays.

Wednesday, July 8, versus Oakland A's.

Tuesday, Sept. 15, versus LA Angels.

Applications available at the Recreation office.

Kitchen Kids Workshop, Our World Museum – Kitchen Kids is a way to introduce kids to the joy of creative cooking in a fun and safe atmosphere. Children ages 5 through 12 will meet from 3 to 5 p.m., Saturday, March 21. Spring Cuisine will be featured.

Yoga, Cohasset Town Hall – Hatha yoga class will include moving meditation including gentle stretching and strengthening postures with breathing exercises to decrease stress and increase flexibility. Meets Thursdays, 9:30 a.m. Cost is $8.

Computer Explorers Program, Cohasset Recreation Center – Elementary Engineering. This hands-on engineering class combines Lego Educations and Lego Technic materials to explore motorized simple machines by building realistic models. Students team creatively to solve challenges using concepts learned in class. This is the first of four in a series providing preparation for the First Lego League. FLL extends the first concept of inspiring and celebrating science and technology to children ages 8 through 11 using real-world context and hands-on experimentation. Meets Tuesdays, 4 to 4:45 p.m. Cost is $90 per child.

CPR - CPR will be held at Cohasset Town Hall. American Heart Association CPR courses instructed by members of the Cohasset Fire Department; CPR instruction includes adult, child and infant CPR. Two-year certification card. Cost $45 per class. Wednesday, April 1. 6- 10 p.m.

Drive in Control — Drive in Control Saturday, April 4, 1 - 5:30 p.m. . In Control Advanced Driver Training is the first Massachusetts certified driver skills course in the state. Drivers are taught how to avoid crashes and how to best respond in a variety of high speed driving situations, including ABS braking, tailgating (and what safe driving distances really are), car control, handling distractions while driving, etc. Students have the opportunity to get behind the wheel with a professional driver and practice these emergency situations. Class is held in South Weymouth Group Class Rate for Cohasset Recreation $274 and $225 for second/subsequent member of same family. Insurance deductions are available with most insurance carriers.

Instant Piano — Instant Piano at Cohasset Town Hall. You don't need years of weekly lessons to learn piano. You can learn enough in this one workshop to play almost any song on the piano with two hands. Then go on to perfect your technique at home using a home-study CD provided by the instructor. This is the system the pros use—chords, not tedious note reading. Over 150,000 have taken this course successfully since its inception in 1982. It really works. Fee: $64, includes course materials (book/CD)

Instructor: Robert Laughlin invented the one day chord piano workshop in 1982, and it has been taken successfully by over 150,000 students. Robert has worked as a professional pianist and is the author of some 20 books on learning piano, several of which have been translated into German. He holds a degree from the University of California. Thursday, April 16, 6:30-10 p.m.

Yoga, Cohasset Town Hall. Hatha Yoga Class - Moving meditation including gentle stretching and strengthening postures with breathing exercises to decrease stress and increase flexibility. Thursdays – 9:30 a.m. Cost $8.

DAY TRIPS

Daffodil Festival on Nantucket – Saturday, April 25. Celebrate spring at this annual tradition. Fee of $119 includes round-trip motor coach transportation to Hyannis, round-trip Fast Ferry to Nantucket, guide and tour. There will be time to shop and have lunch on one's own. Bus departs Cohasset Town Hall at 6 a.m., and returns around 6 p.m.

New York, Metropolitan Museum of Art – Saturday, May 16. This trip to the Big Apple gives people a choice between spending the day in New York shopping and touring or admission to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Fee of $49 includes round-trip motor coach transportation, guide, and $69 with admission at the museum, plus audio headsets. Bus departs Cohasset Town Hall at 6 a.m., and returns around 10:30 p.m.

Cabbage Island Clambake – Sunday, June 28. Experience Maine's Downeast Clambake. The $119 fee includes round-trip motor coach transportation to Boothbay, round trip boat transportation to the island, clambake and guide. Bus departs Cohasset Town Hall at 7 a.m., and returns around 6 p.m.

American Legion to host events

Back by popular demand – Crusin will take place from 7:30 to 11:30 p.m., on Saturday, March 21, at the Legion Post on Summer Street. Cost is $5 and the event is open to the public. Light refreshments will be available. Featured will be five decades of music. This event is a fundraiser for scholarships for Cohasset High School seniors.

American Legion Auxiliary will host a Tax Dinner at 6 p.m., on Saturday, April 11. Cost is $8 per person. Dinner will include pasta, meatballs, salad, bread and butter. Also featured will be raffles and Crusin. Funds raised will support the Women's Auxiliary scholarships and programs.

The Best & The Brightest

Braintree Forum, Cohasset Mariner, Duxbury Reporter, Hanover Mariner, The Hingham Journal, Kingston Reporter, Marshfield Mariner, Norwell Mariner, Old Colony Memorial, Pembroke Mariner & Reporter, Scituate Mariner, Wareham Courier, Weymouth News

We know there are many bright, talented and caring young adults in our communities. Coming the week of May 24th, a special section entitled "The Best & The Brightest" will appear in the COHASSET MARINER to celebrate their accomplishments.

Please help us find these remarkable teens and young adults by filling out the nomination form on this page. You can nominate an individual between the ages of 16 and 21 who, you believe, deserves to be honored, whether it be for academic achievement, volunteerism, athletics, artistic acumen or the pursuit of excellence in another field. Here's your opportunity to get involved.

You can bring the form to the Community Newspaper Company office at 182 Standish Ave., Plymouth, MA 02360; mail it to Beth Doyle at the same address; or fax it to 508-591-6601.
Ballots are also available online at www.wickedlocalspecials.com/best/cohasset-mariner.pdf

All entries will be considered by a selection panel. One winner from each town will be interviewed and photographed for inclusion in "The Best & The Brightest," a CNC special section devoted to sharing the stories of these outstanding individuals.

OBITUARIES

Harry H. Ritter

Former Cohasset Harbormaster

Harry H. Ritter, 84, a native of Cohasset, died March 4, 2009, in Sarasota, Fla.

Mr. Ritter was known for his love of family, people and a good laugh, and was famous for a multitude of one-liners, a twinkle in his eye and his ease and grace on the dance floor.

In his younger days he enjoyed hunting, his foxhounds and judging at field trials. Mr. Ritter served in the U.S. Navy during World War II.

Lobster fishing became his next venture, and he went on to become the Cohasset Harbormaster. While a lobsterman, he decided to clear the field at Government Island and unearthed the template for the construction of Minot Light. Funding was then provided by Jessie Cox for the creation of the Minot Light Memorial Park, as it is seen today, and which honors those lost at sea.

Back in the day, when what is now Atlantica was Hugo's, Mr. Ritter would arrive on the bow of a boat as Santa to attend the annual seniors' Christmas party sponsored by owner John Carzis. He was a member of the Second Congregational Church and served as a Deacon. He was also a member of the Konohassett Masonic Lodge, American Legion George Mealy Post 118, Scituate VFW and Hatherly Country Club.

He leaves his wife of 63 years, Marjorie (Higgins) Ritter; his children, Darleen Ritter and Lynn Zelms, both of Sarasota, Fla.; his son-in-law, Robert Zelms; three grandchildren, Nichole, Harry and Jason Curtin; and two great-grandchildren, Nina and Elise Curtin.

He was the father of the late Roxanne Curtin.

A celebration of life will be held at 11 a.m., on Saturday, May 30, at Second Congregational Church in Cohasset, 43 Highland Ave.

Manuel F. Perdigao

Retired from Cabot Corporation

Manuel F. Perdigao, 78, of Cohasset and Oak Bluffs, Martha's Vineyard, died Sunday, March 15, 2009.

He was a graduate of Boston College, class of 1956 and worked for the Cabot Corporation until his retirement in 1990. Manuel was also a U.S. Army Veteran, Sergeant, having served in Korea.

Mr. Perdiagao leaves his wife Valeta (MacDonald); his children Michael and his wife Caren of Columbia, Md., Pamela Perdigao of Atlanta, Ga., Mark and his wife Lori of Princeton, N.J., Paul and his wife Mariette of Marshfield. Mr. Perdigao was the devoted grandfather of Brian, Steve, Julia, and Scott Perdigao and the brother of Alexander and his wife Lucy Perdigao, Claire Nicolas and her husband, Chuck, Arthur and his wife Judy and Dolores Mittermeir and her husband Fred. He is also survived by many loving cousins, nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass was celebrated March 19, in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset handled the arrangements.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Mr. Perdiagao's memory may be made to the American Cancer Society, Central New England Chapter, 5 Manley St., W. Bridgewater, MA. 02379. For an online guest book, visit www.mcnamara-sparrell.com

Walker to preach at Beechwood Church

Beechwood Congregational Church, 51 Church St., will present the Rev. Liz Walker as a guest preacher at 10 a.m., on Sunday, March 22. "Jesus' Sacrificial Love" will be the subject of Rev. Walker's sermon. All are invited. There will be refreshments and fellowship following the service in Merritt Hall.

St. Joseph Retreat Center offers programs

St. Joseph Retreat Center, 339 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset invites the public to the following programs.

Mornings of Prayer:

Monday, March 30, 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., "Contemplating Jesus in His Passion."

Thursday, April 16, 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., "Contemplating The Resurrected Christ."

This winter there are many ongoing programs at St. Stephen's include bible studies for adults, youth group activities, the children's Christian education program "Godly Play", outreach programs serving the hungry and homeless, yoga, meditation and a monthly luncheon for seniors.

In Lent we are also offering the following:

• Bach and Spirituality: The St. John Passion with Dr. John Whiteside, Director of Music Ministries, Wednesdays March 25, from 6:30 – 7:00 pm (dessert and fellowship), 7 – 8 pm class.

Johann Sebastian Bach was a deeply spiritual man who developed a musical language that was representative of his spirituality. Using St. John as a background, join our new director of music ministries, John Whiteside, for this exploration of how music and spirituality work together to deepen our experience of Lent.

•The Meaning of Jesus: Two Visions, Sundays March 22 & 29 in the Rectory, from 12 – 1:30 pm

Marcus Borg and N.T. Wright are two well-known and highly respected Biblical scholars and Anglican theologians. Good friends and colleagues, they represent two very different perspectives in the church: Borg considers himself a "progressive", Wright is more "orthodox." Together they wrote The Meaning of Jesus: Two Visions, in which they offer their divergent interpretations of some of the most fundamental issues of our faith.

• Show Me the Way: Lenten Meditations by Henri Nouwen, Wednesdays March 4 – April 8 from 10:30 – 11:30 am

Journey through Lent with this spiritual classic by the great Catholic priest, monk and writer Henri Nouwen. We will use this book in our daily devotions at home, and meet on Wednesday mornings to share our thoughts and reflections with each other.

You can reach the church at 781-383-1083. The Rev. Margot Critchfield can be reached at mcritchfield@ststephenscohasset.org. Our offices, which are open Monday through Friday, can be accessed by coming to the back of the church, up the Highland Ave hill. We are handicap accessible.

Camp Jobs & Internships: A World of Opportunity

Since camps ARE worlds created exclusively for children, folks working at camp generally enjoy spending time with children, but every camp employee does not work directly with children. There are some camp jobs and internships that involve the care and keeping of the camp and its equipment rather than that of the campers!

The American Camp Assoc., New England has compiled a list of essential and lesser known jobs that are required at camps across the country.

- The general counselor - counselors, which is the most common job, work directly with directly with children—teaching, listening, problem-solving, chaperoning, entertaining, supervising, and helping in various ways.
- The Shopper - a chief provisioning role in camp requiring numerous trips to various stores, to the Post Office and to perform errands.
- The Driver - (may require special license)—drop off and pick up those cancers or hikers on out of camp trips, run camp errands, take a camp team to compete at a neighboring camp, drive campers to doctor/dentist visits, or pick up and drop off staff and campers at the airport or bus station.
- The Kitchen Staff - can be highly specialized (pot scrubber or dishwasher) or general (assistants can do everything from chopping veggies for the salad bar, receiving deliveries or running the dishwasher).
- The Maintenance/ Ground Jobs - mow fields, deliver camper gear on opening and closing day, do odd jobs involving basic carpentry and/or brute strength, perform maintenance for camp vehicles and other equipment, like boats, and keep camp looking neat.
- The Office-Based Work - deal with the ever-growing mounds of camper mail and email, keep up with registration and health forms and parent requests, and be a friendly voice on the telephone.
- The Lifeguard - use that Red Cross credential to keep campers safe in the lake or pool.
- The Animal Care - horses, small farm animals, llamas even are an important part of camp programming and camp life; animals require attention and care during the hot summer months.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
MARCH 16, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you tend to bore easily and leave others to finish what you start, this is one time when you'd be wise to complete things on your own. Then you can move on to something new.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your indecision about a personal situation might come out of those mixed signals you're getting. Best not to make any commitments until you have a better sense of how things are going.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A dispute appears to be getting out of hand. But you should be able to step in and bring it all under control soon. Be patient. News about a potential career move might be delayed.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Career obligations could interfere with important personal plans. But using a combination of common sense and compromise helps resolve the dilemma to everyone's satisfaction.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A stressful situation drains some of your energy reserves. But you soon bounce back in time to finish your tasks and enjoy a well-deserved weekend getaway.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time to throw a party for friends and colleagues and surprise them with your dazzling domestic skills. You might also want to reconsider that career move you put on hold.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A sudden change of mind by someone you relied on could cause a delay in moving ahead with your plans. But those whom you've helped out before are prepared to return the favor.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You start the week feeling too shy to speak up in front of others. However, your self-assurance soon takes over, giving you the confidence you need to make yourself heard.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) One way to deal with a pesky personal dilemma this week is to meet it head-on. Insist on an explanation of why the situation reached this point and what can be done to change it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The creative Capricorn finds several outlets for her or his talents this week. Also note that while a romantic connection looks promising, remember to allow it to develop on its own.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You stand out this week as the best friend a friend can have. But be careful that you don't take too many bows, or you might see gratitude replaced with resentment.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) What seems to be an ideal investment should be checked out thoroughly before you snap at the offer and find yourself hooked by an expensive scam.

(c) 2009 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your wisdom is matched by your generosity. You are a person who people know they can rely on.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

'Godspell' reinvigorated at the Company Theatre

Edgy music, New York Equity rocker as Jesus renew classic musical

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Not unlike the holy Bible that inspired it, "Godspell," the musical based on the Gospel According to St. Matthew, is open to interpretation. Its original, iconic 1970s New York production put Jesus in an abandoned playground surrounded by a company of clowns, while later productions have been set in everything from a high-tech universe to a golden-arch-wrapped fast food restaurant.

A new Company Theatre production of the show, opening Friday in Norwell, moves the action to an archeological dig.

"Anytime you do 'Godspell,' it is different. We've decided to make this production a 'Godspell' for the millennium," explained co-director Zoe Bradford by telephone last week. "We're approaching the parables in a whole new way by going global, instead of adhering to the usual pop culture themes."

With music and lyrics by Stephen Schwartz ("Pippin," "Wicked"), and a book by John-Michael Tebelak, "Godspell" secured its place in pop culture thanks to touring companies too numerous to count, a 1973 feature film, several cast albums, and a hit song, "Day by Day," which made it to number 13 on the Billboard pop singles charts in the summer of 1972.

'Godspell' co-director Zoe Bradford.

"Our music director, Michael Joseph, knows Stephen Schwartz and has great respect for him as a composer and for the originality of this piece. We think Stephen would be very pleased with Michael's approach to the score. On 'Light of the World,' for example, Michael is using all kinds of percussions and vocals for a kind of world drum-off. The music in this show is phenomenal.

"There's a great edge to it, which we all just love," says Bradford of Joseph, her co-director Jordie Saucerman, and choreographer Sally Ashton Forrest. The longtime Company collaborators are joined on the project by a large local cast and one New York import in a pivotal role.

"We have 33 people in the cast, which is large for this show, but we wanted this number because it was the age Jesus was when he died. During rehearsals, we divided the cast into what were almost improv groups and involved the performers directly in the development of their characters. It is a very fun journey, of course, where you remember the parables, but there is also the passion of Act II, which is perfect for this season of Lent and Easter.

"The whole process was profoundly emotional, because the material is so well written that you can't help but be moved by the last days of Christ."

It took well past the last days of casting to find someone to play that role, too.

"It wasn't easy to find someone to play the role of Jesus. Our search took much longer than expected, because everyone we considered locally was already booked. We began rehearsals with the rest of the cast, before we found our Jesus, and it became even more clear as we worked on the show who we really needed for Jesus Christ. We realized we had to put out an Equity call, which is rare for us, but which turned out to be a good thing. We found a New York-based actor by the name of Scoop Slone who has done everything from rock to opera and who fronts a rock band called Maslow."

Slone, whose credits include New York and regional theater productions of "Hair" and "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," wasted no time in making disciples of his new friends in Norwell, according to Bradford.

"Scoop has proven to be extremely invigorating to this whole experience. He fits like a glove with the rest of the company, too."

"Godspell" will be at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, March 20 – April 11. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787 or go online at companytheatre.com.

Travel to St. Croix and you may get hooked

Kathie Ragsdale
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

ST. CROIX, USVI — Glance at the arm of many a St. Croix woman and you may see a silver or gold bracelet encircling her wrist, clasped shut by a horseshoe-shaped link.

The bracelet is called "the St. Croix hook," and while it represents love, it also symbolizes the pull of this Caribbean paradise — the largest and least developed of the U.S. Virgin Islands.

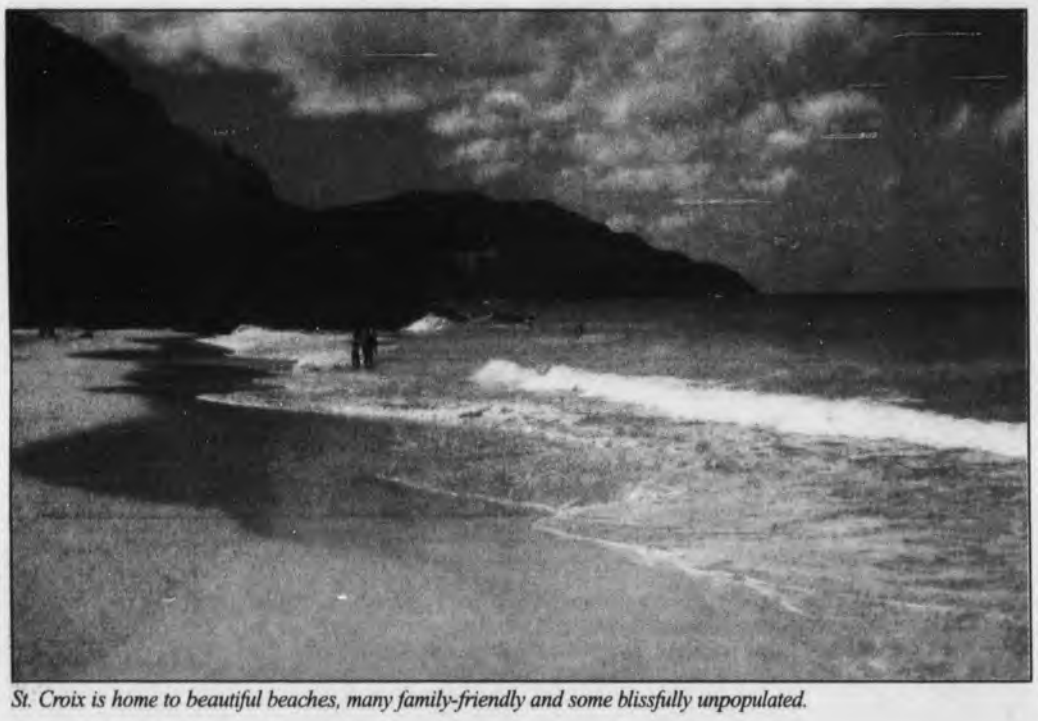
St. Croix's allure extends to everyone from those seeking natural wonders to underwater-sports enthusiasts to vacationers who simply want to curl their toes in warm sand and sip some of the island's renowned Cruzan rum. It's an easy island to get hooked on.

Just 28 miles long by 7 miles wide, and home to some 55,000 people, the island endeared itself to my husband and me as soon as we first stepped off a plane into tiny Henry E. Rohlsen Airport (where free samples of rum are offered to new arrivals).

Now officially part of the United States as an unincorporated territory (no passport required to visit), St. Croix has a history that includes occupation by seven nations and the population is a mix of nationalities, including the offspring of slaves who once worked the sugar cane plantations, transplants from other Caribbean islands, a few Europeans (mostly of Danish descent), and continental Americans who have either resettled on-island or live here as snowbirds.

It's a place with a "wild side," — the western end, home to rainforest, jungle hiking trails, cliff-top panoramas and beaches, such as Sunset Beach, where locals always seem to outnumber tourists. The less rugged eastern end also has its natural attractions, most notably a coral reef that draws snorkelers and divers from around the world with its diverse and wildly colorful varieties of fish.

And there is culture too. Frederiksted, on the western end of St. Croix, is the smaller of the island's two cities (the other is Christiansted), and the grittier of the two. It's six main streets are choked with small shops, convenience stores and eateries, as well as several crumbling, abandoned buildings - part of the legacy of Hurricane Hugo, which ravaged the island in 1989. But Frederiksted also has a welcoming waterfront, where once-a-month outdoor jazz concerts draw locals and visitors alike.



And the city of 1,000 has an assortment of fine restaurants, including the renowned Blue Moon jazz club (www.bluemoonstcroix.com; 340-772-2222; dinner entrees, $23 to $29) and the ever-so-French Le St. Tropez (340-772-3000; $17 to $36).

To the north are laid-back beach bars like the Sunset Grill, which also serves exceptional food including a signature coconut-encrusted mahi (www.sunsetgrill-stx.com; 340-772-5855; $23 to $30). Head north too to the Domino's bar, known for both its beer-drinking pigs and owner Norma's killer "mamawanna" rum drinks.

PHOTOS BY RICK SIBLEY

View from the Sunset Grill on St. Croix.

St. Croix is home to beautiful beaches, many family-friendly and some blissfully unpopulated.

Christiansted, some 50 miles to the east, is brighter and more touristy, with pastel-colored buildings dating back to the Danish occupation, a National Historic Site including Fort Christiansvaern (1738) and numerous galleries and jewelry shops.

Sonya, Ltd., is maker of the original "St. Croix hook" bracelet — wear the hook facing toward your heart, your heart is taken; facing away, you are available. Variations of the bracelet can be found in other shops, along with other "storytelling" jewelry, such as necklaces and bracelets strung with up to five gold or silver beads, signifying the category of the hurricanes their wearers survived.

Christiansted is not to be outdone on the restaurant front, offering, among others, the Savant, featuring fine Caribbean food (340-713-8666; $16 to $33); Cafe Christine, fine French food (340-713-1500; lunch only); and.Restaurant Bacchus, steaks and chops (www.restaurantbacchus.com; 340-692-9922; $30 to $40).

The keynote of St. Croix's natural attractions is its "underwater trail" of coral and fish life in the 880-acre Buck Island Reef National Monument, off the northeast point of the island. Numerous outfitters take guests to the reef and provide snorkeling gear. Divers can choose from a half-dozen dive shops.

For landlubbers, St. George Village Botanical Gardens toward the western side of the island offer visitors a chance to examine colorful native flora set among the ruins of a 19th century plantation. And the Salt River Bay National Park, where Christopher Columbus landed, is home to the largest remaining mangrove forest in the U.S. Virgin Islands.

A 25-acre former plantation on the northern side of the island, Estate Little Princess, is headquarters for the The Nature Conservancy in the U.S. Virgin Islands and Eastern Caribbean.

Guardian Richard Gideon is only too pleased to show visitors around and point out the natural wonders, and the solar-powered features, on the property. Gideon is someone who hopes he never gets promoted from his current position. "I don't want to leave St. Croix," he said.

The Nature Conservancy also maintains the new 60-square-acre East End Marine Park on the island, where it is helping protect the sea turtles that regularly nest there. When the turtles aren't nesting, beach strolling along the Nature Conservancy-owned Isaac Bay and Jack Bay is spectacular - and very private.

Perhaps most alluring about St. Croix is how most of the people you meet have a laid-back approach to life. Prepare to get hooked.

Progress 2009

Don't miss the 2009 issue of Progress & Innovation, a special section in this week's newspaper. Progress annually explores the evolution of our regional marketplace.

In this year's issue, we look at how local businesses are surviving despite the economy, how the popularity of microbrews has helped some area breweries grow, and how one company matches organ donors with recipients.

From cranberry growers, who experienced a successful harvest, to golf courses trying to generate business to an online social media site for small area businesses, we take a long look at what's happening in our business community.

So please take a look yourself and see what's going on in your own backyard.

Water rate, finances top debate

Town Meeting is Saturday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I think voters will be very focused on the finances of the town."
— Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr

If you want your voice to be heard and your vote to be counted on a proposed water rate increase, a tight operating budget, a host of capital items and other issues, then make your way to the high school gymnasium for Annual Town Meeting tomorrow.

Beginning promptly at 9a.m., citizens will be asked their collective opinion on a total of 19 articles, or items of business. Although this Town Meeting has a shorter agenda than is typical, a variety of issues should generate lively discussion.

"The water rate increase proposal is going to be a big issue," said Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr. Article 11 proposes a $60 per quarter rate increase that would affect 80 percent of town water users. Carr predicts comments about the water quality and future rate increases will top discussion for the article.

The numerous articles related to town financing, from the operating budget to a $17,000 request for a study on Cat Dam/inner Little Harbor, are sure to grab some spotlight, too.

METCO students reflect on Cohasset program

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Last week, hundreds of supporters of the METCO program clogged the hallways and gathered at the Grand Staircase of the State House to lobby legislators for level funding of the program. Among them were more than 70 local students, parents and teachers from the South Shore and Boston.

The Metropolitan Council for Education Opportunity, more commonly known as "METCO," is a state-funded grant program that promotes diversity and educational opportunity for approximately 3,300 inner-city youths, as well as thousands of students in the METCO receiving school districts. Cohasset public schools have 49 METCO students spread throughout all grade levels.

The Mariner spoke with three METCO students both from the past and the present about the program. One is a mother of fourth grader who would love to see her son awarded the same opportunity to be a part of the METCO program. Another is a recent grad of Cohasset High who said being part of the program has helped her succeed in higher education. And one is a current student, who still wakes up at 5a.m. every morning and often doesn't return home to 9p.m.

Amid talks of significant funding cuts to the program in which over 30 metro

Wind petition gets 800 signatures

May not have much standing

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With what could be the final public hearing on the proposed Cohasset Heights wind turbine development this coming Monday, many in town will make their concerns about the project heard by signing a petition.

For the past few weeks, a group of residents in a private resident group calling themselves the Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee have been about town talking to residents about the concerns they have about the turbines — and asking if they share those views. As of Wednesday, the signatures on the petition numbered over 800.

Jeff Patterson of 10 Sanctuary Pond Road and one of the members of the Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee said the impetus for the signature drive was to show the Planning Board the concerns over the project were not only felt by the neighborhoods near the proposed site, but also by residents across town.

"The large number of signatures reflects a broad consensus from a cross-section of town residents that there are serious problems with the (Cohasset Heights) turbine project as proposed," said Patterson in an e-mail. The petition will be submitted to the Planning Board office

The petition (see sidebar for full text) indicated the undersigned believe the turbine project as proposed "would be detri-

'Move Over' law goes into effect

In an effort to keep Massachusetts roadways safer, the Cohasset Police Department , Fire Department and the Executive Office of Public Safety and Security (EOPSS) are raising awareness for the state's new Move Over Law and promoting safe driving across the Commonwealth.

The new law, which took effect on March 22, 2009, is meant to help protect police, firefighters, paramedics, tow truck drivers, and all roadside emergency and maintenance workers. The law requires all drivers approaching a stationary emergency or maintenance vehicle with flashing lights to move to the next adjacent lane if it is safe to do so, and, barring that, to reduce their speed. Violating the Move Over Law can be expensive as well as dangerous as failure to comply could result in a fine of up to $100.

"We ask that all drivers in Cohasset and across Massachusetts take a moment to slow down and move over - if it safe to do so - if they see an officer, emergency responder or maintenance vehicle stopped on the side of the road," said Cohasset Police Chief James M. Hussey. "Together we can make the roadways of Massachusetts safer and less stressful for everyone involved."

"Together we can make the roadways of Massachusetts safer and less stressful for everyone involved."
Police Chief
James Hussey

Every year, first responders across the country are injured or killed while providing emergency roadside help. In the past six months alone, several Massachusetts state troopers have been injured on the job. According to the Merit Rating Board, in 2008 there were nearly 2000 violations of the Chapter 89 law that deals with obstructing emergency vehicles including failure to yield and following too closely.

Harbormaster boat sells to Sailing Club

The Board of Selectmen voted Monday night to sell the town's 17-foot Boston Whaler to the Cohasset Sailing Club. The 27-year-old boat with an engine that's 12 to 14 years old is no longer needed by the Harbormaster department due to the purchase of a new boat last year. The Blue Book value of the hull is $1,200 and Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons does not believe the engine to have any value.

The Sailing Club expressed an interest in the surplus boat to both Gibbons and Town Manager Bill Griffin.

Under Massachusetts General Laws, the town may dispose of property with a value less than $5,000 in a manner that would benefit a local non-profit organization in accordance with written procedures adopted by the Town.

The Board of Selectmen accepted this as a policy and approved the sale of the boat to the Sailing Club for $1,200.

POLICE BEAT

Gym thief strikes locally

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police say a white man, over six feet ball, in his late 20s or early 30s wearing a blue and white baseball-style cap, navy sweatshirt, jeans and silver-blue sneakers stole from lockers at a local gym off Route 3A (King Street) last Wednesday. Witnesses believe he left in a white pickup.

The incident was reported at 8:16 p.m. on March 17.

Police said one victim, who lives in Hull, reported that the bolt was cut off his locker; his wallet with $50 was stolen along with a $50 gift card and credit cards. A second man reported his cell phone had been taken from his unlocked locker.

Once the thefts were discovered, witnesses realized that an unfamiliar man had entered the fitness center and they called police, Chief James Hussey said.

B& E MV

A Cohasset woman who had been walking in Whitney Woods last Friday (March 20) returned to her Chevrolet Trailblazer to find her window smashed and her square-shaped, green canvas bag missing. The bag contained $40 in cash and credit cards. The incident is under investigation and police urge motorists to put any valuables out of sight when leaving their car.

Shoplifting

Police are investigating shoplifting of large quantifies of baby formula from Stop & Shop. Chief Hussey said the baby formula, which is expensive, is sold to a secondary market. There are digital photos of the female suspect and police believe she has been identified, police said. There have been other similar larcenies at other Stop & Shop markets. It is unclear if the suspect can be tied into the other incidents.

Backpack stolen

An 11-year-old reported that his brown, sand-colored backpack with an iPod, textbook, and North Face-brand jacket inside was missing from the hook that he hung it on at the library.

The incident was reported at 4:06 p.m. on Wednesday (March 18).

Police have no suspects at this time but caution library-goers not to leave any valuables unattended.

Road kill

The DPW removed a dead deer at the bottom of the hill on Sohier Street near Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) on Tuesday (March 17) at 6:46 a.m. Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy routinely removes smaller dead animals from the town roadways but cannot fit a large animal, like a deer, in his SUV.

The DPW removed the deer as soon as personnel were available that morning. Removing a deer is also a "two-man operation," explained Murphy, who works in town half time. Murphy is also the animal control officer for Norwell.

Car keyed

A walk-in to the police station last Tuesday (March 17) reported that her car had been keyed. An officer confirmed there was damage to the back of the Dodge Durango, above the license plate. The vehicle belongs to the victim's mother, police said. The incident is under investigation.

Accidents

• A 1999 Saab, driven by a Scituate woman, hit a deer along the northbound side of Route 3A on Wednesday (March 18) at 7:34 a.m. The deer took off into the woods. Her car did not have to be towed and she was not injured. Chief Hussey said deer are still looking for food and that once spring fully arrives there should be less deer out foraging because there will be plenty of vegetation for them to eat in the woods.

• At 2:28 a.m. on Saturday (March 21) a Cohasset man operating a 1997 Lincoln Town Car veered off the road near a curve along Atlantic Avenue and hit a stonewall, police said. He did not appear to be injured and told police he had been using his iPod. He was cited for failure to stay within marked lanes and his car had to be towed.

• A 2000 GMC, operated by a Scituate man, struck a 1995 Ford, driven by a Braintree woman, in the parking area at the gas station at the corner of Beechwood and Route 3A on Saturday (March 21) at 2:30 p.m. Police said the Ford had stopped in the parking lot when the GMC cut behind it and struck it. There were no injuries, no tows and no citations issued, police said.

Found bike

A bicycle that had been spray painted orange was located in the woods behind a house on Red Gate Lane on Wednesday (March 18) near Wheelwright Park. The resident turned the bike in. Police believe the original color of the BMX men's bike was silver but cannot determine the brand name. Whoever owns the bike can go to the station and pick it up, Chief Hussey said.

Miscommunication

An apparent miscommunication gave a car-owner a start last Wednesday (March 18) when the owner of company that had towed the car thought it had been stolen. As it turned out the person who towed the car parked it in one spot and it was moved a second time on the premises. The caller was initially alarmed and called police but the vehicle was located and there were no further problems, police said.

Loose dog

A big husky-shepherd mix might be friendly but his size can be daunting to young people and he is also on the loose on a regular basis in the village. This past week, a caller reported the dog on the loose outside Tedeschi's "nipping at young children." The Animal Control Officer took custody of the dog and impounded it at All Four Paws on Route 3A. The owner had to pay a $50 fine and a $50 boarding fee, police said.

Problems with this dog have been ongoing, police said.

Private eye

A report about a suspicious man in a black Mercedes who showed a badge after asking if he could park in front of a house on Norman Todd Road came in last Thursday (March 19) at about 1 p.m. As it turned out the man was a private investigator, police said. Chief Hussey said usually private investigators let police know when they are in town.

Expired license

A 45-year-old Hull man is being summonsed for driving on an expired license following a traffic stop last Thursday at around 7 p.m. on Hull St. The man had been pulled over for speeding. Police said he was traveling 46 mph in a 30 mph zone. A computer check revealed his license was expired and his car was towed. He was also cited for speeding.

Protective custody

A 43-year-old Marshfield woman was taken into protective custody and later released to her husband after she was picked up in a parking lot off Route 3A. Police received reports about a woman in a silver Saab screaming and yelling. She also urinated in the parking lot. Police said she was inebriated. The incident occurred at 4:55 p.m. on Saturday (March 21).

Stimulus coming to Cohasset?

Selectmen talk project priorities

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Navigating the maze of regulation surrounding the federal stimulus monies is no easy task. The Board of Selectmen took up the conversation as it relates to Cohasset on Monday night.

Back in January, the town submitted a list of 19 projects in varying stages of "shovel readiness" to the state. Over two months later, the town is unsure of how the $6 to $9 billion in expected allocation to the state over the next two-plus years will trickle down to Cohasset.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr said only about $1 billion of that funding would be dedicated to the over $27 billion in project applications sent in from towns and state agencies. The remainder is earmarked for specific initiatives like public safety, highway and education.

However, they want to be sure the projects they have put forth are projects that fit the criteria of readiness and are projects where the town could benefit the most. Seven of the submitted projects have estimated costs of over $1 million.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer suggested the board analyze the projects according to three criteria, then compare the lists — highest value, reason it is required, and readiness.

Carr said at the top of his list was the Town Hall restoration and renovation project, "it's well overdue."

The project could be ready to begin within the six-month timeframe required under the federal stimulus bill and would generate as many as 200 construction jobs.

"In a crummy economy, we pick our biggest landmark and fix it," said Carr.

Vice chairman Paul Carlson agreed the Town Hall was a worthy project, especially from a town financial perspective, "it's a fix it now or fix it later scenario…and it would be a terrific burden on the town to pay for it itself."

Estimates for the complete renovation are over $4 million.

The Water Commission's expansion and upgrade of the water treatment plant estimated at $5 million also topped some of the Selectmen's lists. The upgrade is mandated by the federal regulations and must be completed by 2012.

Carlson took some issue with this project in that he resides in one of the 285 homes serviced by Aquarion Water.

"If town-wide money is spent it should be for town-wide projects," said Carlson.

The Selectmen also discussed the various stormwater initiatives put forth as projects — from the Wiggle detention basin to drainage and culvert upgrades.

This was only a preliminary discussion; the Selectmen will revisit the topic as the criteria for the federal stimulus money becomes clearer.

TPL land buy off the table

A possible open space land purchase discussed by the town in early January is now off the table. The town in conjunction with the non-profit group, Trust for Public Land, sought approximately 12 acres of open space adjacent to other conservation land off Beach Street.

In a letter dated March 5, the Trust for Public Land formally notified the Board of Selectmen of its withdrawal from its offer to purchase the parcel known as the Morrissey Property.

The swath of open space was very attractive for conservation because of its proximity to several of the Cohasset Conservation Trust properties (Great Brewster Woods, Deans Meadow, Sumner Smith Overlook, Blake property) as well as some undeveloped town parcels.

"While we had identified a potential path to funding this project, the feedback that we received indicated that the very real and understandable concerns about the current economic climate were weighing heavily on everyone," stated the letter signed by Whitney Hatch, interim state director of the Trust for Public Land. "These concerns would make it nearly impossible to amass the funds needed to conserve this property at this time."

The Trust for Public Land (TPL) is a national, nonprofit, land conservation organization founded in 1975 that conserves land for people to enjoy as parks, community gardens, historic sites, rural lands, and other natural places, ensuring livable communities for generations to come.

LaPointe said the TPL works with cities and towns to identify potential space for open space and/or recreational purposes, then serves as a partner and facilitator in the purchase of the land. The TPL helps negotiate the land purchase, do environmental assessments and help to identify funding sources at no cost to the municipality.

"I think voters will be very focused on the finances of the town," said Carr.

Town Meeting will commence once a quorum of 100 registered voters is reached on Saturday morning. Town officials are not worried about not getting a quorum and expect to finish in one day.

"A quorum of 100 is not particularly high," said Town Manager Bill Griffin.

"There's not a lot conflicting with Town Meeting and 200 people usually go regardless," said Carr, noting the spring youth soccer season begins the following week.

Town Moderator Dan Evans is looking forward to overseeing an efficient meeting that can complete business on Saturday.

"When speakers are prepared and are concise, it allows the meeting to consider each issue both thoughtfully and efficiently. The meeting starts at 9 am, and I anticipate a customary lunch break, unless we are lucky enough to be nearing completion of the business, in which case I may ask the meeting keep moving towards completion," said Evans in an e-mail.

The 19 articles presented in the Warrant, or Town Meeting agenda, will be tackled in the order they appear, unless otherwise directed by the Town Moderator or Town Meeting. Warrants were mailed out to households last week and extras will be available on Saturday. Each voter will also receive a printed copy of the Town Manager's recommended motions on each of the articles.

Each article will be taken up one at a time, a motion will be made, and votes will typically be taken on a voice basis.

Article 1 requests Town Meeting to accept the reports of the Town Officers that are printed in the Annual Town Report for calendar year 2008. Copies are available in the Town Clerk's office and the Office of the Board of Selectmen.

Article 2 is an opportunity for town boards and committees to present a report directly to the voters at Town Meeting. As of the printing of the Town Warrant, the Board of Selectmen did not request any specific reports. Any recommended reports will take place at the Annual Town Meeting.

The town operating budget will be reviewed in Article 3. A tax levy of $27,425,256 is projected for fiscal 2010, an increase of 3.62 percent over the current year. Of special note is that this budget is the third consecutive year with a "no override" budget. The percent increase for an average tax bill (based on a property value of $825,000) will be 2.04 percent, or a $181 increase. Griffin will propose an operating budget (including water and sewer enterprise funds) of $32,046,809, a 1.33 percent increase over fiscal 2009. The school department budget is recommended at $14,713,000, an increase of 2.77 percent, or $395,603 over the current year.

To bring the budget in under the current fiscal 2009 level and also deal with existing obligations, the Town Manager's recommended budget eliminates a police officer and a firefighter position (through attrition), reduces clerical hours at town hall, eliminates Sunday hours at the library, and reduces a variety of budgetary line items for contracted services, education, and other non-personnel expenses.

Article 4 requests the town to fund the fiscal 2010 cost items of a collective bargaining agreement. However, no agreement has been made between the town and the three remaining unions without a contract: firefighters, patrolmen, and superior police officers. Since no agreement has been reached, both the Board of Selectmen and the Advisory Committee advise indefinite postponement of this article.

As part of a continuing effort to build the town's capital stabilization fund (established at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting), Town Meeting is requested in Article 5 to transfer approximately $320,000 of from declining debt service on previously financed capital projects and unexpended balances for prior capital projects. Recommended for approval to Town Meeting by both the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee.

Capital improvement budget typically stirs up debate on the floor of Town Meeting. This time around, it is a meaty article and there will likely be plenty to talk about. In Article 6, the Board of Selectmen and Capital Budget Committee are requesting a full plate of capital requests totaling $789,400. The smaller capital items (all under $50,000) will be paid for in cash directly out of the stabilization fund. The committee is recommending the larger purchases have a cash down payment and the remaining portion be paid for through a financing term that more closely match the item's useful life. In total, $254,400 will be paid for in cash out of the capital stabilization fund and the balance of $535,000 will be bundled into a finance plan (see chart for full list of capital items and how they will be financed).

Passing the halfway mark (at least in numbered articles) is Article 7 addressing Community Preservation appropriations. For this Town Meeting, only one project came forward to request funding — engineering and design services for a proposed new Senior Center adjacent to the Cohasset Swim Center parking lot (this land associated with this project will be discussed in articles 16,17 and 18). The total recommended amount is $220,000.

The next few articles should move quickly. Article 8 is a required article in case funding is needed to pay for bills incurred by the town from previous fiscal years. As of the printing of the warrant, there were no outstanding bills. The article will likely be indefinitely postponed.

Article 9 requests supplemental appropriations for fiscal 2009. In sum, $219,000 from the free cash account is needed fro supplemental appropriations: $75,000 for legal services, $9,000 for water purchase, $80,000 for police overtime, $5,000 for police expenses, $5,000 for public works overtime, $10,000 for facilities management contingency (in case something goes wrong unexpectedly in one of the town's buildings), $25,000 for unemployment (school related), and $10,000 for Medicare.

With a two-thirds majority vote on Article 10, Town Meeting can authorize a $20,000 transfer from this fiscal year's health insurance budget to the post-retirement health insurance liability stabilization fund. The stabilization fund is money set aside for the purpose of funding health insurance for future retired town employees.

Article 11 is sure to cause some waves. A proposed $60 per quarter water rate increase for 80 percent of the town should generate discussion. The Water Commission said increasing debt service from major improvements in the distribution system and the treatment plant is the cause for the rise in water rates.

Articles 12 and 13 are put forth by the Planning Board. Article 12 requests funding for an updated zoning map (approximately $3,000). Article 13 seeks an $8,000 appropriation to update the town's rules and regulations governing subdivision development. This sector of rules and regulations has not been updated in 20 years.

Article 14 requests changes in the Advisory Committee bylaw in regard to when officers (chairman, vice chairman) are elected and another minor wording correction.

A $17,000 appropriation is requested in Article 15 to pay for engineering services to comply with a Conservation Commission notice of intent for the operation, maintenance and tide gate schedule for the town owned Cat Dam on Nichols Road.

Article 16, 17 and 18 relate to the land targeted for the building of a proposed senior center. All three articles give the Board of Selectmen the authority to negotiate with the owners of the property for the land. No funding is involved.

If approved, Article 16 transfers the authority of a five-acre parcel off Sohier Street from the Water Commission to the Board of Selectmen. The Water Commission formerly had control over several wells on the property. Due to the Greenbush line, the state mandated the wells be abandoned as a public drinking water supply.

Article 17 is proposed to acquire by purchase or gift land off Sohier Street (adjacent to the Swim Center parking lot) for the sole purpose of building a new senior center for the town.

Article 18 would authorize the Selectmen to use the town-owned five-acre parcel of land to negotiate with the Swim Center.

The final article on the town meeting agenda is in regard to an issue hotly debated at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting – Treat's Pond. This time around there is no money involved and Article 19's purpose is authorize the Selectmen to accept an easement from six property owners on Sandy Cove to allow the town access to clear out the Treat's Pond drainage pipe outfall located on Sandy Cove.

The town currently has an easement for the pipe, but the right of way unused for many years is vegetated. A new easement, if the Board of Selectmen can reach an agreement with the property owners, would roughly follow an established path. The town could then have a legal easement to clean out the pipe outfall during heavy rain. The town typically cleans out the pipe 30 to35 times a year. Previously, the town used Lothrop Lane to access the beach and pipe, but residents there opposed the town's regular use of the private road.

Cat Dam heads for primetime

Selectmen to make recommendation on Town Meeting floor

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It's going to come down to Town Meeting.

For nearly two years, residents in the area of inner Little Harbor have been seeking a resolution from the town about how to control the flushing in and out of the water body. The issue of "Cat Dam" has taken up hours of Selectmen discussion time since summer 2007 and eventually ended up before the Conservation Commission.

Because the Conservation Commission is the ruling entity on all water resources, they intervened when the operational schedule of the tide gate called Cat Dam was altered last spring. They issued the town an after the fact notice of intent and now the town must complete a series of studies and develop, with the help of a professional engineer, an operations and maintenance schedule.

An article (article 15) is on the Town Meeting warrant requesting $17,000 to complete the engineering and environmental consulting services requested by the Conservation Commission in order to resolve the ongoing debate for the operations and management issues associated with the tide gates.

The Selectmen spent nearly an hour discussing the article on Monday night; however, they did not vote on how to recommend the article to Town Meeting. After getting some questions answered from Town Counsel, they will take their position on the floor of Town Meeting. It was clear at the meeting Monday, it will not be a unanimous vote.

David Farrag, chairman of the Conservation Commission, said at this point it is a compliance issue for the town. To not go forward with the notice of intent could cause more trouble — and cost — for the town down the line, he said.

In a letter from the state Department of Environmental Protection to the town, they urge the town to file a notice of intent for any work that may have been conducted on the tide gates and to include a operation and maintenance plan.

Farrag said if the town fails to comply, the state DEP could prescribe a more expensive solution and the town would be obligated to do it and pay for it. Given the contentious nature evident in previous discussions on Cat Dam, Farrage said the professional's opinion and subsequent review by the Conservation Commission and the DEP would bolster the town's position if a resident ever filed an appeal.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer disagreed with the timing of the study. With the completion the Little Harbor sewer project the town is supposed to be brought into compliance with the Clean Waters Act. The town has until 2012 to complete the project and see the benefits of a healthier water body. He said under the second amended judgment (the agreement between the town and the state to sewer Little Harbor), the DEP could not make the town do any more (i.e. something with Cat Dam). The Selectmen requested Town Manager Bill Griffin to get a Town Counsel opinion on that issue.

"Why do we have to do (the study) now? The logical thing to do is to wait because in two years there are going to be very different conditions (in Little Harbor)," Dormitzer said.

Conservation Commission member Sarah Charron said any future changes in the health of Little Harbor did not change the need for a plan to be in place for the operation and maintenance of the tide gates.

"It's not a strict, calendar schedule, but more of a philosophy," said Charron.

While Chairman Ted Carr agreed with the Conservation Commission's authority in this situation, he asked about the timing and when the town would have to complete the requirements.

"In this tough budget, we want to be careful about any bit of money," said Carr. Farrag said if it was a resident in the same position the town is currently in, the response would have to be nearly immediate.

Selectman Karen Quigley was the only board member who came out strongly in favor of moving forward with the studies required by the Conservation Commission.

"On basic level it is the right thing to do, on a very real level it's the legal thing to do," said Quigley. She said the pollution resulting from failing septic systems in the Little Harbor district was a large component, but not the only component to the health of the water body.

"What I'm hearing is the health of inner Little Harbor hinges all on sewer and all the other aspects contributing to the health of this body of water can wait two years," said Quigley.

She questioned why some of the other selectmen were hesitating on this request when other similarly priced requests going before Town Meeting were reviewed "without even batting an eye."

Dormitzer said his position was straightforward, if the town goes forward with the studies now it will have to be done twice.

"If we do it now, we will have to do it in two years," said Dormitzer.

The board decided to seek some legal advice from Town Counsel and revisit the topic shortly before town meeting is called to order on Saturday.

If approved by Town Meeting the $17,000 cost would be allocated from free cash.

Brief history on Cat Dam

Cat Dam is a 50-year-old mechanism that limits the tidal flow of water in inner Little Harbor. It is located on Nichols Road. The structure is unique in town in that although it is town-owned it has historically been maintained by the surrounding neighborhood.

Within the neighborhood, there are differing opinions on how much the gates should be allowed to open — some want increased flushing while others say there is enough. The conflict brought the issue before the Board of Selectmen for several lengthy and often heated debates between 2007 and 2008.

Over winter 2008, a committee put together a proposed schedule for the opening and closing of the dam. Before the Selectmen could approve or deny the suggested schedule, the new schedule was implemented for approximately two weeks.

When any change is made to a body of water, the Conservation Commission is obligated to get involved. When the issue came before the Conservation Commission, they issued the town an after the fact notice of intent—a formal request to the town to provide more information about the dam and its adjacent water bodies. Professional engineering services is required including information about the water quality, monitoring of Little Harbor, and an operations and management schedule. The town received two bids for the services and is going with the less expensive submission with a cost of $17,000.

Save Cohasset Harbor petition floated

Mindy Evans of 36 Sohier Street presented two petitions entitled "Save Cohasset Harbor." One of the petitions was signed by the commercial lobstermen of Cohasset Harbor and the other by more than 420 residents. Both petitions include signatures of people who "oppose the introductions of any additional stormwater, and specifically stormwater from the Treat's Pond watershed, into the fragile marine environment of Cohasset Harbor." Evans added all the signatures had been collected in the last week. Nineteen of the 20 lobstermen signed the petition (one was out of town, she said).

Evans requested the receipt of the petitions be entered into the official record of the meeting and that the petitions be kept on file at Town Hall.

Wind petition gets 800 signatures

mental to our town and would violate our zoning bylaws due to the turbines' size and location." The petition lists impacts on visual, safety, health and real estate as major concerns.

At the close, the petition requests the Planning Board deny the special permit application to construct the turbines.

"The purpose of the petition is to let those voices be heard who may not be able to make it to a meeting or don't want to stand up at the public hearing," said Patterson. The petition will be filed with the Planning Board office on Monday, said Patterson.

The next (and possibly final) public hearing on the wind turbines is scheduled for this coming Monday, March 30 at 7:30p.m. in the Town Hall auditorium.

Despite the many signatures gathered — substantially more residents than the 200 who voted to approve the wind energy conversion facility bylaw at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting — the petition is not binding and could very well have little significance as the Planning Board makes its decision on the project.

"We understand that even with the large numbers of Cohasset residents who are signing the petition, it is not binding on the Planning Board," said Patterson, but he is hopeful. "Given the drastic impact this project will have on the town and the fact that the number of people who signed this petition will be four or five times greater than the number of people who voted on the original bylaw, we would hope that the petition signatures will be very persuasive to members of the Planning Board."

In Planning Board chairman Al Moore's view, it is not likely to make or break the board's ultimate decision.

"Over the years people have done similar petitions, but it has no significance," said Moore. "We are a judicial board, we're not conducting a popularity contest."

To be sure, Moore said the petition would be taken into the public record for the filing along with the many hours of public comment, written public submission and technical information submitted by the applicant and would be given consideration in that it represents a sector of public opinion.

"We know some people don't like this project, we know a lot of people don't like this project," said Moore. "But, we're dealing with a permitted use."

Under the wind energy conversion facility bylaw, passed at the 2008 Town Meeting and approved by the Attorney General, commercial size wind turbines with certain restrictions and requirements are an allowed use with a special permit.

To deny the project that met all the requirements of the bylaw because it had too great of a visual impact on the entrance to Cohasset would never hold up in appeal, said Moore.

"It's what the courts call arbitrary and capricious and it would be overturned and cost the town a lot of money," Moore said.

This petition isn't the first time a list of signatures has come before the board on the project. Previous to the formation of the Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee, Doug Bryan of Sanctuary Pond Road presented to the Planning Board at the first public hearing on the project a petition with 185 signatures of people concerned with the turbines.

At the Feb. 23 wind turbine project public hearing, Moore indicated the March 30 meeting could be the final public hearing on the project. Closing the public hearing means no new information will come before the board. In many cases, the Planning Board will close the public hearing and vote to conditionally approve or disapprove a project on the same night.

According to the town's zoning bylaws, special permits require a "super majority" of four out of five members agreeing for approval. In the case of this project filing, Planning Board member Mike Westcott missed one of the public hearings and his vote could be challenged in appeal. That means the remaining Planning Board members will have to have unanimous approval if the project is to go forward.

Turbine project in brief

The application is a landmark project as it is the first for the town and the first application under the Wind Energy Conversion Facility bylaw passed at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting.

The project application, put forth by a private developer, CCI-Energy, is proposing the installation of two AAER 1.65-megawatt sized wind turbines sited off Route 3A on the hill behind Graham Waste Services and Hingham Lumber. The project is being called the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project.

Jim Sweeney, president of CCI-Energy, is the primary name on the applications.

The turbines will be 100-meters (328-feet) tall from the ground to the hub, or nacelle, where the blades originate. The three blades will extend 41-meters off of that hub making the tip of the structure 462-feet (141-meters) above ground.

Text of the petition

We the residents of Cohasset do not oppose wind power. However, we believe that the proposed Cohasset Heights wind turbine project would be detrimental to our town and would violate our zoning bylaws due to the turbines' size and location which:

- Create an unacceptable visual impact on the natural beauty of Cohasset
- Present safety concerns for employees, patrons and guests of nearby businesses
- Threaten the health and welfare of residents due to noise and shadow flicker impacts
- Negatively affect real estate values, decrease tax revenues and hurt the town's overall economy

In addition, we believe the size and specifics of this project contravene the spirit and scope of the wind energy bylaw, as read together with the other zoning bylaws. This is especially troubling given the fact Cohasset would not be in control of these turbines and would not be the primary beneficiary of the project.

We therefore request that the Planning Board deny CCI Energy's special permit application to construct the turbines.

Last week for Best & Brightest

Are you planning on nominating someone for The Best & The Brightest? This is the last week that the nomination form will appear in the paper. Sponsored by Community Newspaper Company, The Best & The Brightest is a recognition program designed to celebrate the accomplishments of young people ages 16 to 21.

If you know someone who should be honored for academic achievement, volunteerism, athletic prowess, artistic acumen or the pursuit of excellence in another field, look for the nomination form on Page 29. The form is also available online at www.wickedlocalspecials.com/best/cohasset-mariner.pdf .

A selection committee of local educators, businessmen and community leaders will read each nomination form and choose the area's best and brightest young adults. Look for the stories and photographs of these individuals in The Best & The Brightest, a special section that will be published in your newspaper later this spring.

Nomination forms must be received by Monday, March 30, so don't delay – fill one out and submit it today.

Rep. Bradley to host office hours

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, will host district office hours from 6 to 7 p.m., on Monday, April 6, at the Sons of Italy Hall in Hingham. Enter through the Route 3A side entrance of the building into his district office.

People who are unable to attend scheduled office hours, but would like to meet with Bradley, can call 617-722-2520 to schedule an appointment.

ON THE MEND

Hello Cohasset, how is everyone doing this week? I am writing this a bit under the weather after a rough last weekend and week so if I do not include something or forget to put something in this week that you were expecting to see, please send me a reminder for next week's column.

I am trying to move forward in a positive manner and stop feeling sorry for myself as so many people are dealing with things way worse than me. I am embarrassed to say the least for last Saturday morning and the way I behaved after a seizure I had. Although I don't remember anything until I started to "wake up" in the ambulance, my body and bruises along with the recount of what happened from my family has prompted me to send out my true and sincere apologies to the Fire and Police members who were here at my home and on the ambulance to help me and my family. You are all so wonderful in every situation that you deal with and I know that without you and your expertise with all that you do, I would not have been handled in the manner that I was. I am sorry for anything that I said or did that made your jobs more difficult in helping to get me where I needed to go and my family and I send our sincere THANK YOU to you all.

I also want to thank my family and all of our friends within the community for all of your love and caring throughout this difficult time. I would never have thought that we had the number of people who have expressed their caring and support to my family and myself as we do. It has made a very scary week so much easier to deal with and process and after today, I hope that I can move ahead in a positive manner and work with anyone out there who needs any caring or help in dealing with tough situations. Without all of you, I know that I could not have got to this point and will always want to give back what was given to me. Thank you Cohasset! Now, enough about me and on to the stories that are so important and meaningful to our town.

DEAN'S LIST

Congratulations go out to Dominique Asnault, daughter of Tom and Beverly Asnault, who was named to the dean's list at Fairfield University for the 2008 Fall semester. Dominique is majoring in Studio Art. Your family is so proud of your accomplishments Dominique as you should be. Nice work and we look forward to hearing more about your studies.

WINTER GAMES

Be sure to read the story about our local athletes who are home after competing in the Special Olympics World Winter Games. A fun highlight of the event was the beautiful blue and white knitted or crocheted scarves that were given out to every athlete, coach and volunteer at the Opening Ceremony prior to the competition in Boise, Idaho. Several local women were among the thousands of volunteers across the nation who knit over 50,000 (that's right!) scarves. A big Special Olympics thank you to the Wednesday Knitters and friends: Marie Perroncello, Pat Sargent, Rose Dooley, Mary Volpe, Marjorie Wilder, Kate Luna, Elinor Campbell, Agnes MacDonald and her friend Diane, Bea Mello, and Karen Williams, who together knit 25 scarves. Every scarf was different and a bit of Cohasset went out west with them to encourage and honor the athletes and to help celebrate with everyone who was part of the 2009 World Games. You all made such a tremendous difference to all who received these wonderful gifts.

Cohasset resident Brittany Avila and her horse Shaka Moon recently returned from a trip to Ocala, Florida where they participated in the HITS Ocala Winter Circuit horse shows. Brittany and "Shaka", a Belgian Warmblood gelding, who was imported to the United States from Belgium, won numerous classes and were named champion of their equitation division. The HITS Ocala winter circuit attracts thousands of competitors from throughout the US, Canada, Mexico and Europe. Brittany, a freshman at Cohasset High School, trains with Tom Hern Jr. of Kingsway Farm in Halifax and is looking forward to continuing her success with "Shaka" this summer at horse shows throughout New England and New York.

OUR WORLD

The First Annual Estate Sale is being held here in Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, 100 Sohier St. on Saturday, April 4th from 8 am to 5 pm only.

The items range from clothing for all, toys, furniture, bikes and so much more. If you have any items in your home that you are ready to part with during your Spring cleaning, they are being accepted at the Our World Museum from now through the sale and, if you need some help, we have some pick-up trucks that can come pick up your items. Please call the museum and speak with Julie or Jen at 781-383-3198 or send an email to info@ourworldcgdm.org

Also, the Springtime Fun Session of programs and classes are getting ready to begin at Our World for children ages 2 and up. Please check out the schedules at www.ourworldcgdm.org for the Spring programs as well as 12 weeks of fun-filled and weekly themed summer programs for ages 2 and up as well. Antique Appraisal Day to returns to Cohasset

Skinner, Inc. appraisers, including Stewart Whitehurst, are coming to Cohasset for the third annual Antique Appraisal Day from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Saturday, April 25. People can bring in their antiques to be appraised or for large pieces, several good photographs can be used by the appraiser. Be sure to include photos of any special markings, numbers or other details that may assist in the appraisal process.

The event is sponsored by the Friends of Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs and will take place at St Anthony's Parish Center, 10 Summer St., Cohasset. Appraisals are $12 per item, or $30 for three items. Excluded items include coins, stamps, jewelry and musical instruments. A maximum of three items per individual will be allowed. Snacks and refreshments will be available to enjoy while waiting to meet with the appraiser.

Proceeds will help the efforts to make the dream of a new senior center a reality in Cohasset.

For more information, call Cohasset Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112 or John Campbell, president of the Friends at 617-909-5687.

Writers' workshop

Grub Street South at Buttonwood, a workshop for writers that meets at Buttonwood Books in Shaw's Plaza, will welcome Randy Susan Meyers on Tuesday, March 31, at 7 p.m. Meyer's workshop, called "The Great American Query Letter," will cover choosing the right agent; elements of a solid query letter; books and sites that can help with solid information; what to expect after hitting 'send;' and how to stay sane while waiting for reply.

To reserve, call: 781-383-2665.

Veterans agent hours

Joseph R. McElroy, director of veterans services in Cohasset announces his office hours for the months of April, May and June at the Paul Pratt Library, Study Room B, located at 35 Ripley Road. If possible, call in advance at 781-383-0505.

April: Monday, April 6, 6 to 7:45 p.m. ; Wednesday, April 8, 10 a.m. to noon; and Saturday, April 11, 10 a.m. to noon.

Fashion show to benefit new Senior Center

Social Service League of Cohasset is hosting a fashion show the evening of April 16, at Cohasset Golf Club, to raise funds for the building of the town's new Senior Center. This community-wide effort brings together local businesses, volunteers and high school art students to produce an event that will benefit Cohasset's senior citizens.

Tickets to the event are $50, and include a buffet dinner. Tables of eight to 10 people may be reserved. Tickets may be purchased at the Cohasset Consignment Shop on Route 3A or online from the League's Web site, SocialServiceLeagueof Cohasset.org. Tickets must be ordered in advance and will not be available for purchase at the door.

South Shore Art Festival set for June 19-21

South Shore Art Center's 54th annual Arts Festival, with three art exhibitions, juried craft and fine art exhibitor tents, artist demos, food booths and live music, will be set up on Cohasset Common the weekend of June 19.

Festival hours are Friday, June 19, from 2 to 7 p.m.; Saturday, June 20, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, June 21, from noon to 5 p.m.

All about the shirt

How to get 10K keepsake

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

By anyone's standards, the Cohasset Rotary Road Race by the Sea is a well-organized and really fun spring race, and of the 1,500 runners expected this year, many are indeed running for the athleticism, competition and personal challenge that come from the 10K distance. Yet, inevitably, when asked why someone runs the Cohasset Road Race they will almost always mention the same three things...the scenery, the post race hot dogs, and of course, the "holy grail" of any road race, the coveted T-shirt.

If you're not a runner, you should know that these three wonderful rewards of running are still within your grasp. You can gather your friends and your family, maybe even your dog and then head out to walk the 10K route as part of the 5th Annual Fran Coffey Memorial Fun Walk, which takes place on race day, Sunday, April 5th at 10 a.m. at Sandy Beach.

The Walk proceeds and the 10K proceeds go to worthwhile charities supported by the Cohasset Rotary and Rotary International. In particular, Walk proceeds benefit the Bishop Ruocco House in Lakeville, as well as "People in Need" at St. Patrick's church in Roxbury. Funds help those who face everyday challenges like paying the rent, registering a car or even funeral costs. So as you walk or run you're helping others, from those close to home to those supported internationally by our local Rotary chapter.

If you want to run the race, you are strongly encouraged to register online today to reserve your spot. Race Organizers understand and empathize with that long-standing Cohasset tradition of waking up on race day and letting the New England weather be the deciding factor on whether or not to lace up or spend the afternoon doing something less challenging and fun. However, the race is enjoying the same popularity that other road races are and in all likelihood the 1500 spots will be sold out by race day. So don't wait, register now, and even if you decide not to run, your registration fee will still go to charity.

If running and walking is not your thing, you still have one more, very important option for being part of this Cohasset tradition. This race, which does not have any salaried employees, relies on the generosity of time and enthusiasm of its volunteers. Volunteers — who of course get a shirt— are needed on race day to help with registration and traffic flow. To volunteer e-mail 2009@roadracebythesea.com

For 33 years the Cohasset Road Race by the Sea has produced a race that has attracted runners from all over the New England area and the US. It's the scenery, the friendly competition and maybe even the lure of the race shirt that bring them here the first time, but it's the hospitality of the town, its businesses and its residents that keep them coming back for more. Register to volunteer, run or walk at www.roadracebythesea.com

STEM lab a hit at Deer Hill

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Fourth-grade teacher Mike Lewis points to how water had eroded a path in the sand while the image is being projected onto the screen by a digital presenter.

Step into one of the classrooms at Deer Hill and you might think you've been transported to a state-of-the-art science lab.

And, indeed, you have.

Deer Hill boasts a classroom lab, a high-tech room outfitted to bring the science, technology, engineering and mathematics portions of the curriculum to life. Dubbed the STEM lab (STEM is an acronym standing for science, technology, engineering and mathematics), students get hand-on experience with microscopes, the scientific method and science phenomena.

"With the STEM lab, students are able to be real scientists — not just read about science. There is an opportunity for application of knowledge and problem solving that just doesn't exist with a textbook-only program," said Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara.

The STEM lab was made possible through a $35,000 grant from the Cohasset Education Foundation. The lab places Cohasset at the forefront of STEM education.

"I don't know of many elementary schools that have STEM labs —we are so fortunate to have the support of the Cohasset Education Foundation which paid for everything," as well as the large classroom space with the technological capacity, said deChiara.

DeChiara brought the idea of a STEM to the Education Foundation last year through a grant application. The grant proposed creating a single place where science equipment, experimentation and exploration could be achieved.

The CEF grant committee reviewed the application to ensure it coincided with their criteria.

"Our main goal is to support things that are not included in the operational budget, reinforces existing curriculum and takes learning to the next level," said Mary McGoldrick, vice president of the CEF and a member of the grant committee. "The STEM lab really brings Cohasset schools to the forefront of STEM education and that's really exciting."

The lab serves students in grade three though five (about 350 students) at Deer Hill and covers the areas of earth science, life science, technology/engineering, data gathering and analysis. A far cry from reading a textbook, the lab enables students to experience scientific inquiry and participate in hands-on learning. They can perform experiments, manipulate and analyze data, control variables, and communicate results.

The lab is equipped with a promethean board — an interactive white board with remote access for teacher and students.

There are 24 microscopes and a video microscope which hooks up to the large screen television for the whole group viewing, five new computers, lab coats for the teachers, a LCD projector for the computer screens or the digital presenter.

There is a grow light, a large screen television, an eyewash station, a sanitizing cabinet for the goggles and a set of National Geographic DVD aligned to the curriculum. A unit on health education, complete with student stethoscopes, is also a part of the lab.

One of the objectives for the CEF is to incorporate technology into the classroom.

"Technology is incredibly important to the way children are learning right now. It's what they are accustomed to," said McGoldrick. "In the lab students can participate interactively and be stimulated in many different ways, they absorb it all with no problem at all."

Extra training for the STEM labs diverse equipment was provided as part of the district's professional development program for teachers. On five occasions a consultant in science education came to the lab to teach the staff about appropriate experiments and how to make best use of the resources, said deChiara.

"The response from teachers and students has been extremely positive. There is a learning curve for all of us with the technology and some of the equipment, but the rewards in terms of student learning and engagement make it overwhelmingly worthwhile," said deChiara.

Last week, the STEM lab was on display for parents in conjunction with a presentation on education in the 21st century by curriculum coordinator Nancy Mrzyglod.

There is a set schedule for each classroom to have a minimum of 80 minutes per week in the lab. There are some times in addition when teacher may sign up to use the lab.

The lab is enjoying near constant use during the day — and now even after school. A science club, which utilizes the STEM lab, garnered so much interest from the student body two sections (Tuesday and Thursday) had to be created. The CEF funded the teacher stipend to get the after-school club off the ground.

Despite the economic downturn, McGoldrick said donation for the CEF are holding relatively steady. They recently completed their annual campaign and are looking ahead to their annual gala event on May 30.

"People seem to be saying that now it is more important than ever to ensure the education for students is at as high a level as it can be," said McGoldrick.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Pack the place!

We are confident that enough people will attend Saturday's Special Town Meeting to ensure that the wheels of our Cohasset government keep turning.

There will be familiar faces: those who serve on elected boards, like the Selectmen, School Committee, Board of Health, Planning Board, Water Commission, Sewer Commission and Recreation Commission. Those who have been appointed to committees and commissions such as the Advisory Committee, Economic Development Committee, Zoning Board of Appeals and Conservation Commission (just to name a few) will also be in attendance.

Our Town Manager, Town Moderator, Town Clerk, and Town Counsel will also be there.

Other citizens, some who bring along knitting or other projects, will also attend and cast their votes.

However, the vast majority of you will sit this Town Meeting out.

If the weather is fine tomorrow – then the "call of yard work" or gardening projects – might be too strong and deter you from wanting to spend the day in the high school gym.

While we do not want to hope for bad weather, we think it is a shame that more citizens do not participate in Town Meeting, one of the oldest and most venerable forms of self-government in the country.

Some larger towns in Massachusetts have switched to representative Town Meeting, meaning delegates representing different districts, attend and do the voting. Others have switched to a mayoral form of government with a Town Council.

When you get beyond New England, most folks have never heard of Town Meeting.

But "open" Town Meeting goes to the heart of who we are here in Cohasset. It can be quirky, boring, exciting, exasperating, amazing, surprising, and yes, even fun – all at the same time. There are Town Meeting "regulars" who speak up at every session. We are always impressed with how articulate they are and how they can get to the heart of an issue or concern.

Town Meeting is the forum when issues can be spelled out clearly. If they are not clear, then you can count on one of our citizens asking for clarification.

As reporters, we have become Town Meeting groupies. Covering Town Meeting is never easy – but we feel, as the paper of record, it is critical that we chronicle history-in-the-making.

We only wish that more Cohasset citizens understood what a gem Town Meeting is and would give up a few hours to participate in self-government.

We do hope to see you Saturday at 9 a.m. in the Sullivan Gymnasium.

METTINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Board of Health, April 8, 7 p.m.

Beacon Hospice workshop on grief

Beacon Hospice will offer a support group/workshop titled "Understanding Your Grief" beginning on April 21, for anyone who has lost a family member, spouse/partner, close friend or loved one. There will be six sessions on Tuesday afternoons from 2 to 3:30 at St. Joseph Retreat Center, 339 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

Sessions are free and open to all members of the community. Pre-registration is required by calling Scott Ciosek, bereavement coordinator at Beacon Hospice, at 508-747-7222 or email to sciosek@beaconhospice.com.

Definition of an abutter:

Two words often heard uttered by some people living close to proposed affordable housing or living in the proximity of a proposed wind turbine site who agree conceptually, but with the following reservations:
..uh, but there's too much parking
...uh but the blades can fall off
...uh, but my house will be devalued
...uh, but it will add to traffic
...uh, but the towers could fall
...uh, but the generators are noisy
...uh, but there's a flicker effect
...uh, but they'll overcrowd schools

Senior Center can be ageless

TO THE EDITOR:

As we begin our journey to build a new senior center, we have taken some time to visit some of our sister towns and their senior centers. When visiting Duxbury and Marshfield centers, we were instantly struck by their welcoming and ageless atmosphere. The centers are painted with warm light colors and full of natural light. There are different places to go, such as a reading/library area, foyer complete with coffee, tea and muffins, a beautiful cheery brick patio and even a room with a pool table, which is used often!

The kitchen was new and spacious with all the amenities needed to put out delicious meals for their senior population both in-house and house bound.

We were impressed with the many people visiting and the warm (volunteer based) greeting everyone got that entered the building-just like Wal-Mart! While we were there one of the larger rooms was filled with members of the center listening to a visitor from Town Hall speaking to them on the upcoming town meeting and the different articles to be addressed while upstairs there was a computer class going on, and a kitchen busy with their on-site chef and many capable volunteers.

We encourage you to visit the Duxbury Senior Center and if you are interested, call John Campbell at 617-909-5687 to schedule a convenient time/date.

Practical answers on wind turbine project

TO THE EDITOR:

The developer CCI's presentations to the planning board have been frustratingly difficult to follow. As a citizen I want plain answers to the questions about noise, flicker, economic impact and especially safety. With just a little digging I came up with the following straightforward answers.

Is there a violation of the noise section of the bylaw? YES. From CCI's own data, the proposed turbines are in violation of the Mass DEP noise policy on BOTH of the required elements; they increase the broadband sound level by more than 10dB(A) above ambient and they produce a pure tone condition.

Will Cohasset residents be exposed to shadow flicker? YES. The developer's data indicates there will be over 30 hours per year of flicker at 3 of the 5 sites modeled (Avalon: 65.4 hrs, Sunrise: 48.1 hrs, Lot 24 Sanctuary Pond Road: 32.35 hrs). This means many residents will have shadows flicking across their windows for a half an hour each day for 2 to 4 months of the year.

Is there evidence that property values and our tax base will be impacted? YES. A study by the Beacon Hill Institute at Suffolk University on the impact of home values on Cape Cod as a result of wind turbines demonstrates an anticipated average negative impact on real estate values of 4.0 percent, increasing to 10.9 percent for those houses with a direct view of the turbines.

Do proposed setbacks ensure the safety of our residents? NO. GE, the leading US manufacturer of turbines, recommends setbacks for ice at 1.5 times total height (693'). Hingham Lumber and Crocker Lane fall within that zone. Vestas, another turbine manufacturer, says: "Do not stay within a radius of 400m (1,300 ft) from the turbine unless it is necessary" and "Make sure that children do not stay by or play nearby the turbine."

Is there a deal in place for the town to benefit from these turbines? NO.

These are practical answers to the central questions regarding this wind turbine project. For me there is a one simple conclusion: This project does not comply with our Bylaws, it is not safe enough, it is not fair to our residents, and it should not be approved by the planning board.

COMMENTARY

DAN CRONIN

So Cohasset's proposed turbines will be almost exactly the same height (above Route 3A) as Boston's third tallest building and more than three-quarters the height of the John Hancock tower.

The Cohasset Planning Board will soon render its decision whether to approve or deny Plymouth-based CCI-Energy their application for a permit to site New England's two largest wind turbines on Cohasset Heights, the most elevated point in our still beautiful town.

Like many of us, I believe in the benefits of wind power but I also believe that large wind turbines are appropriate only when they are located far away from human populations. In fact, most countries have laws requiring wind turbines to be located at least a mile away from residential areas. These laws have been developed after years of learning about the negative effects that wind turbines have on people that live close to them. The proposed Cohasset Heights project may decrease the amount of airborne pollutants in the atmosphere by a small amount but these structures will create significant visual and noise pollution borne mostly by the residents of Cohasset.

This project has been sold to the town as a way for our citizens to be "green." The real reason behind this project is to produce as much "green" as possible for CCI Energy. Mr. Paul Barry, the owner of the land where the turbines will be sited said at a recent Planning Board meeting that this project is not about the money. If this is true then I ask that CCI Energy, its lawyers and the special interests that support this outside firm to make arrangements with Cohasset to transfer 100 percent of the revenue that the turbines produce (after expenses) to our town.

Others have written thoughtfully in this space about the shortcomings of Cohasset's wind turbine bylaw. It appears that the only buffer the bylaw contains is that wind turbine projects should minimize their visual impact on Cohasset. So I will try to help readers understand the many implications that New England's largest

Reopening of Jerusalem Road at hand

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Jerusalem Road Update – This week many of the small last-minute jobs are being accomplished that are necessary to get this road re-opened. We certainly understand the keen interest of the residents who normally use Jerusalem Road to access the ocean end of Jerusalem and Nichols roads. In fact, we find it inconvenient as well.

This past Wednesday, the contractor was paving the edge of the road in preparation for installation of the guardrails. By the time you read this, the guardrails should have been installed. We understand that the guardrail subcontractor was scheduled to come to town on Thursday, March 26 with a large crew to install the complete guardrail in one day. Ordinarily, we expected that this would take two days, but the guardrail subcontractor has been very obliging to get it erected in one day.

The second photo shows a loader getting another scoop of asphalt from the truck so it can be spread at the edge of the road. Also, this Wednesday, an asphalt berm is scheduled to be placed along the Steep Rocks side of the road. When you read this you will be able to see if, in fact, all of these things did get finished. Suffice it to say that the re-opening of the road is imminent.

Cohasset Rotary 10K Road Race By-the-Sea – Anyone who has driven on Jerusalem, Atlantic, North Main Street or Highland Avenue certainly understands how rough these roads are. The Cohasset Rotary Club, who has been the sponsor of this well-known regional event, is working hand-in-glove with the project to take the necessary steps to patch the road.

The included photo shows one of the many rough spots on that will require patching prior to the race. In addition, cones will be used extensively to direct runners onto areas that are in better condition, where possible. However, we might also add that care must be taken by the runners under the present conditions.

Jacobs Meadow Outfall Project – We haven't spoken about this project for a while, so we thought an update might be appropriate. To refresh your memory, at the fall 2008 Town Meeting the voters approved a $450,000 project to repair and upgrade the Jacobs Meadow outfall to the Cohasset Harbor. For those new to Town, Jacobs Meadow is the marsh area behind the buildings on S. Main, Summer and Elm streets. It is about 14 acres in size and is the collection point for most of the storm water that falls on the area surrounding Main Street (both North and South) from near Lower King Street to south of Castle Road. This is a large area and major storms have caused flooding in the meadow, which has resulted in property damage to some of the surrounding properties.

Soon to be fixed depression in Highland Avenue.

Collapsing channel wall.

Edge of road paving.

Finishing up the paving.

COURTESY PHOTOS

The channel adjacent to the Legion, which carries the water between the harbor and the meadow, is in the process of collapsing, as shown in the photo. The reduced width of the channel has a dual negative impact on Jacobs Meadow. First, during storms storm water cannot be quickly sent to the harbor causing higher water levels in the meadow with the result being the increased water level in the marsh. Second, salt water has a more difficult time getting into the meadow, which permits the very invasive plant, phragmites, to flourish and begin to take over the marsh. This reduces the marsh grasses that are indicative of a healthy salty marsh area. An additional facet of this project is to replace the three gates that currently control the flow of storm water out or salt water back into the marsh with a much freer flowing gate structure that permits a wider range of control over the flows in either direction.

To update you on the project status, preliminary plans have been developed and have been submitted to the Army Corps of Engineers (ACOE) for their comment and approval. The Town has spent a considerable effort to communicate the scope and preliminary design to the other state and federal agencies who are all in the "approval" loop, but subordinate to the ACOE. Indications so far, through our engineering partner, Vine Associates, that permitting is moving in a favorable direction.

A little bio on Ponzi

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Bernie Madoff scammed the gullible out of $52 billion using a vehicle called a Ponzi scheme. So did Ed Okun, whose $132 million take included $2 million from Dan Quirk, the Braintree auto dealer. It took them years to amass their fortunes.

The man for whom their little money-making scheme was named made his millions in less than eight months and died broke in a Brazilian charity ward. If ever a man had larceny programmed into his DNA, it was Charles Ponzi.

An uneducated Italian immigrant, he had already served time for forgery in Montreal and smuggling aliens across the Canadian border when he arrived in Boston to work as a clerk for an import-export company.

There, he discovered the financial loophole to the riches he craved — International Postal Union Reply Coupons!

Correspondents in depressed European countries sending mail to the United States that required a reply could purchase the coupons for one cent and send them to the U.S., where they could be cashed for five or ten cents to send the reply.

He offered a 50 percent profit to investors after six weeks, 100 percent after six months, and when he paid off his first investors, the lines were around the block, their life savings clutched in their hot little hands.

The process was too cumbersome for a get-rich-quick scheme, but few except Charlie were aware of it, so he opened the Securities Exchange Company on School Street in December of 1919, changed his name from Carlo and became an investment counselor.

He offered a 50 percent profit to investors after six weeks, 100 percent after six months, and when he paid off his first investors, the lines were around the block, their life savings clutched in their hot little hands.

In six months, he was taking in $1 million a week and had 16 staffers at work in the School Street office. He lived in a 20-room, $100,000 mansion in Lexington and rode in a $12,000 chauffeur-driven, cream-colored Locomobile.

Charlie, of course, was only using the reply coupons as a come-on. Actually, he was using the money he collected today to pay off the investors of six weeks and six months ago, a practice that couldn't, and didn't, last long.

When a disgruntled investor named Daniels sued him for $1 million, it attracted the attention of the Boston Post, whose reporters dug up Charlie's forgery and smuggling raps and the jig was up. The Post won a Pulitzer Prize for its investigation.

Charlie was arrested in August of 1920, by federal agents and convicted of mail fraud and sentenced to four years, to be served in Plymouth jail in the absence of a federal prison in Massachusetts.

Next, he was convicted by the state of Massachusetts for fraud and got nine years. But, while out on bail, he escaped and turned up in Florida, where he was arrested for attempting to defraud real estate investors and got another year in the slammer.

Having served his time in all jurisdictions, Charlie was deported to Italy in 1934, but even then he was not through.

His talent for figures evidently caught the eye of the dictator Benito Mussolini, for he was given a job in the financial section of the Italian government. It wasn't long before he fled to South America with an undetermined amount of Mussolini's treasury.

In Rio de Janeiro, he blew his wad on a rooming house and a hotdog stand and wound up interpreting for an Italian importing firm at $300 a month. He died, penniless and alone, in 1949.

Room for One

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

My middle daughter had a birthday last week. She's the kind of kid who already has plenty of underwear and food, so we couldn't think of what to get her. At the last minute we splurged on a mulching lawn mower that I'm hoping to borrow from her this summer, but in the end the present she was most excited about cost us nothing, or so we thought.

Until a few years ago all three girls shared a bedroom. They had matching bed frames, matching quilts and sheets, and matching old-fashioned pajamas. They even had matching toothbrushes for a few months during stomach flu season but that was a mistake. Anyway my wife and I were under the impression that this whole setup was adorable, and 15 photo albums and countless videos would seem to support our claim, but it turns out we were tragically wrong, and had in fact been torturing my oldest daughter for months and possibly her entire life. Even things she admitted enjoying at the time, like wearing dresses, bows, and ballet slippers, could apparently have a sense of humiliation applied to them retroactively. It was fascinating to watch the maturing pre-teen brain evolve before our eyes. We could see that conflict resolution would now require a lot more thought, patience, and a willingness to listen, so we gave Caroline her own room at the back of the house and dubbed it, "The Quarantine."

Mary's first act as sole ruler of her room was to post the names of people who are not allowed to enter it.

This left Mary and Emily rooming together, which they were content to do for several years since they're a little more easy-going and I had told them my office was haunted. But by last fall it was clear Mary was chafing under these accommodations, so last Friday while the kids were at school we moved Emily's things into my office and I set up shop in a guest room.

What began as a gift and an acknowledgement that we now have three strong, independent little women in the house has become a study in territorial sovereignty and the shrill, often savage consequences of its violation. Mary's first act as sole ruler of her room was to post the names of people who are not allowed to enter it. The list begins with the usual suspects and continues through at least 35 people, some of whom don't even live in this country. When I suggested she could have saved paper by posting the names of those who weren't banned from her room she immediately added me to the list, in pen. It was totally not fair.

Meanwhile Emily is desperate for people to enter her room, because she's so proud of what she's done with the place. Unfortunately we can't, because it's so full of knickknacks you risk an injury just poking your head in. The excitement of having her own space to decorate as she pleased was almost too much for her to handle — she basically went through the entire house, and if something wasn't bolted to the floor she dragged it into her room. She seems to be preparing for a life sleeping in landfills. The upside is that I have nothing to recycle this week, which will give me time to figure out the combination on Mary's door.

Mary's other present was the Twilight DVD. In case you aren't up on your pop culture phenomena I'll fill you in. Twilight takes place in the Pacific Northwest, where it's so dank and depressing that even boys turn to wearing lipstick and people become vampires just to have an excuse to leave the house at night. This is exactly why we moved east. As far as the movie goes, a third of it involves attractive young people stammering, another third is devoted to smoldering, and in between the stammering and smoldering the camera swoops around wildly as if it's been strapped to a buzzard. The film's intended audience may be girls 10 to 15 years old who like pap, but that doesn't mean their middle-age fathers can't enjoy it along with them. It just means they need to enjoy a couple of double bourbons beforehand or they're toast.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset in a room that stupid Ernie McDonald is not allowed to enter.

LIBRARY CORNER

Family Wellness Day is Sunday!

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Family Wellness Day – Beat the winter blahs at an open house event from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m., on Sunday, March 29. Talk to health and fitness experts, skin care professionals and massage therapists. Demonstrations, raffles, coupons and special offers will be available. Sponsored by Bella Aesthetics and Healthy Living Magazine.

Movie Matinee – The library will show the movie "No Reservations" starring Catherine Zeta-Joes and Aaron Eckhart at 11 a.m., on Friday, April 3. Free admission and refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Elderhostel – Learn about travel programs with Elderhostel at 1:30 p.m., on Wednesday, April 8, in the Meeting Room. The event is free.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "The Pope's Toilet" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, April 16. Free admission and free refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

FOR CHILDREN

MamaSteph – Performance at 10:30 a.m., on Mondays, March 30, April 6, 13 and 27, in the Story Room. All ages and communities are welcome. Funded by the Friends of Cohasset Library.

Drop-In Story Time – Tuesdays, March 31, April 7, 14 and 28. All ages and communities are welcome.

Absentee ballots for the Town election

Absentee ballots for the Annual Town Election on April 4 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, April 3, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. If you will be in town on Election Day and you are able to come to the polls you should vote in person.

SENIORS

'Songs to Inspire' next week

The following programs are being held at the Cohasset Elders Affairs, 3 North Main St. For information call 781-383-9112 or 781-383-9116.

Wednesday, April 1, at 11 a.m. – Hear the wonderful music of Greg Curtis "Songs to Inspire" Greg sings sensational standards, Broadway showstoppers and of course patriotic Join us for a gourmet lunch following the Performance. Donation: $2.50.

Monday: April 6, noon to 2 p.m. – Reflexology/Chair Massage.

Wednesday: April 8, at 11 a.m. – "Deciding to Move' Presenters: Lynda Chuckran, community marketing director, at Welch Healthcare and Carol Taylor, marketing director, at Allerton House. Special lunch provided by Welch Healthcare. Donation: $2:50.

'Our Town' introduces School Committee candidates

"Our Town," co-hosts, Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin, introduce School Committee candidates, Paul Schubert and Helene Leib to viewers. Both guests are seeking uncontested seats for the Cohasset School Committee in the upcoming April 4 election.

Tune in to catch their thoughts and views on the current challenges before the School Committee and the contributions they both hope to make in the name of public education.

Tune in Monday, at 9 p.m., or Tuesday or Thursday, at 9 p.m., all on Comcast Channel 10.

Cohasset Mariner 'drop box'

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The large, brown drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Cat Dam deserves our attention

COMMENTARY

MAJORIE BROWN

I urge Cohasset citizens to vote in favor of Article 15 that provides funding for the Cat Dam Notice of Intent (NOI). The NOI would provide the Town with a recommended Operation and Maintenance (O&M) plan for Cat Dam — which would then need to be approved by the Conservation Commission. First and foremost, the NOI is a matter of law. The Conservation Commission is charged with upholding the Wetlands Protection Act, and the Town of Cohasset must follow the law. The Town is no different from any citizen who alters a body of water.

As of this writing (March 24), the Board of Selectmen has not decided whether to seek an approved delay in filing the NOI. They are considering whether to postpone until the completion of the sewers in 2012. I believe a scientifically based and environmentally sound O & M plan needs to be established now without waiting until 2012.

There is sufficient evidence that Inner Little Harbor is suffering from more than just failed septic systems. The Board of Health study in 2004 was done after the sewering of North Cohasset. A previous study by Camp Dresser McKee had identified 128 homes in the Inner Little Harbor watershed, and 66 of these (i.e. more than half) were in North Cohasset. The Board of Health study states: "The study conclusively demonstrates an overall elevation of fecal coliform concentrations at all sites in the harbor and hence an overall decline in the harbor's health. Secondarily, data concurred with the hypothesis that septic system leakage is NOT the primary factor influencing harbor health." Storm water runoff is a significant problem, and every year more pollutants are building up in the already thick nutrient filled sediment. Sewers will not help remove these already existing pollutants.

There is sufficient evidence that Inner Little Harbor is suffering from more than just failed septic systems.

The town-funded study completed in 2000 by Camp Dresser McKee found that there was a significant difference between the health of Inner Little Harbor and that of Main Little Harbor. Both water bodies had septic systems and storm water run off, but Inner Little Harbor was much less able to compensate for the incoming pollutants. Camp Dresser McKee concluded that Cat Dam was an impediment. Their very first recommendation was to remove or open Cat Dam. (This is not what the Conservation Commission is requesting with the NOI. They only want an environmentally sound plan for management of the dam.) This dam still is functioning as it was in 2000 and 2004, and so even with sewering it will continue to inhibit the ability of Inner Little harbor to adapt to incoming pollutants, e.g. storm water, animal and bird droppings, etc

There should be no fear about what an NOI would recommend. The O & M is a plan. As conditions change and/or improve, it can be adjusted. Any O&M that is based on current scientific knowledge can only add to our stewardship of the environment. Our precious wetlands deserve the best care that current environmental knowledge can provide, and they deserve it as soon as possible.

Giant fans will change Cohasset wind turbines will wreak upon our town.

Cohasset's turbines will be approximately 612 feet above the level of Route 3A. This includes 462 feet from the base to the blade tip of the structures plus another 150 feet which is the reported height of the hill on which the turbines will be sited. At this incredible height the flicker that the turbines produce will distract local residents and Route 3A drivers. The sound from the turbines will be noticeable to anyone living in Sunrise, Avalon, Rose Hill, and Fairoaks Lane. New evidence is mounting that low frequency sound emitted from wind turbines may cause significant health problems. In addition, wind turbines do experience catastrophic failure and collapse (search Altona, N.Y., wind turbine collapse on March 6, 2009, for more information). Since the developer of this project has failed to provide us with satisfactory simulations of the visual effects that the turbines will produce it's necessary to compare them to structures that we know well or that are located near Cohasset Heights. As context, the water tower located at the top of Cohasset Heights is approximately 50 feet tall. At 462 feet tall the two wind turbines will be more than nine times higher than this tower. Another excellent measuring stick to utilize for visual effect is the tall, narrow tower that is located to the left of USA Fitness (across from Dunkin' Donuts) on Route 3A. This structure is estimated to be approximately 100 feet high and about 30 feet above the level of Route 3A for a total height of 130 feet. The twin turbines at Cohasset Heights will be almost five times higher with a much wider "sky print" than this tall structure. As additional context, Boston's tallest building is the John Hancock Tower which is 790 feet high. The Federal Reserve Bank is Boston's third tallest building at 614 feet. West Quincy's soaring communication tower, which is despised by its residents, is 700 feet high. So Cohasset's proposed turbines will be almost exactly the same height (above Route 3A) as Boston's third tallest building and more than three-quarters the height of the John Hancock tower. Why would we allow structures of this incredible height to be erected in the small town of Cohasset?

Another issue that has not been discussed before is that both of the turbines and especially the one located next to Hingham Lumber's warehouse will be directly in line with Cohasset's most dangerous intersection at Route 3A and King Street. If you've ever driven by Hull's tallest turbine (Hull II), which is 200 feet shorter than Cohasset's proposed turbines, you'd know that they draw the attention of almost everyone passing them. Think about the impact on vehicles trying to navigate this already dangerous intersection with the additional traffic that the new Avalon development will introduce into the mix. Then add in the optical draw and the flicker of the turbines and it's obvious that the danger there will increase significantly. Traffic lights will be required there in order to control the number of high-speed accidents that are sure to increase.

Drivers will be gawking at these structures for a long stretch on both sides of Route 3A. Other traffic control measures may be needed for up to a half mile or more on Route 3A in order to reduce accidents.

Drivers will be gawking at these structures for a long stretch on both sides of Route 3A. Other traffic control measures may be needed for up to a half mile or more on Route 3A in order to reduce accidents. Don't let the proponents of this project use the little wind turbine located next to the IBEW Hall in Dorchester as an example of how smoothly traffic will flow in Cohasset. That turbine is a baby compared to the two that CCI Energy has in store for Cohasset and there isn't an intersection on the Expressway to complicate navigation. Why haven't the developers been required to pay for an independent study on the safety and congestion implications that their project will have on Cohasset's roadways? Will the town have to bear the expense of traffic safety changes which could cost millions to implement?

Cohasset residents should also understand the economic impact that these turbines will have on the values of our real estate. Of course, houses that are closest to the turbines will experience the largest decrease in value but every home in Cohasset will be negatively affected by these dominating structures. I have spoken to an attorney specializing in tax abatement litigation and he believes the turbines will result in property value reductions throughout our town. This makes perfect sense as Cohasset has one of the highest average property values in the state and the wind turbines will certainly affect these values. The structures are so high that they'll easily be seen throughout Cohasset and from many other locations including Wompatuck State Park and areas of Hingham, Scituate and Hull. They'll be seen as far away as Boston since we can see shorter buildings located there from Cohasset. We'll see the turbines clearly from North Main Street to Jerusalem Road. We'll see them from Atlantic Avenue to Cohasset Harbor. We'll see them from King Street to Beechwood. We'll see them clearly from the shores of Aaron River Road down through Doane Street. You'll have them in your sights from Ripley Road to the tables outside French Memories to St. Anthony's Church and the homes nearby. They'll be there at our schools and fields including Beechwood, Barnes, Milliken and Alumni. We'll see them from Sandy Beach, from the sailing center to many of the homes near Little Harbor. They'll be in the background at Cohasset Common with an excellent view from First Parish Church, Cohasset Town Hall and the surrounding historical homes. You'll also see them clearly from the Golf Club. They may even make good targets in order to hit the fairway from many of the tee-boxes. Be careful with the wedding photos though. You won't want the "twins" in any of those shots. The turbines will be in view from most of Cohasset's neighborhoods where there's just a small view of the sky toward Route 3A.

Finally, Cohasset has many assets but many choose to live here due to the natural beauty of our land and seascapes. It is unquestionably our town's most valuable treasure. The giant fans, if erected, will enter into Cohasset's canvas and dramatically reduce the value of this asset for as long as they stand. What will our town's reputation become as a place to live if these structures are erected? No one really knows because there's never been a town in New England willing to sell its soul to allow even one turbine this high on the horizon to be erected. I predict that towns throughout our region will say they can't believe the two monstrosities they've allowed to go up in Cohasset.

The turbines will make Cohasset a less desirable place to live. If you don't believe this then ask yourself a simple question. If you had a choice to buy a home very close to New England's largest wind turbines or away from them where would you chose?

These structures will completely change the image and character of Cohasset. They will reduce our property values and increase the tax liability for all our home and business owners. Our town budgets will come under additional strain, which will lead to reductions in services and staffing levels.

I urge the planning board to deny CCI Energy's application on the grounds that their Cohasset Heights wind turbine project obviously creates a very detrimental visual impact on Cohasset. We must also amend our town's wind turbine bylaw at Town Meeting to ensure that any and all future wind turbine proposals, unlike the Cohasset Height's project, will be projects that protect our town's assets and accrue the benefits to Cohasset, and not to developers and proponents seeking to take advantage of our town and its residents.

American economic hypocrisy

TO THE EDITOR:

As the finger pointing continues in Washington with Republicans blaming recession on the Democrats and Democrats on the last eight years of Republican controlled Congress and White House, who caused this crises and how do we repair it.

You need to step back in time to the 1960s and 1970s when America was the world's industrial leader. Textiles, electronics, building products, cars, kitchen appliances, furniture and almost ninety percent of all other goods were manufactured and purchased by Americans.

Today we drive foreign vehicles, fuel, textiles, electronics, building products, kitchen goods, appliances, furniture and the list is endless. This all happened in the name of free market economy and relaxed trade barriers as our companies shipped jobs and manufacturing overseas. It seemed like a good idea because we could buy more of everything at a cheaper price.

When textiles left nobody blinked an eye (except if you worked in that industry) as huge factories in the south and northeast went vacant. Then electronics were replaced with Fujitsu, Samsung, Sony and Toshiba and Americans cheered as they indiscriminately purchased TVs, VCRs and stereos at a cheaper cost. Nobody took notice of American electronic workers and companies being displaced like Philips, RCA, Panasonic, Westinghouse, General Electric. We were so hungry for more goods that we did not care. In the early eighties, furniture manufacturers all but disappeared again leaving thousands of people without jobs and we again cheered and ran to the store to buy that bed and table made in China and Malaysia. Stockholders of companies that cut labor costs by manufacturing and assembly overseas bought more stock as profits soared all the while thousand of people received pink slips and more U.S. factories went vacant.

Nobody stopped to contemplate our wanton consumption and next came the American auto industry, a world leader for the last century. Toyota, Nissan and Honda were the cars of choice as over the next 20 years Americans purchased them at a feverish pace. Another industry on the brink of extinction that bear American icons like Chrysler, Ford and General Motors. Now recession/depression is upon us and we begin to awaken from irresponsibility that spans 40years and who is to blame.

I say look no further than your vanity (probably made overseas) and the culprit will be staring right back at you. America, if you are driving foreign autos and purchasing foreign products in lieu of American then you are part of the problem of this recession not the solution. We all want to point at politicians but we need to accept our participation that led us here.

Democrat or Republican, Wall Street or Main Street, city or rural residents if we want to prosper again it will be helping one another by becoming responsible citizens and buying American made products and returning jobs to America. If not the next industry being displaced could be yours.

Homework center support appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

Now that the school year is half over, the Friends of Cohasset Library would like to say a heartfelt thank you to all who have made the of the newly established homework center at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library such a success.

For those unfamiliar, each Tuesday, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., 30 to 40 mostly middle school students, come for tutoring from National Honor Society members.

The tutors volunteer their time and provide both help and positive role models, and all involved accomplish much in a congenial environment. We are grateful for the groundwork provided by library director Jackie Rafferty and the library trustees and for the weekly coordination by guidance counselor Kate Nelligan.

In particular, we would like to thank the pizza restaurants here in town, Cohasset Pizza, 3A Pizza & Grill, Victoria's, Papa Gino's and Simply Fresh, for their generous contributions, especially in light of current economic conditions. We recognize that part of the draw for all of the students is the pizza. Though the students find the center so compelling, they have indicated they would come even without refreshments! In addition, thank you to the Rotary Club for donating water. The Friends of Cohasset Library is pleased to provide the funding for this community endeavor, and we would not have been able to do so without the generosity of all those involved. Many, many thanks!

HEALTH NOTES

Tick season gets an early start

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

When removing ticks, use fine-tipped tweezers and protect bare hands with a tissue or gloves to avoid contact with tick fluids.

Hopefully the weather's getting better, we'll spend more time outdoors. We've already heard of two tick sightings, which indicate an early tick season, so it's time to think about getting prepared and to remember how to prevent tick bites.

We tend to think of Lyme disease as the principal disease we can obtain from ticks. Unfortunately, however, over a dozen other diseases can be contracted from ticks. Some species and life stages of ticks are so small that they can be difficult to see, but all hungrily look for animals and, sometimes people, to bite. We find ticks in various environments, often in or near wooded areas; when walking through infested areas or by brushing up against vegetation (such as leaf litter or shrubs). Ticks also feed on mammals and birds, which help maintain them and the pathogens they carry. Fortunately, there are some simple steps you can take to protect yourself and your family:

• Avoid tick-infested areas. Many local health departments, parks and cooperative extension services have information about the area's most infested with ticks. If you are in a tick-infested area, walk in the center of trails to avoid contact with vegetation. Wear light-colored clothing, which allows you to see ticks that are crawling on your clothing. Tuck your pant legs into your socks so that ticks cannot crawl up inside. Some ticks can crawl down into shoes and are small enough to crawl through most socks.

Chemical repellent with DEET which contains permethrin can be sprayed on boots and clothing and will remain protective for several days. It can be applied to the skin but will protect for only a few hours before reapplication is necessary. Parents may apply this product to their children, avoiding the hands, eyes and mouth. Contact the Board of Health concerning the use of Deet with children.

• Perform daily tick checks. Check your body for ticks after being outdoors, even in your own yard. Conduct a body check upon return from potentially tick-infested areas by searching your entire body for ticks. Use a hand-held or full-length mirror to view all parts of your body and remove any tick you find. Check under the arms; in and around the ears; inside navel; back of the knees; in and around the hair; between the legs; around the waist. Check your children for ticks, especially in the hair, when returning from potentially tick-infested areas.

Ticks may be carried into the house on clothing and pets, which should be examined carefully. Placing clothes into a dryer on high heat effectively kills ticks.

When removing ticks, use fine-tipped tweezers and protect bare hands with a tissue or gloves to avoid contact with tick fluids. Grab the tick close to the skin. Do not twist or jerk the tick, as this may cause the mouthparts to break off and remain in the skin. Gently pull straight up until all parts of the tick are removed. After removing the tick, wash your hands with soap and water (or waterless alcohol-based hand rubs when soap is not available). Clean the tick bite with an antiseptic such as iodine scrub, rubbing alcohol or water containing detergents. Ticks must have been living aboard for at least 24 hours to infect humans, so it's highly probable that a careful inspection will reveal them before they've done harm.

Prevent ticks on animals — Two of the ways to get rid of ticks on dogs and cats are putting on tick medicine or using a tick collar. Be sure to use these products according to the package instructions. For more information on animals and health, contact the Board of Health.

If you find a tick, don't use gasoline, nail polish remover or other salves or unguents; dislodge it with tweezers. Pull straight our without twisting. If the tick has been attached for some time, it's wise to see a doctor or Mary Goodwin, Town Health Nurse, for advice about symptoms and a document describing the various ticks. Mark the date on the calendar and if possible, save the tick for identification.

The season of greatest tick infestation is April through August, the time when deer tick nymphs attach themselves to hosts: dogs, cats and us.,

Health, electricity and nuclear energy

COMMENTARY

MURRAY CAMPBELL

Adequate production of electricity, without damage to health and to the environment, is dependent on fuel supply, and nuclear fuel is a vital component of that supply.

Steve Bobo's excellent Heath Notes published in the Mariner of March 6 prompts some further comments about the importance of adequate and reliable electricity.

Before electricity, life for most was one of endless and harsh toil, primitive medical treatment, poor housing, little variety of food, high incidence of food poisoning because of spoilage, high infant mortality and much shorter life spans than today. That harsh existence remains the lot of the many people who still live in undeveloped nations. Electricity has enabled a lifestyle no longer restricted to the very wealthy: a comfortable life with time for education, culture, travel and recreation. Electricity has enabled a productivity that provides the abundant means to care for the less fortunate, pensions for the elderly, culture available to nearly all, and a medical infrastructure that helps increase life span, decrease infant mortality and ameliorate suffering.

So let us honor electricity, and appreciate also that nuclear energy seems destined ultimately to be a major (perhaps dominant) source of electricity in the world's future. Nuclear energy already supplies 20 percent of U.S. electricity and 16 percent of the world's electricity. It contributes nothing to global warming and acid rain, and avoids the health effects of the discharges from the chimneys of fossil-fueled generating plants (some of which contain more radioactivity than is released from the entire nuclear process from mine to final disposal of waste).

Wind and solar may be better in a qualitative sense, but are inadequate in a quantitative sense. And of course, they must be backed up nearly 100 percent by other sources of generation for the hours they can't deliver. Hence their economics must include the effect on total generating system cost of financing and operating both renewable and back up equipment.

Nuclear medicine enables diagnosis and treatment that would be impossible without radioactive material (radio nuclides).To illustrate how important they are, when the shutdown of the Canadian NRU reactor, which supplies about two-thirs of the world's medical radio nuclides, was unduly prolonged by Canada's licensing board, the need to alleviate the resulting shortage of medical radio nuclides prompted such international reaction that Canada's parliament stepped in and broke the bureaucratic log jam.

Granted that nuclear weapons could erase all the wonderful benefits of electricity, along with civilization and life itself. But the nuclear genii is out of the bottle and its quantitative advantages ensure that it will not be universally strangled, so failing to take advantage of the peaceful atom is counterproductive. Most of our exposure to background radiation comes from the soil, rocks and cosmic radiation, with about 4 percent from nuclear medicine and less than 1 percent from the nuclear energy cycle from mine through reactor to final disposal of spent fuel. Although accidents can release radioactivity, the international scientific review, 20 years after the major release at Chernobyl, revealed that the consequences, although significant in three of the nations of the former Soviet Union, were far less than predicted and even farther less than trumpeted by the media. In any case, international cooperation has greatly influenced design, operator training and safeguards to preclude accidents. Nuclear generation is thriving in Asia and Russia, and a renaissance is brewing in the rest of Europe and in the U.S.

Waste disposal is a quite manageable problem in a technical sense, albeit a seemingly intractable political problem. However, eventually we will follow the example of other nations which are pursuing reprocessing and recycle before ultimate underground disposal. Reprocessing and recycle converts the elements with very long radioactive lives to elements with short radioactive lives, destroys the plutonium content by converting it to useful energy and greatly reduces the volume and radioactivity of the material to be stored underground.

Radio nuclide imaging consists of injecting a radio nuclide into the body, usually into the blood stream, so that the faint emissions are displayed on a screen. The diagnostic tests exploit the way the body handles radio nuclides differently when disease or pathology is present. The display reveals function, whereas x-rays, CT scans and MRI reveal only form. Radio nuclides are used also for therapeutic relief of severe pain, and to treat disease such as cancer.

Thanks to nuclear medicine, cancer can be detected early, and many types of cancer successfully treated, cancers that used to be fatal. Nuclear medicine contributes much to health through diagnosis and treatment, but of equal importance is the contribution of electricity to health. Electricity and its panoply of applications not only provide light and heat, but the power for machines to harvest and process food, for preservation of stored and transported food by refrigeration, for treatment of water and sewage, for distillation to convert seawater to potable water, for production of the fertilizer that enables the world to feed its for its growing population, etc. The list of benefits, most now considered as necessities, is long. And nuclear-electricity generation is indispensable to maintaining those benefits, and to expanding their availability to a larger proportion of the world's people.

The market penetration of all-electric vehicles probably will begin slowly but proceed with ever-increasing speed, thus vastly increasing the burden on our already stressed electrical distribution system, and on the nation's electric generating capacity.

In summary, an adequate and reliable electricity supply is essential to health, and to the economic viability of our society so that good health is supported by adequate production of food, goods and services - and by a paucity of unemployment. Adequate production of electricity, without damage to health and to the environment, is dependent on fuel supply, and nuclear fuel is a vital component of that supply.

METCO students reflect on Cohasset program

FROM BOTH WORLDS, PAGE 1

Boston school districts are voluntary participants, the two alumni and current student shed light on how the program has and continues to affect their life.

Vonnessa Goode-Knight graduated from Cohasset High in 1989. She attended Cohasset schools from first grade on up and now her son, who is going into the fifth grade next year, is on the waiting list for the METCO program. Roughly 12,000 students are on the program's waiting list.

"You have to register them at an early age, almost as soon as they are born," said Goode-Knight, who currently lives in Hyde Park.

Ideally, she'd love for her son to get the small town feeling and close-knit community education she was afforded growing up.

"I experienced the best of both worlds. Growing up in Dorchester and going to school in suburban Cohasset," said Goode-Knight. She fondly recalls how the principal knew the names of all the students, how she could walk into the superintendent's office just to say hi. "Besides getting on that bus, we were part of the community…I want to expose my son to that type of environment."

Goode-Knight said a school system where athletics and even physical education are just part of the curriculum, rather than extras is important. At the school her son attends now there is no gym teacher.

Achievement expectations were also different in Cohasset — "there was never a question that we were going to college, that's just what we were taught from first grade to twelfth grade…it's what was expected of us and what we expected of each other."

Goode-Knight went on to Northeastern University and majored in psychology. For the last decade she has been running non-profit organizations in the Boston area. Using the power of Facebook social networking, she has recently gotten back in touch with many of her Cohasset High Class of 1989 classmates, who are planning their 20-year reunion.

Recent Cohasset High grad (class of 2006) and METCO student, Aileen Fortunato had one of the good experiences in the METCO program.

COURTESY PHOTO

More than 50 Cohasset and Scituate high school students, parents and teachers went to the Statehouse to discuss continued funding for the Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity program. The contingent of METCO advocates was so large that Sen. Bob Hedlund, far right, was forced to hold the meeting in the hallway and stairwell landing outside of his office.

"I feel as though it has helped me out in the long run," said Fortunato, now 20 and a full-time student at UMASS-Lowell studying criminal justice with a minor in legal studies. She aims to work in law enforcement or become a lawyer after graduating.

She came to Cohasset public schools in the fourth grade after attending elementary school in Scituate through the METCO program. Like being the new kid anywhere, Fortunato said the transition wasn't easy.

"But when I put myself out there, talked more, I made more friends and things got a lot better," said Fortunato. "I felt that Cohasset was my home away from home. I felt a lot safer and there wasn't as much drama."

The second of four kids, she and her siblings have or still are attending Cohasset schools.

"The METCO program brings diversity into another town that's not normally there. In Cohasset you barely see a black family," said Fortunato. "The METCO program helps towns get better acquainted with other cultures. It brings diversity and diversity is a good thing."

Dana Valentine, a Cohasset High junior, has been part of the METCO Cohasset program since the first grade. Being in the school system almost since the beginning has gave him the chance to grow up with classmates.

"I've been coming here so long, I just feel like one of the Cohasset kids," said Valentine, adding he has never felt like an 'outsider.' "It's an adjustment because the city and here are completely different."

However, getting the chance to see something different outside the city is an opportunity Valentine doesn't take for granted.

"You just have to go into it with an open mind," said Valentine. The payoff for the program works both ways too. "We open up each other's eyes."

Goode-Knight agrees, "I was not the only one benefiting from me being in Cohasset, my fellow students benefited from me being there. They may not have had the opportunity to interact or meet people of color…we learned to balance each other out," said Goode-Knight.

Although being in the METCO program makes for long days for the students it becomes just a way of life after awhile.

"After so many years of doing it you get used to it, it's natural now," said Valentine. His day starts at 5a.m., he catches the bus at 6a.m., is at school until 2p.m. and when he has lacrosse or football practice, he doesn't leave Cohasset until 6 or 7p.m. Sometimes he will stay the night with his Cohasset host family, other times he will take the METCO late bus or the commuter rail. He often gets to his Roxbury home at 8 or 9p.m., then has to start his homework. "There are some late nights."

Goode-Knight said by the time she was in high school her internal alarm clock was set for 5a.m. Her days were made especially long because of the bus route she was the first one on and the last one off.

"I never complained about it. I always looked forward to going to school. But, the most difficult part was balancing," said Goode-Knight. Oftentimes, she would have to do homework while her city friends played outside. "But, my mother told me this is what I had to do to succeed in life."

Fortunato feels similarly. For her when her alarm clock went off at 5a.m. it was never easy to get out of bed, "trust me, I hated it!" she said with a laugh. The commute got easier when she got her license and could drive from to and from her Dorchester home. Overall, she said the program afforded her a better education, a wider network of friends and advocates and more opportunities.

"I'm really fond of the program," she said.

Cohasset Schools METCO director Aleisa Gittens-Carle has a unique perspective when it comes to relating to the METCO students. She graduated from the Scituate METCO program and shared many of the same struggles students come to her with.

"As a former METCO student, I know the importance of an excellent education. I've been there, and done that so to speak and therefore, my students can't use the excuse that I don't understand what they are going through…I've lived the life they are now living," said Gittens-Carle.

Through the METCO program, all students in Cohasset are given the opportunity to meet people from different backgrounds and learn from each other.

"Education isn't simply reading, writing, and arithmetic, but it also deals with relationships between and amongst people. For too long, assumptions have been made about different groups and what better way to destroy those myths and stereotypes than by bringing people together," Gittens-Carle said.

Future of funding uncertain

The fate of the state funding for the METCO program is uncertain. At the annual METCO lobby day on March 18, students, parents and METCO officials lobbied the legislature to level fund the program at $21.6 million.

However, the current budget proposals are far from that number. Under Gov. Patrick's proposed fiscal 2010 budget, a $900,000 cut to state-wide METCO funding is being proposed, along with incorporation of the mid-year spending cuts that were over $2 million, which leaves a total of $18.5 million for the program. The cuts will likely lead to a loss of tutoring and after-school programs for the students, according to a State House News Service press release.

In the current fiscal year, Cohasset lost $12,000 in funding for the METCO program. Participating METCO school districts were receiving $4,000 per student plus the cost of transportation. With the mid-year cuts from the Governor, Cohasset is now receiving $3,680 per student plus transportation, said Cohasset Schools METCO director Aleisa Gittens-Carle. The legislature is still wrangling over the fiscal 2010 budget.

At the School Committee meeting last Wednesday State Representative Garrett Bradley said it is unlikely the state METCO grants would be level funded.

"I support level funding of the METCO program, but I think it will be cut somewhat," said Bradley. "I don't see how we won't see cuts."

School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said over the years many have called for the Cohasset school district to withdraw from the program because the state grant does not fully cover the cost to educate a student as a way to resolve budget problems.

"People need to understand the METCO grant directly offsets the operational budget," said MacCarthy. Approximately three teachers are paid through the grant. "If we lose any more money we'll have to find it somewhere else…amongst the numerous other benefits of METCO program, it has a fiscal benefit."

Superintendent Denise Walsh pointed out that charter schools get more state funding per student than participating METCO public school districts.

Winter athletes show they have mettle

COURTESY PHOTO

Jessica MacDonald of Cohasset receives a Gold Medal in Alpine Skiing at the Special Olympics World Winter Games.

Cohasset's Jessica MacDonald won gold medals in the women's advanced division in both the Super G and the Giant Slalom.

Ten Special Olympics athletes and two SOMA staff members from Massachusetts attended the Special Olympics Winter World Games in Boise, Idaho, Feb. 7 through the 13. The SOMA delegation left Logan Airport at 6:05a.m., on Feb. 5, and flew to Salt Lake City for the Team USA send off. Team USA caravanned with teams from Russia, Venezuela, and Columbia for a seven-hour bus ride to Boise on Feb. 6. The opening ceremonies took place on Feb. 7, and the competition got underway on Feb. 8.

SOMA athletes fared well in the competition. Two local skiers represented Team USA in Alpine. Cohasset's Jessica MacDonald won gold medals in the women's advanced division in both the Super G and the Giant Slalom. Brian Cahill from Duxbury earned fourth, fifth and eighth place ribbons in men's advanced division while posting the best times of any Team USA skier in Super G, Slalom and Giant Slalom. Patrick Adams, nephew of Cohasset's Bill and Marilyn Adams, won third, fourth and sixth places in speed skating.

In addition to the competition, athletes participated in Healthy Athletes, Festival Village and Olympic Town. The city of Boise welcomed the 2,500 athletes from 100 countries. Local television coverage was constant, and everyone participating received a blue and white scarf knit by volunteers from all over the USA, including Cohasset. A Global Youth Summit took place with individuals both with and without disabilities. Athletes met celebrities Johnny Knoxville, Bart Connors, Kristi Yamaguchi, Michelle Kwan, Scott Hamilton, Sam Perkins and Joe Biden among others.

The torch was passed to Athens, Greece, home to the 2011 World Summer Games on Feb. 13. Team USA headed back to Salt Lake City and a Valentine's Day party. Twelve exhausted but exhilarated individuals returned to Logan the afternoon of Feb. 15, where a team of family members welcomed all the champions home.

Cohasset boys lacrosse coach Stew Curran talks to his charges during a short break in practice, Monday at Cohasset High School.

Finalists hoping for another big season

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

After a team spends good time at the top, dreams begin to become expectations and winning becomes the norm rather than the exception.

How many stars graduated? Who's hurt.

Well it doesn't matter because your team is expected to win.

That's the story for the Cohasset boys lacrosse team this season.

There's good reason.

In the past five years, Cohasset has won two state titles, made the finals twice and the semis as well.

This season should be no different.

With veteran coach Stew Curran running the show, and a strong youth program to feed from, the Skippers should be able to handle a few graduations, even if they were star-caliber players.

Cohasset loses seven starters, several who will be playing in the college ranks this season.

Gone are Charlie Czerkawski (University of Connecticut), Mark Flibotte, Michael Grimm (Leghigh), Jake Cunio (Sacred Heart for football), P.J. McCaw (prep school) and goalie Nate Parker (University of New England).

Parker was in net for one of Cohasset's state titles.

"We lost some outstanding four-year starters," Curran said. "Filling those holes will be a challenge. I think some people will step up and get the job done."

Fortunately for Cohasset, they'll have a little experience manning the net with Jack Murphy.

"Jack Murphy made a number of starts last year," Curran said. "He's a very good athlete. He's an outstanding wrestler and soccer player. He understands that being the goalie is different. He's worked on the technique of playing goal. He knows he's the quarterback of the defense. He has a better grasp of that than he did."

If Murphy has trouble, he'll have competition to fend off.

"Eric Wasel is a big kid," Curran said. "Sometimes in goal that can be an advantage. He's very adept with his stick skills. He'll be on Murph's heels this year."

Ted Williams League finds way around Little League Elbow

Rule changes, field dimensions and equipment successful in preventing injury

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Pembroke's Steve Ferroli loves baseball. He loves playing the game, and even more, he loves teaching it and he loves the fact that in the 12 years his Ted Williams League has been around, there hasn't been a single case of Little League Elbow, a painful, but all too common injury in youth sports, especially baseball.

Ferroli played through his college years at Bridgewater State, and through all his time playing, he studied the science of hitting. When his playing days were through, he continued to study hitting.

His hard work led him to Hall of Fame hitter Ted Williams, who was one of the very first hitters ever to take a scientific approach to hitting a baseball, and Williams was impressed, leading him to appoint Ferroli the No. 1 teacher of his hitting theories in 1997.

Williams who authored The Science of Hitting, wrote the foreword to Ferroli's two books, 1986's Disciple of a Master and 1997's Hit Your Potential.

"I've been talking about this guy for fifteen years! Still, he doesn't get the attention he deserves because he didn't play baseball professionally. It's really

Spring bringing new look to local scene

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

It still feels cold outside, but I finally feel spring in the air.

It might just be the fact that driving around I actually saw baseball being played somewhere that's not Florida or California or even Arizona.

No matter where I've lived, to me spring has always been marked by the start of baseball season.

This fact has truly had me confounded this year being back in New England.

Like many around here, I celebrated the start of Red Sox spring training, but it still felt far away, not like driving past the Braves spring training site at Disney and getting a glimpse of the action.

I am excited.

Baseball is my favorite sport, so getting out to see the action is going to be a treat this season.

Spring is also a season that brings thoughts of change, like weather, and sports.

Cohasset certainly will have its share on the fields this spring.

The Skippers welcome a group of new coaches to the fold, many of them familiar faces in new roles.

Heading into the start of my first spring here in a long time I'm looking forward to meeting them and watching the teams play.

So is Cohasset Athletic Director Ron Ford. Well, the watching them play part anyway.

"There are a big number of changes for whatever reason," Ford said Wednesday. "There are always going to be changes, but we don't generally have this many at one time. We have three new head coaches. Track, baseball and girls lacrosse are all transitioning. I'm pretty excited about it."

On the diamond, Skippers football coach and history teacher Pete Afanasiw, who played college baseball and also Single A pro ball will be taking the helm.

Brad Mingels, who coached cross country at Cohasset in the fall, will be taking over the track and field duties. Mingels teaches at Cohasset Middle School and has a long background in running.

Shannon Curran will be leading the girls lacrosse team. Curran has played and coached at UMass-

NAME: Molly O'Dea
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: 55-meters
STATS: The premier female sprinter in the area, O'Dea took home Div. 3 State, All-State, and New England titles in the event this season. Broke the HHS record twice this season (at AS's - 7.28 and NE's – 7.25). Went undefeated in the dual-meet season and competed at Nike Nationals.

NAME: Julia Mirochnick
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior (Captain)
EVENT: 55-meter hurdles
STATS: The premier hurdler on the South Shore this winter, Mirochnick won the Patriot League title in the event going undefeated during the regular season. The senior captain was third at the Div. 3 State Meet (8.93), qualifying for the All-State Championships. Also ran a leg on Hingham's 4x200 relay, which ran at Nationals.

NAME: Siobhan Flaherty
SCHOOL: Braintree
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: Mile
STATS: Flaherty broke more her own Braintree High mile record throughout the season, finally lowering it to time of 5 minutes, 8.08 seconds.

NAME: Julie McCauley
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: 300-meters, Long jump
STATS: Shined on the track and in the field for the Lady Rams this season, but the long jump is where she saw her biggest successes. Took second at the Div. 2 State Meet (16-10) before taking third at the All-State Championships (17-2.75). Advanced to New Englands where she was fourth (17-1.5). Also fourth in the 300M at D2, qualifying for All-States in that event.

NAME: Jill Corcoran
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Sophomore
EVENT: Mile
STATS: A Bay State All-Star, winner of the Boston Holiday Challenge 1 Mile Run, winner of the MSTCA Fresh-Soph Large Schools mile race where she was selected the Top Performer of the Meet. She placed third in the Division 1 mile in 5:07. Corcoran was fifth in the All-State Meet with a 5:06 despite falling down with 5 meters to go.

NAME: Michelle Coste
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Sophomore
EVENT: High jump
STATS: Coste qualified for the All-State meet in the high jump and was also part of her team's 4x200 relay team that won the Div. 4 state title.

NAME: Mary Scanlan
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Sophomore
EVENT: 600-meters
STATS: Scanlan qualified for the All-State meet with a fourth-place finish in the 600, and was also part of the team's third-place 4x800 team.

NAME: Shauna McNiff
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior (Captain)
EVENT: 1,000-meters
STATS: No one was faster than McNiff in the 1,000M this winter. McNiff won her third-straight Div. 3 State crown (3:01.81) in the event and was 10th at All-States. Also won PL titles in the 1,000M and two-mile. She was also second at Winter Fest and second in the mile at the Boston Holiday Classic, setting an HHS record (5:14.9) and qualifying for Nationals.

RELAY TEAMS

4x800 – WEYMOUTH
Jen Corcoran
Melissa Kimball
Carolyn Connolly
Bridget Jaklitsch
Stats: Corcoran, a sophomore, managed a solid 2:23.8 split at All-State Meet, giving way to Jaklitsch, a freshman, who ran 2:31, putting Weymouth in 12th and last place when Connolly took the baton. She ran a torrid 2:17.0 split, bringing the Wildcats to fourth place. Kimball's job as anchor was to hold on and she did, running a 2:24.2.

4x400 - WEYMOUTH
Kayla Sullivan
Jenn Bell
Samantha Bennett
Melissa Kimball
Stats: Incredibly emotional performance at All-State Meet. Two runners, Kayla Sullivan and Bennett, were battling injuries. Despite clearly being hampered by a foot injury that showed with a limp, Sullivan ran a gutsy second leg of the day while Bennett posted her best effort at anchor despite a decrease in training due to shin injuries. The foursome still posted a school record run of 4:04.41.

4x200 – HINGHAM
Amanda Deliot -junior
Julia Neilsen – junior
Julia Mirochnick – senior
Molly O'Dea – junior
Stats: The fastest quartet on the track this season, the Hingham girls won the Div. 3 State title with a time of 1:46.85, mere tenths off the meet record. The same quartet ran 1:47.33 to take seventh at the All-State Championships, just missing the New England cut-off. Also won the Patriot League Championship in the event.

Skipper boys look to stick it to opponents

FROM SKIPPER, PAGE 17

Offensively, Curran said he expects strong performances from his attackers, including senior Jon Wade, who was the school's goalie during their successful playoff run this season and juniors Will Wise and Dean Driscoll.

"I think they'll step up," Curran said of the attack.

Defensively, the team has returning talent.

"Dana Valentine is an exceptional athlete," Curran said. "He's already got inquiries from Division 1 schools for lacrosse. He has the potential to be one of the best we've ever had."

One player with a tough job is Vin Curran.

"Vin has the difficult task of being my son and being on my team," Curran said. "He started for us last year and has played a lot of lacrosse in the offseason. He played indoor and with a club."

Another player to watch is senior Anderson Lyner.

"Andeson Lyner is a very big kid who has become more of a lacrosse player than we ever expected," Curran said. "He put on a great show in our scrimmage against Franklin. He was very impressive. He's probably our best defenseman."

Other players with a strong defensive mindset are senior mids Owen Langdon and Alec Livingston, along with juniors John Maher, Ian Quinlan and Graham Stevenson.

Sophomores Alex Kenneally and Thomas Flibotte round out the group.

Curran had special praise for Quinlan.

"For not knowing if he was even going to make the varsity, he's worked very hard over the last 12 months," he said. "He's become a strong attacker and mid that we can really use."

Curran said the road will be tough.

"We will be challenged," he said. "Norwell is really good this year. They graduated two very good players, but they're going to be very strong in the South Shore League. There are also our friends in Scituate. They took us apart in the State Finals last year."

Scituate coach Mark Puzzangara said Cohasset will be dangerous.

"Stew has something up his sleeve," Puzzangara said when told that Curran had mentioned his team. "I'm sure he'll be loaded. I wouldn't count them out."

The rivalry may have jumped a notch when the teams rescheduled one of their meetings this season to a Friday night game under the lights.

Curran agrees that his team might be loaded this season.

"Our expectations are that we should be one of the top two or three teams in Division 3," he said. "If the kids mature and grow into their roles we could be in line for a state title. We know we're strong at the defensive end. If we can get enough going offensively and put some balls in the net we should compete. If we're healthy we'll always have six good players out there. These days that's what you need. There was a day when you'd be strong if you had two kids who could throw and catch with two hands. Now the sport has grown and the talent level and level of competition has grown. It's great."

One thing that will keep Cohasset on its toes is a schedule that features Marshfield, Duxbury and Scituate.

"Playing bigger schools helps us in the longer run," Curran said. "It keeps us battle ready later."

Cohasset opens the season Saturday against Hamilton-Wenham Regional High School at 11 a.m. at Quincy's Veterans Memorial Stadium.

They then journey to Duxbury Tuesday at 4 p.m.

Spring bringing new look to local scene

Dartmouth, coached Regis College and West Springfield High School.

"Shannon is a young coach," Ford said. "But she has lots of experience."

Listening to Ford, it's easy to tell he's happy with the program from many perspectives.

"I really like where our program is now," he said. "We have great kids and great coaches. For such a small school we have great participation. We have over 180 kids in spring sports. There are only 360 in the school. We've got the smallest numbers in the league, but we're competitive and we get great support. Look at our girls game against Millis. If we played that one again we'd have to rethink where it's played. Between two towns with a total of about 15,000 people, we had over 1,000 at the game. That's unbelievable."

It isn't just about attendance. It's about support.

Recently, the baseball and softball booster clubs donated an indoor batting cage to the baseball and softball teams.

"That kind of support makes a program," Ford said, speaking of the cage. "Now we can hit live inside. That's a huge help. It may be dry right now, but it's cold. I know hitting in the cold is tough, especially if you're using wood bats. It's going to help. It was a sizeable donation. Help like that is why we're at this level. I know the kids can't say they don't have what they need. They appreciate it."

Next up could be a turf field, with efforts already underway.

That is impressive.

But right now, the two words that I have in mind are more pressing, words I've been waiting to hear.

"Play ball!"

FROM FERROLI, PAGE 17

not fair. The way I see it, hitting a baseball and teaching someone to hit a baseball are two different things. And I'll tell you what – Steve Ferroli can teach it every bit as good as I could hit it!" Williams wrote in Hit Your Potential. "I took the game of baseball quite seriously and looking back I guess I did alright. But when age started kicking me in the pants, I got to thinking more and more about kids – kids and baseball. I began to think about coaching and how important quality coaching is. Then I thought boy, who out there is going to be able to talk hitting and get it right? Who has the knowledge to answer the big league questions and the heart to put it on the line for the kids? I was describing Steve Ferroli."

Those comments were part of what led to the founding of Ted Williams League Baseball, a non-profit baseball league for youth and adults as well.

Ted Williams League Baseball was the culmination of ten-years of study about youth baseball leagues by Ferroli, and was approved by Williams.

Now in its 12th season, Ferroli is hoping to take the league to the next level, with the goal of going national soon.

This isn't just another form of Little League or Cal Ripken Baseball, which are the more established leagues around the nation and the world. Ted Williams League baseball is a whole new way to play the game, a way that works to cut down on injuries, keep players more in focus of the game and give everyone an equal chance to play.

Many of the changes also seem to help give hitters an advantage – something Williams would surely buy into.

Ferroli has made it clear that in Ted Williams Baseball, the game belongs completely to the players.

Teams aren't built through a draft or grouped only by age. Instead, players are assigned teams based on their skill level alone. If an older player is lacking certain skills or abilities, he or she might be sent to a team with younger players of the same skill level.

The competitive aspect of the games are also turned down, with strict rules against any and all types of poor sportsmanship by anyone, players, officials, coaches and fans included. There's a speed-up rule to help even out blowout games, and at the end of the season, there are no All-Stars. Instead everyone is eligible to play in the League Tournament.

In the youngest divisions the Kid Division, mostly ages 7-and-8 and then Thumper Divison mostly for ages 8-12, everyone plays nearly equally. There are no players sitting on the bench waiting for that one inning in the field and one mandatory at-bat.

Instead, players join a rotation that has everyone with the exception of first base, pitcher and catcher, who each have to take a proficiency test to play those positions, rotate a position after every at-bat, giving all players a chance to experience every position. Batters are locked into a continuous lineup for the season and it picks up where it left off from the previous game, giving every batter equal chances to hit.

At the same time, teams have no one set coach. Instead, coaches take turns working with teams during games and practices, giving them more opportunity to teach fundamentals rather than just teach winning. It also makes it easier for any volunteer coaches. With floating coaches, someone can say I have these two days free and be able to come and coach on those days without making the same kind of time commitment other leagues need.

"We call it the Toy Philosophy," Ferroli said. "Kids should be seeing baseball as a toy, like a Matchbox car or an action figure. Something they can play with and have fun with. Thinking of baseball like a toy gives a youngster clear ownership of it."

On the safety front, Ferroli's studies, which have a basis in medical research, have paved the way for many more changes.

The biggest of the changes comes the closest to the batter – home plate.

Just about everywhere, the standard size of the plate is 17 inches across.

This is a big deal to Ferroli.

"The plate is too big for the kids' small bodies," he said. "For the younger kids we use a 14-inch plate, then move up to 15 fi inches in the A Division. As arm length increases, the plate should increase.

This change results in many different things.

For pitchers, who suffer most incidents of Little League Elbow, it forces them to slow down and work on their control.

For hitters, it means a smaller strike zone to protect and fewer flame throwers who just fire away and have more plate to work with.

The better focus on control cuts down on hit batters and the potential fear that comes with being hit by a pitch.

Combine that with a smaller, lighter baseball tailored for small hands and no elevated pitchers mound and you now have more balance – and less stress on a pitcher's elbow from throwing.

Because there isn't as much forced motion on a downward slope, the stress on an elbow is reduced. Add the fact that curveballs aren't allowed, with a few exceptions for more developed pitchers, who fit what is called the shave rule, meaning that a youngster is generally physically developed enough to safely throw curves when they begin to shave, and there's a declined risk of the injury.

Another unique rule that helps hitters improve is the walk rule.

If a batter watches ball four, the batter can elect to take it as a strike and get another pitch. The same rule applies to hit batters, who can just take the pitch as a ball and get another pitch.

"Good hitters want to hit," Ferroli said. "Who wants to walk if you're a good hitter."

Williams walked a lot, but his walks were the result of a flawless understanding of the strike zone and a distaste for swinging at pitches out of the zone. Of course, when Williams explained hitting, he could whittle it down to one sentence.

"Get a good pitch to hit," he'd say.

Ferroli still says it when asked for advice.

One thing Ferroli emphasized about the League is the fact that it is a non-profit organization and is not affiliated with his Ted Williams/Steve Ferroli Baseball Camp, other than the fact that his camp is a main sponsor of the league, which at the moment plays in Hanson.

Ferroli is actively looking to start new teams in all surrounding towns, and anywhere there may be interest.

The League, which used to play a fall schedule in respect for existing spring leagues before mosquitoes and the Triple-E virus ended it is currently taking registrations.

The fee is $99 for the season, but with the tough economy, Ferroli said that families who can't afford the fee should contact the league about waiving fees.

Eighth graders downed in finals

Cohasset's eighth grade boys travel basketball team came up short last Sunday in the finals of the Patriot League Basketball Championship. Cohasset kept the game within striking distance throughout until Bridgewater managed a run of ten straight points with the score 42-35 and only 6:08 remaining. Bridgewater captured their third straight Patriot League title with a final score of 56-42 finishing their season undefeated at 18-0. Once again Bridgewater was led by their Junior All-American, Ryan Tufts, who captured the tournament's MVP trophy.

Cohasset's offense was led by Colin Gideon-Murphy, Shane Haggerty, Conor Dooley and Christian Davis. Gideon-Murphy led the scoring hitting four three pointers on the day for Cohasset. Defensively Cohasset was able to hang tough until the much deeper Bridgewater squad managed to create foul trouble for Cohasset's frontline of Myles Garbarini and Dooley late in the second half. Garbarini picked up his fourth foul only a minute into the second half and Bridgewater began to smell blood. Bridgewater now applied their full court press and Cohasset created numerous turnovers without their big man in the middle to break the press. Bridgewater's lead quickly grew to 19 points midway through the second half but the always determined Cohasset nine put a little run together of their own. Three pointers from Gideon-Murphy and Christian Davis coupled with a Haggerty jumper and a lay up from Dooley were followed by a Davis steal and lay up cutting the lead to eleven and forcing Bridgewater to call a timeout with the Cohasset crowd at their feet. Bridgewater came back out of the huddle with their starting five and again ran off ten unanswered points securing the victory for the home team.

Cohasset received solid efforts all season long from the likes of Nick Tangherlini, Connor O'Brien, Thomas Gilliatt, Craig Davis, Christian Davis, Colin-Gideon Murphy, Conor Dooley, Myles Garbarini and Shane Haggerty. Coaches Bob Tangherlini and Paul Davis dedicated many hours to this group of boys over the past four years and the boys rewarded them by reaching the finals both as sixth graders and this year as eighth graders.

Past members of these Patriot League teams included Sam Asnault, Trevor Schramn, Justin Cobin and John Mills, as well as past assistant coach Steve Kuzma. The experience these kids have learned and the friendships garnered are as important as any victory managed during these years. Coach Ruggiero and the Cohasset High School Basketball await you, GOOD LUCK!

Seventh-graders fall in Patriot League semis

Cohasset's seventh-grade boys Patriot League travel basketball team, after qualifying for the Patriot League playoffs as the fifth seed, traveled to Halifax on March 14 to square off against last year's defending champions from Silver Lake, on Silver Lake's home court. In the South Shore's most Hoosier like gym, Cohasset's boys in Blue turned in their best game in two years to knock off the defending champions in a terrific 55-44 win.

Cohasset came out of the gates determined to avenge a 17 point loss to Silver Lake on this same court only two weeks earlier. The Cohasset starting five set the tone early with aggressive man to man defense, and an efficient fast break offense. Rocco Laugelle and Brendan O'Connell pushed the ball aggressively up the court, with Mark 'Skywalker' Rattenbury the principle recipient, as Cohasset's ultra-talented and athletic big man swooped in for three straight buckets on the break. Cohasset's versatile Mr. Hoops, Chris Haggerty, slashed to the rim from his small forward position, and netted six first half points. Joe 'Buck' Buckley was a monster inside, controlling the boards to key the fast break, and Cohasset raced to a 25-15 halftime lead.

Silver Lake rallied in the second half, and on three occasions, closed to within two points. The basketball was superb on both sides, as the teams combined to score 59 points in the second half alone. Doug Fitzgerald, Jack Conte and Mark McKenna took turns in harassing Silver Lake's talented guards, and Dakota Achen battled Silver Lake's big front court under the rim. With five minutes left in regulation, Cohasset lead 42-40. From that point on, Cohasset turned in its best five minute stretch of the season, as it closed the game with a 13-4 run to clinch the upset victory. Rocco Laugelle and Brendan O'Connell each nailed big time jumpers to push Cohasset in front, and from there, Cohasset's inside trio of Buckley, Rattenbury and Liam "Sir Charles" Burke dominated the boards and hit their free throws (Burke and Buck hitting a combined seven-for-eight in the second half) down the stretch to clinch the win. Burke in particular came up huge, as he was forced to log additional minutes with the absence of frontcourt mates Henry Brown and Mark Brown, and netted a season high 12 points in the win.

Sunday saw Cohasset face off with the top seeded Bridgewater squad in the semi-finals. Cohasset had given Bridgewater one of its two losses during the regular season, and played then close in a February rematch, and the Boys in Blue were confident that they'd give Bridgewater all they could handle. And for the first half, they did. Cohasset's Five took up where they left off on Saturday, and in a tight and well played defensive struggle, Cohasset lead by two at half, 20-18. "Hoops" Haggerty led Cohasset with eight first half points, with Joe Buckley contributing four, and Jack Conte providing Cohasset a big lift with his aggressive man to man defense.

The second half was a different story, as Bridgewater's superior size and depth wore down the shorthanded Cohasset squad. The Boys in Blue battled hard to the end, but Bridgewater proved itself the superior squad and deserving of the No. 1 seed, as they pulled away for the win and a trip to the finals. Still, the Cohasset squad turned heads this year - from not making the playoffs as 5th graders, to a first round exit as sixth graders, to a semi-final run as seventh graders, Cohasset served notice that it would be a team to be reckoned with in the coming years.

On Friday, March 20, Cohasset traveled to Cape Cod Community College to take on host Barnstable in the first round of the Barnstable Invitational Tourney.

Rebounding from its defeat to Bridgewater, Cohasset raced out to a 21-5 halftime lead, and with a big hustle bucket by Jack Conte in the second half, thwarted a Barnstable rally, and walked off with a 45-35 win. Skywalker Rattenbury led the Blue with 15 points, as Mark dropped some beautiful turnaround jumpers in the lane. Rocco Laugelle was a ball hawk on defense, and contributed several steals that ignited the Cohasset fast break. Doug "Professor" Fitzgerald contributed with his patented sweet jumper from the outside.

Saturday morning saw Cohasset take on Sacred Heart of Worcester. Cohasset again jumped out to an early lead, as the Blue's press caused several turnovers that led to buckets by Dakota Achen, Liam Burke and Rocco Laugelle. From there, Cohasset's defense kept Sacred Heart at bay, thwarting a second half rally, and Cohasset authored a well earned 37-24 win. Rattenbury and Laugelle led all scorers with 10 apiece, with Burke contributing eight.

An hour later, Cohasset played its last game of the year, as the Boys in blue faced off against Jaffrey, New Hampshire. The Jaffrey squad, only six in number, was the best the Cohasset boys faced all year. Strong, tall, athletic, well coached, Jaffrey rushed out to an early 14 point lead. Cohasset battled hard, played Jaffrey even in the second half, and made several runs behind some strong guard play, as Chris Haggerty (six points) and Brendan O'Connell (team high nine points) each nailed two three pointers to key rallies. But in the end, Jaffrey's size was the difference, and Cohasset could get no closer than seven points, as Jaffrey moved on to the finals of the Barnstable Tourney with a well earned win. By a points allowed tie breaker, Cohasset lost a chance to face Jaffrey in a finals rematch.

The Boys in Blue finished with a 17-12 season record, won the pre-season Barnstable Tourney, reached the semi-finals of the Patriot League Playoffs, and reached the the semi-finals of the Barnstable Invitational Tourney. Team members Dakota Achen, Joe Buckley, Henry Brown, Mark Brown, Liam Burke, Jack Conte, Doug Fitzgerald, Chris Haggerty, Rocco Laugelle, Mark McKenna, Brendan O'Connell, and Mark Rattenbury all worked and played hard and with class, and represented the town well. Well done fellas! The seventh grade team also congratulates the sixth grade team for making the Patriot League playoffs, and the eighth grade team for making the Patriot League playoffs and reaching the finals - Cohasset's Hoops future is bright! Go Blue!

CYBSA to hold player draft for upcoming spring season on April 2

The CYBSA will hold its roster selection draft on April 2nd, 7:00pm at the Cohasset High School Library.

The purpose of the draft is to allocate players to teams in all Baseball and Softball divisions with the exception of the Major League Baseball Division. Teams in the Major League Baseball division have already been selected.

Leagues included in the draft are:

Baseball Divisions:
Farm League (T-ball) baseball
National League baseball
American League baseball
Junior League baseball
Softball Divisions:
All Softball divisions

If you are interested in coaching in any of these divisions, then you should plan on attending the draft. All interested coaches must sign in at draft night and complete a coach volunteer form (CORI) in order to be eligible for any coaching position.

Note: The CYBSA will also be conducting a coach's clinic in early April. We will have some top notch talent offering tips on coaching all youth divisions. Final date, time and place TBD.

If you have any questions, feel free to email Erik Golz at Erik.Golz@adsfs.com or call 617-230-2559.

South Shore Summer Soccer announces clinic

Camps and Clinics 2009 for boys and girls ages 4 through 18

We are proud to announce our 13th Annual Summer Training Program. We have hired the Make the Save Goalkeeper Training with Giovanni Pacini and the Play Soccer organization to bring the best, most professional coaching directly to our program. During the month of August, for a period of 3 weeks, 4 different specialty programs, 3 sessions to choose from, Play Soccer will bring its widely acclaimed program to our fields at a very affordable cost.

Each day or evening at camp, soccer players will develop new skills in our 10 different soccer-training disciplines. High School, Club and Youth teams are encouraged to sign up and have a pre-season training session together. Our camp has everything your players need to excel in soccer.

To assure a spot for you or your team, early registration is advised; space is limited. If you have any questions or would like an application, please call or e-mail your request to:

'Eat Your Art,' a feast for the senses

By Kathryn Hillman
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"Eat Your Art" has become a Cohasset tradition over the past eight years. People of all ages can compete. Each age group is divided up into two categories: an original work of art, or a representation of a famous work of art. There were many contestants in each category (except for the adult category, in which there was only one entry by Ms. Swartz the Cohasset Middle High School art teacher). A jazz ensemble made up of high school students was playing classic jazz at one end of the cafeteria, which is where the event was hosted. They sounded terrific and really added a lot to the atmosphere of the night.

The art pieces were all extremely original and creative. Many Cohasset residents entered works of art, especially grade school students. Dioramas were very popular this year. One entry from the kindergarten – grade four group titled "It's Raining Gumdrops" had gumdrops suspended at varying heights inside a box. The piece was quite original. Food sculpting was another preferred method. Some pieces of art included animals, television characters, and buildings such as the Eiffel Tower, the Leaning Tower of "Pizza," and a stadium with M&M spectators. Some of the representations included portraits, replicated works of famous paintings, and food represented with food (for example, sushi made with fruit roll-ups).

The four judges for this competition were Mr. Marks, Dr. Blidner, Mrs. Struzziery and Mrs. Ritz. They awarded two awards per age group, one for the original piece and one for the representation of a famous work. In the kindergarten – grade four age group, the original piece, "Mouse Train" by Grace H. Alves won; for a representation, "We Will Barack You," a portrait of our current president, by Caitlyn and Dylan Marat took the prize. The winners for the grades five – eight category were "Butterflys and Flower" by Allie Donoghue for the original piece; and "Crows in the Wheat Field," a rendition of Van Gogh's painting, by Andrew Leighton. In the high school division for grades nine through 12, the original piece winner was "Peace & Love Flower" by Paige Smith and, for the representation, "Mah zeh?" by Anya Gruber. In the adult category, the winner was Ms. Swartz, with a reproduction of Shepard Fairey's famous print of Barack Obama.

The Hillman brothers, Robbie,13, and David,10, show the art was indeed edible!

In addition to these awards, there were honorable mentions for other works of art that really struck the judges. "The One That I'd Like To Play Award" went to "Game Land" by Emmy McGoldrick. The "Funkiest Idea Award" went to "Darwin's Evolution of the Cake" by Robbie and David Hillman. "The Cohasset Spirit Award" went to "Got Turf?" by Nick Schubert.

Finally, after the judging was complete, the contestants and spectators were able to "Eat Your Art." With vibrant colors for the eyes, jazzy music for the ears and delicious "art" for the mouth, this event was a treat for the senses. As Ms. Berkowitz, the chair of the Fine Arts Department at Cohasset High School, said at the beginning of the competition, "The judges are going to have a tough time this year!" She was absolutely right.

Spring is still a little frosty

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

Hello everybody! Even though spring has begun, I still find myself waking up to frost on my windshield. Is it so much to ask for some flip-flop weather? I didn't think so, but the weather report seems to suggest otherwise. In any case, there was a Francophone festival this week in which several CHS performed a skit after the popular French series, "Sam-Sam," with Greg Bushnell starring as Sam-Sam. And allow me to just emphasize the fact that seniors now only have 36.5 days left of school, excluding weekends and snow days (it could happen).

Spring sports are now in full swing, and although the competition for a decent time-slot at the gym is fierce, I can promise you that the competition that is going to be seen on the field is going to be much fiercer. I don't even know if fiercer is a word, but that just proves how intense this year's spring teams are going to be.

This past Thursday was the annual "All-School Band Concert"! It combined the musical talents of both the high school and middle school band students under the careful conducting of both band teachers, Mrs. Goldstein and Mrs. Moriarty. Great job, band! Also, today it dawned on me that the third quarter ends in a little less than three weeks. Time flies when you're having fun, right? And with that I leave you all to a wonderful weekend! Arrivederci!

Lauren Mack is a senior at CHS; her column appears weekly during the school year.

Cohasset students in World of Difference event

Students from Cohasset High School were among 1200 that attended the Anti-Defamation League's 15th annual A World of Difference Institute Youth Congress. The students, from more than 50 schools across the state gathered at the Boston Park Plaza Castle & Hotel recently to learn how positive peer pressure can be used to facilitate positive behaviors.

The diverse group of students, and many of their teachers, took part in peer-led workshops that explored issues of prejudice and their manifestations such as physical and verbal bullying, cyber bullying, and other hurtful, bias-motivated behaviors. After attending the New England Youth Congress, students are now prepared to address the prejudice-based challenges they commonly face.

Junior Gardeners to meet April 13

Junior Gardeners will begin preparations for the Community Garden Club's flower show, "A Golden Retrospect," which will take place at Glastonbury Abbey next month. This will be a standard flower show to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the club.

The April meeting of the Junior Gardeners will focus on preparing juniors for participating in this show. There will be a special category for junior gardeners and all juniors are invited to submit entries in both the design class and the horticulture section. There is no limit to the number of juniors who can participate.

The preparatory program will take place from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m., on Monday, April 13, in the cafeteria of Deer Hill School. Titled "Designing for Show," the meeting is an opportunity for students to learn about the upcoming flower show, see the schedule, become familiar with flower show rules and get instruction about exhibiting in such a show.

Art scholarships

South Shore Art Center offers five scholarships to graduating high school seniors who have been accepted to a school of fine arts or an accredited institution of higher learning. Applications and portfolios will be accepted April 25 through 29. Interested students should bring a portfolio of eight original works, no larger than 18 inches by 24 inches (no slides), including a self-portrait or portrait done from life, and a composition drawing or painting using representational subject matter in any media. Scholarships range from $200 to $1,000. Scholarships will be awarded at the opening of the 54th annual Arts Festival on Friday, June 19.

For more information, call South Shore Art Center at 781-383-2787 or visit the Web site at www.ssac.org/wdnew/comntypr.htm.

CHS musicians perform with BaYS Orchestra

Cohasset High School musicians Carly Oddleifson, violinist, and William Choi, cellist, will perform with the Bay Youth Symphony Orchestra, in concert with the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra, at 8 p.m., on Saturday, March 28, in Memorial Hall, Plymouth, when the two orchestras combine in a performance of Rimsky-Korsakov' "Capriccio Espagnole."

Carly studies violin with Phillip Rush at the South Shore Conservatory. William studies cello with Bonnie Harlow, area freelance musician and teacher.

Bay Youth Symphony is a sequential youth orchestra program sponsored by South Shore Conservatory in collaboration with Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra. More than 100 students from 21 South Shore communities rehearse weekly at Duxbury Performing Arts Center.

For more information on BaYS, go to the Web site at sscmusic.org/orchestra. Tickets for the concert may be purchased on the Philharmonic Web site at plymouthphil.org.

CHS class of 1975 to hold 35th reunion

Byron Aulick is organizing a 35th class reunion for the Class of 1975. The reunion won't be held until July 2010, but in an effort reach all members of the class in preparation for it, he has created a Facebook Alumni '75 page. There are already 50 members of the class in the group and the alumni page gains new members each week. If you graduated in the Class of 1975 and would like to join this group, e-mail Byron at chsadmin@datavault.com or Kay at domaccount@btinternet.com. All CHS 1975 alumni are welcome to join.

TECHNOLOGY AT SUMMER CAMP

It's no longer about whether technology is in use at summer camps—it's about how. All camps depend on technology to some extent—it's often in the background of the camp experience.

The American Camp Association, New England has compiled a list of technology that is readily used at many summer camps:

➡ Email: Some camps encourage families to send camper email and many camps have put into place intricate systems to receive & deliver email messages daily.

➡ Photos & Streamed Video: Creative use of technology to minimize interruption of the child's experience has increased in recent years. Some camps post photos or streaming video content on their websites. This gives parents the information they want while it allows campers to experience safe independence.

➡ Fax Machines: Most camps deliver fax messages from parents and send messages from campers back to their families.

➡ Phones: A caution to parents and kids, though: cell phones in general are not encouraged for camper use; but some full and half season camps (4-8 weeks) offer organized use of land lines for camper communication.

Having the opportunity to experience, unplugged, a summer community of children can be tremendously beneficial for children.

Baja whales and wildlife up close on Cruise West Mexico cruise

Fran Golden
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

MAGDALENA BAY, MEXICO — Our panga operator was whistling as if calling a dog. The dozen passengers in the little open-air boat had all heard tales of how the California gray whales that migrate to Mexico's Magdalena Bay, sometimes get curious and come so close to the boats you can touch them.

And our operator was convinced he could whistle to attract a 30-foot whale. It didn't work.

So we had to content ourselves with viewing about a half dozen grays from several yards away. That's still closer than you tend to get to whales — close enough to make out the white spots that blotch the grays' slate bodies.

We had come to the bay in the Pacific by bus, across the jagged Sierra de la Giganta Mountains and desert of the Baja California peninsula, as part of a cruise in the Sea of Cortez. Several million years ago the long, finger-shaped peninsula split off from Mexico along the San Andreas Fault, and the sea was formed.

Cruise West explores the waters and surroundings from January through March, on one-week cruises on its Spirit of Endeavour, a 102-passenger ship.

Whales are the big draw for the nature-loving crowd.

The grays migrate from Alaska, and bear and calve their young in Mexico's shallow lagoons. Some of these lagoons became slaughtering grounds when they were first discovered in the 1800s — most infamously, Captain Melville Scammon sailed his brig from Boston in 1857, trapping and killing all the whales in a lagoon that today bears his name. By 1874, the grays were nearly wiped out. Today, the breeding grounds are protected.

The grays were not the only whales we sighted.

In fact our first "breech," a diving humpback whale, occurred minutes after we left our embarkation port of Cabo San Lucas, Baja's most famous resort town and southern terminus.

But the big show was a few days into the cruise, off Isla Del Carmen, when the Endeavour's three ever-vigilant exploration leaders, binoculars at the ready and scanning the sea, put out word for passengers to grab binoculars and head to the ship's outside decks. Spouts had been spotted, and our captain had turned our vessel in pursuit.

A whale show's off in Mexico's Magdalena Bay.

And there it was, a blue.

To put this sighting in perspective, blue whales are among the largest creatures known to exist on Earth; bigger even than dinosaurs.

At 100 feet in length and up to 150 tons, they tend to stick to open waters, so sightings are rare.

"How cool was that?" said one passenger, after our glimpse.

But minutes later, not to be outdone, a Sei whale, the third largest whale species, gave us an even bigger thrill when it decided to go under our ship's bow, rising on the port side and then flapping his (or her) tail. An impressive performance for sure — so much so that one startled fellow nearly dropped his camera in the sea.

John Steinbeck came to the bio-rich Sea of Cortez in 1940 (a year after his "Grapes of Wrath" was first published) and together with biologist Ed Ricketts wrote about nature in "The Log from the Sea of Cortez."

But most people today know Baja for Cabo, with its big stretches of white sand beach and tourist scene; or for the tacky northern city, Tijuana, near the California border. Up until 1973, you couldn't drive the more than a thousand miles between the two. There were no roads.

Leave Cabo and head north and much of the time you will pretty much find yourself in the middle of nowhere — many areas are protected including some of the nearly 250 uninhabited islands offshore.

With its remoteness and numerous biospheres, some call Baja the "Galapagos of the North." But after the very blue sea, most of the landscape is dusty desert compete with giant cacti.

On the edge of the desert, in small, agricultural areas, giant osprey nests occupy power poles. And any time you are near water there are sightings of fish and marine birds, entire flocks of pelicans, dolphins and more (Cruise West gives you a typed list of all wildlife sightings at the end of your cruise, and ours filled an entire page).

My pal and I had a "find" of our own after we did a wet landing (our feet got wet) off one of the Endeavour's inflatable dinghies on tiny Isla de Espiritu Santo (Island of the Saints' Ghosts), one of several remote islands we would visit - this one owned by The Nature Conservancy. On a walk on a beautiful, two-mile white sand stretch known as Bonanza Beach - Gilligan's Island surrounded by desert — we chased away huge turkey vultures to see what they were pecking at.

Turns out it was the remains of a tortoise, including a shell about the size of a side table. Dead or not, it was a cool sight. We got kudos for reporting our find when we returned.

On the rocky, guano-covered island of Los Islotes, we were supposed to have the opportunity to snorkel with sea lions. I was among those brave enough to don a wetsuit, but when we got to the island the seas were too choppy.

Still, the ship got close enough for us to see and hear hundreds of sea lions barking and the island's other inhabitants, flocks of birds including blue-footed boobies (their feet fluorescent blue), squawking away. Sea lions, it turns out, like to nip like puppies. And males can weigh 850 pounds; females 220. So while the greeting sounded welcoming, and several of the creatures, mostly females and juveniles, dove off the rocks into the water as if to say "come play," I was just as happy to watch from the ship.

Sometimes nature close up is better than nature touching.

Fares are from $2,599 per person including accommodations, meals and most shore excursions. Look for special discounts online at www.cruisewest.com, or call 888-851-8133.

Life on the Endeavour

The Endeavour is a small, comfortable ship designed for travelers seeking mild adventure — the kind where you don't have to rough it. The ship's public areas are a dining room, a large lounge area and sundeck space (where a must-do taco buffet is offered one afternoon). The average age of passengers is 60-ish; some younger, a few older.

Days are spent doing easy, guide-led nature hikes, exploring on your own, snorkeling or kayaking (gear is provided, including wetsuits) or on organized tours. Most days, inflatable boats take you from the ship, and sometimes your feet get wet as you reach shore.

Nighttime entertainment consists of a daily nature-spotting recap during cocktail hour and a post-dinner lecture or video in the lounge (on subjects such as whales and Baja cowboys). The food is better than you might expect including irresistible dessert selections. You sit with whom you'd like, and a convivial atmosphere prevails.

During our weeklong cruise, in addition to nature spotting, we spent a little time in civilization, too. In the sleepy fishing village of Loreto (population 10,000), my pal and I shopped for silver, pottery and other trinkets, explored the first mission established in the Californias (Jesuits arrived in 1697) and enjoyed stuffed chiles and enchiladas at a casual cafe. In La Paz, capital of Baja California and a city of 180,000, we roamed the more developed seafront stretch, admiring the views and boats in the yacht harbor.

Most activities on our cruise were of the non-strenuous variety — slow and leisurely. But a boulder scramble up a gulch one afternoon on Isla Partida satisfied those looking for a little more challenge (I made it about two-thirds of the way up the canyon and then ached for a couple of days).

Fourth-grader shares her love of dancing

On St. Patrick's Day, South Shore Community Center Preschoolers were treated to an exhibition of Irish step dancing. Leah Cook, who is a fourth grader at Deer Hill School and a championship-level Irish step dancer, came to SSCC to show the children several dances and answer questions about Irish dancing. The children were very interested in her dress, wig and even her shoes, which were passed around for close inspection.

Leah receives dance instruction at the Nevin Academy of Irish Dance, which offers classes on a weekly basis at SSCC, as well as at other locations in Norwell, Weymouth and Newport, R.I. Leah has been dancing for approximately five years and she was proud to share her love of Irish dancing with the children of the SSCC Preschool.

Leah Cook prepares to perform a reel for the SSCC preschoolers.

Portraits celebrate Cohasset artist

Portraits of a generation of Cohasset children, circa 1940, will be on display at the Cohasset Historical Society at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St., beginning Sunday, April 19. The special exhibit of 18 oil paintings celebrates the work of one Cohasset artist, Margaret Reed, who lived here from 1930 to 1942.

COURTESY PHOTO

Portrait of Lansing Reed, son of the artist, with Mary Hartshorne.

Mrs. Reed taught art at what was the Cohasset Country Day School on South Main Street. A professional portrait painter, Mrs. Reed specialized in children's portraits. Painting from life, she had a gift for engaging her subjects and catching their likenesses with inherent expression and spirit. The likenesses of a number of current and recent Cohasset residents are to be seen as children in the exhibit.

Margaret Reed studied painting at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. Her teachers included artists John Singer Sargent, Frank Benson, and a fellow student, Alexander James, son of philosopher William James.

Curator of the exhibit is Cohasset's Mary Cumner Hartshorne, whose portrait, at age 10, is among those on display. Mrs. Hartshorne reached out to former Cohasset residents as far as Florida and Maine for their portraits to be included in the Historical Society exhibit.

Edward F. Ripley

Retired investment banker and author

Edward Franklin Ripley, 81, a resident of Chestnut Hill, died on March 16, 2009, at St. Joseph Villa, Flourtown, Pa., where he had lived for the past three years.

Mr. Ripley was born in Cohasset, where he resided until enlisting in the Navy at age 17 and served on a destroyer in the Pacific during World War 11. A graduate of Lafayette College with a master's degree in Philosophy from Columbia University.

Mr. Ripley entered the investment banking business in 1953 at Manufacturers Hanover in New York City and later worked as an investment officer at Virginia National Bank in Norfolk, Va. He moved to Philadelphia in 1962 to join Studley Shupert & Company and received a certificate from the Graduate School of Banking at Louisiana State University the same year. He later was president and chief operating officer of Resource Management Group, an investment service firm, which merged with First Pennsylvania Bank in 1973. Subsequently, he served for a number of years as a vice president of Legg Mason Wood Walker, Inc. from which he retired in 2001. Mr. Ripley also taught investments and economics in the evening schools of Drexel, Temple and the Philadelphia College of Textiles.

Mr. Ripley was deeply interested in the history of the Puritans in America and spent 10 years researching and writing a biography of his ancestor, the Reverend Peter Hobart, founder of the First Parish Church in Hingham. The biography, "Shepherd in the Wilderness," an account of Hobart's life including his journey from Hingham, England to Hingham, Mass. in 1635, was published by the University Press of America in 2001.

Among his other interests were hiking and mountain climbing in the Adirondacks which he discovered as a boy, scouting for wood for his fireplaces and wood stoves and mending things with his "New England hands" which he described as knowing how to fix things without being able to explain it to others.

Edward F. Ripley

Mr. Ripley previously served as Governor of the Society of Colonial Wars of Pennsylvania, on the vestry of the Church of St. Martin in the Fields and on the Boards of the Chestnut Hill Community Association, Planned Parenthood Association and the Schuylkill Center for Environmental Education. He was also a member of the Society of Mayflower Descendants and Military Order of Foreign Wars.

Mr. Ripley leaves his wife Elizabeth Tucker Ripley, two children, Peter Hobart Ripley of Brooklyn, N.Y. and Elizabeth Ripley White of Princeton, N.J., granddaughters Hawthorne Ripley, Eliza and Sarah White and a sister, Mrs. Harriet Gay of Kailua, Hawaii.

A memorial service will be held on Sunday, May 24, at the Old Ship Church in Hingham, the oldest church in continuous use in America and the oldest wooden church structure in the country. Built in 1681, it is adjacent to the site of the original Puritan meetinghouse built by the Reverend Peter Hobart. Interment will be in the family plot in Central Cemetery, Joy Place, Cohasset.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Alzheimer's Association, 399 Market St., Philadelphia, PA 19106.

William Curtis Cormier Sr.

Korean War veteran

William Curtis Cormier Sr., 76, of Rockland, died of cancer March 19, 2009, at the Brockton VA Hospital.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MARCH 23, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You'll want to discourage well-meaning but potentially ill-advised interference in what you intend to accomplish. Your work has a better chance to succeed if it reflects you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The Bovine's well-deserved reputation for loyalty could be tested if you learn that it might be misplaced. But don't rely on rumors. Check the stories out before you decided to act.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You've been going on adrenaline for a long time, and this unexpected lull in a recent spate of excitement could be just what you need to restore your energy levels. Enjoy it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Friends can be counted on to help you deal with a perplexing personal situation. But remember to keep your circle of advisers limited only to those you're sure you can trust.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Security-loving Lions do not appreciate uncertainty in any form. But sometimes changing situations can reveal hidden stresses in time to repair a relationship before it's too late.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time for single Virgos to make a love connection. Be careful not to be too judgmental about your new "prospect" — at least until you know more about her or him.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your sense of justice helps you resolve a problem that might have been unfairly attributed to the wrong person. Spend the weekend doing some long-neglected chores.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might feel justified in your anger toward someone you suspect betrayed your trust. But it could help if you take the time to check if your suspicions have substance.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Ignore distractions if you hope to accomplish your goal by the deadline you agreed to. Keep the finish line in sight, and you should be able to cross it with time to spare.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your creative self continues to dominate through much of the week. Also, despite a few problems that have cropped up, that recent romantic connection seems to be thriving.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) As curious as you might be, it's best to avoid trying to learn a colleague's secret. That sort of knowledge could drag you into a difficult workplace situation at some point down the line.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Instead of spending too much time floundering around wondering if you can meet your deadline, you need to spend more time actually working toward reaching it.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a natural gift for attracting new friends, who are drawn to your unabashed love of what life should be all about.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

The Best & The Brightest

Braintree Forum, Cohasset Mariner, Duxbury Reporter, Hanover Mariner, The Hingham Journal, Kingston Reporter, Marshfield Mariner, Norwell Mariner, Old Colony Memorial, Pembroke Mariner & Reporter, Scituate Mariner, Wareham Courier, Weymouth News

We know there are many bright, talented and caring young adults in our communities. Coming the week of May 24th, a special section entitled "The Best & The Brightest" will appear in the COHASSET MARINER to celebrate their accomplishments.

Please help us find these remarkable teens and young adults by filling out the nomination form on this page. You can nominate an individual between the ages of 16 and 21 who, you believe, deserves to be honored, whether it be for academic achievement, volunteerism, athletics, artistic acumen or the pursuit of excellence in another field. Here's your opportunity to get involved.

You can bring the form to the Community Newspaper Company office at 182 Standish Ave., Plymouth, MA 02360; mail it to Beth Doyle at the same address; or fax it to 508-591-6601.
Ballots are also available online at www.wickedlocalspecials.com/best/cohasset-mariner.pdf

All entries will be considered by a selection panel. One winner from each town will be interviewed and photographed for inclusion in "The Best & The Brightest," a CNC special section devoted to sharing the stories of these outstanding individuals.

Bernadette Peters coming to Symphony Hall

From Sondheim to lullaby, this lady owns the stage

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

With two Tony Awards and starring roles in more than a dozen musicals to her credit, Bernadette Peters is used to appearing with other big names. Earlier this month at Washington, D.C.'s Kennedy Center, Peters was in just such company – alongside Bill Cosby, Lauren Bacall, James Taylor, Phyllis Newman, Brian Stokes Mitchell and others – for a gala 77th birthday tribute to Senator Edward M. Kennedy. A special guest that night, however, caught the Broadway veteran off guard.

"It was a once-in-a-lifetime event to be able to perform in front of Ted and Vicki Kennedy, the Kennedy family, First Lady Michele Obama, Vice President and Mrs. Biden. And then at the end of the night, President Obama joined us on-stage to lead everyone in singing 'Happy Birthday' to Senator Kennedy. We had been told up front what to expect and what we could and could not do while the president was on-stage with us, but it was all still very overwhelming. All of us ladies were weeping as we sang, and I'm pretty sure the men were crying, too, on the inside. The whole experience was just very, very emotional," said Peters by telephone from New York last week.

"I've known Senator Kennedy for many years now. We even sang together, with James Taylor, on a special version of 'You're the Top' at a birthday concert for Yo-Yo Ma and Itzhak Perlman at Tanglewood in 1996. I learned then that Senator Kennedy really loves to sing. For his birthday party, he put the list of performers together himself. We were all just asked to keep the mood upbeat. I wanted to do something light, so I sang 'There is Nothing Like a Dame,' which gave me a chance to venture into the audience," explains Peters of the move that did not go unnoticed from a certain VIP box. "A couple of days after the event, Senator Kennedy called to say thank you. He was very charming, and he told me that he thought that the gentleman that I sang to in the audience was probably still wondering how he got so lucky."

Peters promises to perform the "South Pacific" song – as well as other music by Rodgers and Hammerstein, Irving Berlin, Jules Styne and Stephen Sondheim – when she takes the stage of Boston's Symphony Hall for a Celebrity Series appearance on April 4 as part of her current concert tour.

Bernadette Peters

"The great thing about doing concerts is that I get to sing exactly what I want to sing and say just what I want to say. I love the feelings and thoughts expressed in songs like 'Being Alive,' 'No One Is Alone' and 'Children Will Listen.'"

Theater audiences first began listening to Peters when, at age 10, she appeared in the New York City Center revival of "Most Happy Fella." In the 1960s and early 70s, Peters appeared with Joel Grey in "George M!," and starred opposite the late Robert Preston in "Mack & Mabel." By 1974, she had moved to Hollywood and was appearing in feature films including "The Longest Yard," "The Jerk," "Pennies from Heaven," Mel Brooks' "Silent Movie," and "Annie." Peters has also earned Emmy nominations for her television work on everything from "The Muppet Show" to "Ally McBeal." She currently recurs as magazine mogul Jodie Papadakis on ABC-TV's "Ugly Betty."

Whatever else she is doing, however, the 61-year-old Peters always makes time to return to Broadway, where her triumphs have included Tony Award-winning turns in Andrew Lloyd Webber's "Song and Dance" and the revival of "Annie Get Your Gun," as well as "Sunday in the Park with George," "The Goodbye Girl," "Into the Woods" and the acclaimed 2003 revival of "Gypsy."

Peters is best known as an actress and singer, but she has also earned recognition for her work on "Broadway Barks," a New York-based charity that finds homes for shelter animals, which she co-founded with her good friend Mary Tyler Moore. In 2008, Peters published a children's book, which included a companion CD of a lullaby written by the singer, with proceeds benefiting the charity. The book, also called "Broadway Barks," is now on the New York Times bestseller list.

Its success has led Peters to begin work on a sequel, due in the summer of 2010. While the first book details the adventures of Peters's 12-year-old mixed breed, Kramer, the sequel will focus on her other dog, Stella, a pit bull, also adopted from a New York City animal shelter.

Peters is quick to acknowledge what she sees as common misconceptions about pit bulls.

"When I found Stella, she was badly injured, and badly in need of love and attention. She was a pit bull, though, and I had to learn not to be afraid of them before I could take her home. It wasn't long, however, before I realized that they are wonderful, soulful dogs. The pit bull was the all-American dog of Victorian times. They were nanny dogs back then. If you leave them alone, they're just fine. There are vicious dogs in every breed, but Stella isn't one of them. She is very loving to people and to other dogs, too.

"Stella was upset when Kramer got his own song, so there will be a 'Stella's Song' to go along with her book, too," says Peters.

And hopefully patient, too, because while Peters completes work on her second book, Stella will have to accept that, for now anyway, Peters will perform just one song about a dog in her concerts.

"I never wrote a song before. And I never thought I would ever write a song, because I have so much respect for composers. But I was on a plane coming home from somewhere when the music and lyrics just came to me for this lullaby. I call it 'Kramer's Song,' and parents can either read the lyrics to their children after they read the book, or just put the CD on and I'll sing it for them.

"When I was first thinking about adding it to my show, I asked myself if I would be embarrassed to sing it in public. At first, I was nervous, but now I think it is just lovely."

Bernadette Peters will appear at Symphony Hall, 301 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston, on Saturday, April 4, at 8 p.m. For tickets and information, visit the Symphony Hall box office, or go online at either celebrityseries.org or bso.org., or call 617-482-6661.

On Sunday, April 5, at 2 p.m., Peters will be signing copies of "Broadway Barks" at Barnes & Noble, 98 Middlesex Parkway, Burlington.

A sweet take on 'Charity'

Cohasset Players production is upbeat and fun

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Charity Hope Valentine, the aptly if none-too-subtly named heroine of the musical "Sweet Charity," doesn't usually end up getting what she wants. Fans of the show fare a lot better than their favorite dance hall girl, however, with the sprightly Cohasset Dramatic Club production now at Cohasset Town Hall.

Director Lisa Pratt has assembled a terrific 19-member cast for a snappy take on the show, based on Federico Fellini's screenplay for "Nights of Cabria" and featuring music by Cy Coleman, lyrics by Dorothy Fields, and a book by Neil Simon. Its original Broadway production, with Tony Award-winning choreography by Bob Fosse and starring his legendary muse Gwen Verdon, opened in 1966. A 1969 feature film version starred Shirley MacLaine while a 1987 Broadway revival was top lined by Debbie Allen. When the show was revived again in 2005, it limped into New York after star Christina Applegate injured her ankle and pulled out of the pre-Broadway Boston run.

While professional productions of the show have not always worked, the music alone means there is plenty of great material to work with. Its familiar score is filled with catchy, memorable tunes by Coleman and Fields, including "Big Spender" and "If My Friends Could See Me Now." The book, while now somewhat dated, still boasts some first-rate Simon one-liners like the classic job description offered by a Fandango Ballroom veteran to a new recruit: "Who dances? We defend ourselves to music."

It is clear from the outset that Pratt has elicited the professionalism of all involved - from choreographer Tina Fabrizio and music director Mark G. Bono, to costume mistress Bernadette Crawford and the entire company of performers and musicians - to bring this swinging 60s show to vibrant life.

In the title role, Caroline Maus dances and sings with a blend of winning determination and convincing vulnerability. Charity's pursuit of romance as the right route to lead her out of a dead-end job as a dance hall hostess may seem like an antiquated approach in 2009, but it fits well with this show's frothy mix of jazzy, up-tempo music and naughty fun. Pratt creates the busy urban atmosphere of a city alive with all manner of life by keeping her actors almost always in motion and showing off an impressive array of colorful, period-perfect costumes. Sharon White and Ellen Spadorcia are sheer delights as the world-weary dance hall hostesses Helene and Nickie. The pair is not only great in the ensemble numbers, but their "There's Gotta Be Something Better Than This" is a highlight of this production.

Marc Harpin, who suggests Ted Bessell from TV's "That Girl," has some good moments as Oscar Lindquist, the eccentric suitor whose personality quirks get in the way of his romance with Charity. As the two-timing international film star who deposits Charity in his closet so he can romance another woman, Michael Nakashima displays not only good comic timing, but also a very fine voice.

As if they weren't busy enough with their primary responsibilities, Bono and Pratt have also designed a series of clever sets, which include everything from an elevator interior to a seat on a moving Ferris wheel. Choreographer Fabrizio does fine work, too, especially on "Rich Man's Frug" and "Rhythm of Life," where she puts her dancers through some Fosse-esque moves,

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is presenting "Sweet Charity" at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, through March 29. For tickets and information, call 617-697-2115. Tickets are also available at Buttonwood Books, Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Route 3A, Cohasset, and at Paperscapes in Cohasset Village.

Adrian Morris sponsors breast cancer benefit

It was standing room only at the fifth Annual Karen Petrillo Breast Cancer Event sponsored by Adrian Morris Lemon Lime Aveda Lifestyle Salon. The overflowing parking lot at the River Club was a sign that even at a time when money is tight and job security doesn't exist, people will still open up their hearts and their wallets when asked to do so for a valuable cause.

The highlight of the evening was an exciting fashion show featuring gorgeous clothes and generously presented by PORTS. This incredible night raised more than twice as much as last year....more than $50,000 for Learn Live Love Cancer Outreach Organization.

Sponsors of this event, such as major sponsor, Pastene, and the outpouring of support from so many local residents and businesses are what made this record fundraising possible.

This philanthropic spirit is a tribute to the legacy of the event's namesake, a dear friend of Adrian Morris, Karen Petrillo — who succumbed to cancer at age 47. Because of Morris and his unwavering dedication to keeping Petrillo's compassionate spirit alive, Learn Live Love has been able to donate thousands of dollars to local women dealing with cancer....truly something to celebrate!

Stephanie Chase sings "Learn Live Love" to the crowd while her husband Steve plays the guitar. Chase, a Scituate resident, wrote the song last year.

The event at the River Club raised more than $50,000 for the Learn Live Love Cancer Outreach Organization. Those attending included: Amy Webber, Rosemary and Jim Lonborg, Adrian Morris, and Pam Ahl, co-founder and director of Learn Live Love.

Water rate hike approved

Efficient town meeting concludes in 3-1/2 hours

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

As far as budget cuts, Pratt said 85 percent of the budget is dedicated to debt service and contracted services, both of which have little wiggle room.

As a mild spring day developed outside Cohasset High, approximately 200 voters inside the gymnasium made their collective voice heard on 19 articles at Town Meeting.

Setting the stage, Town Moderator Dan Evans said in his opening remarks that several citizens had mentioned they hoped to finish the town business by lunch – "it's an admirable goal." The meeting followed suit, clipping along at a steady and efficient pace for close to three and a half hours. The meeting adjourned shortly after 1p.m.

There was a delay in the start of the meeting, partly due to the gathering a 100-voter quorum and partly due to the Advisory Committee and Board of Selectmen discussing their position on an article and slight amendments to another. The meeting was brought to order around 9:40a.m.

Topping meeting discussion was a proposed water rate increase that will raise the quarterly bills of 80 percent of the homes on Cohasset water by about $60 per quarter.

Water users spoke up and wanted to know when they could expect another increase and why the increase was so high, especially in light of the economic times.

As Water Commission chairman Glenn Pratt explained, the primary driver for the rate increase is a sizeable jump — about

Community Center Nursery School hosts art show

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Children at this age are willing and capable of communicating their thoughts and feelings through art."
— Ann Madden, nursery school director

This past Sunday afternoon the South Shore Community Center's gymnasium was transformed into a verifiable art gallery. Crowds in the hundreds poured in to see the esteemed work of local artists. From classic self-portraits to contemporary sculpture, this art show had it.

The best part?

All the artists were under the age of five.

The South Shore Community Center Nursery School hosted its third annual Art Show this past weekend. Art projects the school's nine classes have been working on all year culminated with the display. The tradition that started three years ago has become a favorite among the teachers, parents and the students.

"We believe every child is an artist. Children at this age are willing and capable of communicating their thoughts and feelings through art," said nursery school director Ann Madden.

Using art as a learning tool, the students have explored different themes and learning units. In learning about patriotism, they created American flags. In a science exploration, they learned about turtles and created their very own. Another class did a unit on light and shadows and traced their outlines on the playground.

Each art project was multi-faceted and had several steps to it, said Madden.

At the art show, each student had three pieces on display. The nursery school has students age three to five.

"We had approximately 500 guests, including siblings, grandparents and friends of our young artists visit our gallery," said Madden. "We were thrilled to see our students proudly display their work."

Jacqui Vitello was as thrilled to see her son Peter's artwork, as he was to show it to her.

"Peter and all the children felt so special showing what they had done to their parents and family. They had so much pride in what they had accomplished," said Vitello.

Vitello, her husband, Peter and their nine-year-old daughter, Amanda, attended the art show. For Vitello, the highlight of the show was her son's portrait of himself as a baby in the exhibit "you must have been a beautiful baby."

Election Saturday

Low turnout expected

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

There has been little evidence around town that Cohasset's annual town election is this Saturday. The typical indicators of lawn signs, coffee hours and heated debate between candidates have been nearly non-existent.

The days of Cohasset's hotly contested and hard fought elections now seem like a distant memory.

But, come Saturday evening, the town will have a whole new crop of elected town officials.

Given the lack of contested elections, Town Clerk Marion Douglas is expecting an extremely low turnout at the polls.

"About 10 percent, if we're lucky," said Douglas. "I expect it to be very

Next Wednesday, the Planning Board aims to accept the final pieces of information from the applicant and any further comment from the public.

Which way the wind will blow when it comes to the Planning Board's decision on the Cohasset Heights wind turbine remains to be seen.

There will be at least one more public hearing on the controversial turbine project. The Planning Board continued the public hearing to this coming Wednesday, April 8 at 8p.m. and it could likely be the last session on the project.

On Monday night, the Planning Board heard over four hours of testimony from the applicant, CCI-Energy, its consulting engineers and various residents. The public hearing began at 7:30p.m. and continued to midnight.

The marathon meeting covered all aspects of the project from noise to shadow flicker to tower siting to financial benefit for the town. About 80 came out to the hearing, but many began to peter out after 10p.m.

Unlike the previous public hearing on the wind turbines, residents and other interested parties were allotted a significant amount of time to voice their concerns and ask questions.

Next Wednesday, the Planning Board aims to accept the final pieces of information from the applicant and any further comment from the public. The board has requested the applicant to submit a probability study on ice characterizing the associated risk of ice throw and other ice-related issues for a 100-meter turbine tower. The town's sound consultant is finalizing his review of the data and the applicant has yet to have the chance to respond to the town consultant's shadow flicker analysis.

Concerns about how the town will benefit from the project either through discounted energy or taxes were raised.

The applicant said the town would see about $78,000 in property taxes each year. And, if the town successfully negotiates with CCI-Energy to buy energy, they could see a budget savings between $79,000 and $158,000 per year.

Jim Sweeney, president of CCI-Energy, has said repeatedly at public hearings, and again Monday night, of his intention to provide power to the town and quite possibly supply all the town's energy needs.

"Our target is to negotiate to provide the most benefit to the town and still

Wendy Jo Mazer is the owner of one of Cohasset's newest shopping destination, Wendy's Closet (located at 103 Ripley Road, right across from the Post Office). Wendy's Closet offers such lines as Free People, Joe's Jeans, Brokedown, European Culture and many more.

Name: Wendy Jo Mazer.

Occupation: Boutique owner (Wendy's Closet).

Best day of your life: The day my son Sammy was born; he is so amazing.

Best vacation: I went on a South American cruise with my husband, father and mother in 2000. We had so much fun. Great food, great drinks and great company (oh yeah, and I was the ships reigning "Pictionary" champion...that's always fun).

Favorite season: Fall, hands down. I love everything about that season (especially the fall fashions...they are always the best of the year).

Favorite junk food: Cheese doodles and grape soda, an award-winning combo.

Best book: "Things My Girlfriend and I Have Argued About," by Mill Millington is absolutely the funniest book ever. I have read it probably 4-5 times, and it is still hilarious every time.

Best movie: "The Birdcage," I love Hank Azaria in this movie, especially when he is pretending to be Agador Spartacus.

Best TV show: Sadly, "American Idol." It's an addiction at this point.

Favorite song: "At Last," Etta James.

Fun fact about you: I'm turning 40 this year and I'm psyched about it. Most people dread getting older but I love it and, in fact, would never lie about my age. I might post signs all over town saying "Wendy's 40 Today...Wahoo!!!" (just kidding.)

Pet peeve: Complainers. I just don't get them.

Goal: To be a round and jolly grandmother that sneaks Hershey's Kisses to the grandkids when mom and dad aren't watching.

Person you'd most like to meet: Bear....(one day, Gina...one day!!!)

Biggest worry: No worries, life is good.

Best part of Cohasset: Being near my family. That and Atlantic Bagel's vegetable cream cheese...again, it's an addiction.

Truck hits branch, falls on car, breaks sunroof

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The operator of a 2001 Toyota had a nasty surprise when a tree branch fell on the roof, breaking the sunroof and denting the roof itself. The Scituate woman was behind a 1991 Mac Truck, operated by a Hull man, when the truck hit some overhead branches along Beechwood Street that crashed onto the roof of her car.

She was able to provide police with information about the truck, which they pulled over on Route 3A. The operator of the truck did not realize what had occurred, police said. The two motorists were able to exchange paperwork and the insurance companies will handle it from there.

The incident occurred at about 11 a.m. on Monday (March 23).

Red light

The caller, who complained last week about the traffic light at Sohier Street and Ripley Road, said the red light cycle is very long and cars were "blowing through" the red light in the early morning hours.

Police checked the light out and determined that the red light on the Sohier Street side is longer but not unusually so.

Chief Hussey said the lights were functioning properly and he urged motorists to have a little more patience.

Road rage

A motorist, who complained about a road rage incident that had occurred earlier that day, told police last week he would contact the Registry of Motor Vehicles to file a complaint.

The incident, which involved a man stopping his car in the middle of the road and yelling at the caller, took place about 5:45 a.m. but was reported at 7:36 p.m.

Police said if possible it is better to report such incidents immediately so they can try to observe the operation of the vehicle to see if there is alcohol or erratic driving involved. Alleged victims of road rage have the option of filing an official complaint with the RMV, police said.

OUI arrest

A Cohasset man is facing drunk driving charges following a traffic stop last Tuesday (March 24) at about 1:15 a.m. on Border Street. Police say the operator of a white Volvo was driving very slowly on Border Street near Summer Street. Police observed the car cross the centerline on two occasions and then go completely onto the wrong side of the road in the area of Atlantica. The car also pulled over and a man that was walking hopped in, police said. The Volvo attempted to pull into a parking spot near the Town Pier. The officer, who approached the car, could smell alcohol and observed two bottles of beer on the rear seat. Based on the officer's investigation and further observations, the operator who is 48 years old, was arrested and charged with OUI (second offense), marked lanes violation and not having a license in his possession. His passenger, a 46-year-old man also from Cohasset, was placed into protective custody. The car was towed.

Windows

Windows to a barn on Gannett Pasture Extension near the Scituate line were smashed. The homeowner returned from vacation and reported the incident, which is under investigation. The incident was reported at 9:35 a.m. on March 24.

The operator of the truck did not realize what had occurred, police said.

MV crashes

• At 3:39 p.m. on Tuesday (March 24), a 911 caller reported a three-car crash on Chief Justice Cushing Highway at the lights at Pond Street. Police said a 2003 Dodge, operated by a Cohasset man, was headed northbound and had stopped at the light. A 2007 Ford, operated by a Hingham woman, had stopped behind the Dodge. Then a 2004 Ford, operated by a Scituate man traveling in the same direction, hit the rear of the 2007 Ford and pushed the Ford into the Dodge.

Police said the Scituate man, who was cited for following too closely, said he had taken his eyes off the road briefly and then tried to apply his brakes.

There were no reported injuries at the scene. No cars were towed.

• At 5:11 p.m. on Tuesday (March 24) a 1997 Volvo, being operated by a Cohasset woman, had stopped on Route 3A to take a left onto Brewster Road when it was hit from behind by a 2006 Chrysler, operated by a Plymouth woman. Both vehicles were towed and the occupants of the Volvo were transported to the hospital with what appeared to be minor injuries, police said. The operator of the Chrysler was cited for following too closely.

• At 3:55 p.m., on Wednesday (March 25), a 1999 Mercedes, operated by a Marshfield man, was head south on Route 3A (near the 500 block). The traffic was slowing down and the 1988 Chevrolet traveling behind the Mercedes could not brake and hit the Mercedes; the Chevrolet then went into the opposite lane and hit a 2003 Ford, operated by a Cohasset woman, causing the Ford to go off the roadway into a tree, police said.

The operator of the Chevrolet, a Weymouth man, was cited for following too closely and for defective equipment.

Suspended license

An officer pulled over a motorist after seeing him fail to stop at the stop sign at Depot Court and South Main Street last Wednesday (March 25) at 12:34 p.m. A computer check revealed the 46-year-old Cohasset man was operating after license suspension and he was placed under arrest.

Found wallet

A good citizen turned in a wallet that he found while out running and police returned the wallet to its owner, a high school student who had recently moved to town from out of state, police said.

Leg grazed

A woman, who was crossing the street with her son after eating at Bernard's, was grazed on the leg by a beige Lincoln Town Car at about 8 p.m. on Friday (March 27). They reported the car, which was operated by a man in his 50s, made a left onto Sohier Street but could not provide a plate number. They told police it appeared to speed up as they were crossing the street and thought the incident may have been intentional because they were taking too long to cross the road. The woman did not wish to be examined by paramedics and was not seriously injured.

No trespass

A neighbor who found his neighbor inside his home talking to contractors contacted police on Saturday and plans to take out a no trespass order so the uninvited neighbor does not enter his home again unannounced, police said. Violators of no-trespass orders can be subject to arrest.

Intoxicated

Police drove a woman home after the manager at Stop & Shop reported that an intoxicated woman was inside the store on Saturday at 8:50 p.m. and said she did not have money to get home. Police took her home and made sure that she was OK, police said.

Suspended license

A 29-year-old Scituate man is being summonsed to court for operating with a suspended license following a traffic stop on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) after an officer saw that the plate had expired on the vehicle and pulled it over. The incident occurred at 12:06 p.m. on Sunday (March 22).

Shotgun shell

An empty shotgun shell that had been run over and was found in the high school parking lot was turned over to police recently. Police have no idea where it came from and no related incidents have been reported.

Slow pursuit

An elderly driver, who was so focused on the road ahead of her that she did not pull over for the police cruiser following her, was ultimately stopped in Scituate. The driver checked out fine, police said. The incident happened on Saturday (March 21) at about 1:29 a.m.

Cell calls

Police advised the alleged victim of harassing phone calls from a former employer to also report the incidents to Pembroke police where the number is coming from. The woman can take out a harassment complaint if the calls continue, police said.

No burning permits on Sunday

Due to air quality issues caused by outside burning, no "Burning Permits" will be issued the day of the Cohasset by the Sea Road Race and Fran Coffey Memorial Walk. Both of these events are being held on Sunday, April 5th.

The Cohasset Fire Department apologizes for any inconvenience that this may cause.

TOWN MEETING

Town Meeting wraps up in 3-1/2 hours

$525,000 — in additional debt service.

"(Debt service) is going to increase a little bit every year over next four years," said Pratt.

The debt service is due to water distribution and treatment plan improvements approved over the past decade. Roughly $34 million on spending for water system improvements have been approved by Town Meeting since the late nineties. The result has been roughly half the pipes in the system have been replaced with the funding.

"We are just about finished (with the improvements), but we still have to pay the bank back," said Pratt.

Adrienne MacCarthy of Doane Street wanted to know what were the commission projected for further rate increases in upcoming years and if they had any budget areas where they could cut back.

Pratt said numerous factors over the years from a portion of the Avalon project coming online to what finance rate the town is able to get to the wholesale of the town's excess water make it difficult, if not impossible to accurately predict future rate increases. As far as budget cuts, Pratt said the 85 percent of the budget is dedicated to debt service and contracted services, both of which have little wiggle room.

"We hear you, but we don't see where the quick reductions are," said Pratt.

Roger Gregory of Jerusalem Road asked what would happen if the increase was not approved by Town Meeting. Pratt said the enabling legislation for the water department enterprise fund requires the town-operating budget to cover a water department deficit, but eventually the water department would have to pay the town back. An enterprise fund means the department is self-funding through its users/rate payers. Both the sewer and water department are enterprise funds.

Susan Cope of Beechwood Street said the jump from a $37.85 per quarter fixed cost to $94.06 equaled a 45 percent increase in her water bill.

"It is a pretty significant cost for a single year…it's a large increase you are asking for us to pay in a time when our incomes are not going up," said Cope. "It would be helpful for us to know that in two years (the Water Commission) will not ask for another increase."

However, water commissioner Nathaniel Palmer said, "this is not a situation where we spent the money without authorization and then stuck (water users) with the bill."

Some speakers suggested the rise in rates be closer aligned with water use instead of a fixed cost.

"That way the burden is places on residents based on consumption," said Tom Gruber of Pratt Court. Palmer said the commission felt the rise in the fixed rate was more appropriate because it will provide a more significant portion toward the fixed costs in the budget.

Leanora Jenkins of Jerusalem Road said in her view the water rate increase was a "matter of fairness." In upcoming years, the water department plans to change all the water meters to one-inch size.

"You're asking everybody to assume financial responsibility for what everybody gets," said Jenkins.

When the article came to a vote, the water rate increase passed in a clear majority voice vote.

No troubles with the budget

Fiscal 2010 proposal passes unanimously

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With little fan fare or questions from the audience, the fiscal 2010 budget was approved by Town Meeting in a unanimous vote.

Town Manager Bill Griffin gave a short presentation with the aid of a Power Point presentation.

"It's no secret the local, state and federal governments are having a difficult time financially and we have done everything possible to recognize that," said Griffin. "This budget does its best to maintain level services."

The budget, which was recommended by the Board of Selectmen and the Advisory Committee, was built on conservative revenue projections and some cuts to town services.

State aid is projected to be $183,000, or 7.5 percent, less than the current fiscal year. Local receipts like motor vehicle excise tax and investment earnings are forecasted to be $167,000, or 4.8 percent, lower for fiscal 2010.

Griffin pointed out the town is still making strides toward financial sustainability by using less free cash to offset the operational budget. This year only $100,000 in free cash is used down from $250,000 in fiscal 2009.

The major town departments from DPW to police and fire to the library were, in sum, down 0.33 percent less from the previous year.

The School Department's budget came in with a 2.77 percent increase, which is $130,000 less than what the schools originally proposed.

The budget eliminates a police officer and a firefighter position (through attrition), reduces clerical hours at town hall, eliminates Sunday hours at the library, and reduces a variety of budgetary line items for contracted services, education, and other non-personnel expenses. Wage freezes for department heads were implemented as well.

The only question from the floor of Town Meeting came from Leonora Jenkins of Jerusalem Road, who wanted to know if the proposed budget included step and column raises as well as cost of living increases.

With the town side unions, including police and fire, Griffin said cost of living increases were included in the last ratified contract, however he approached the unions to propose freezing those increases in exchange for keeping staff positions and other cuts. The town is at an impasse with the police and fire unions and it is currently before a state review board. Step and column increases represent 0.5 percent of the total budget, said Griffin.

On the school side, School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn said step and column raises were included in the proposed budget, but not cost of living increases. The School Committee has yet to come to an agreement with the teachers union and other unions in the school department. The step and column increases represent 2 percent of the school's budget and affect half the teaching staff, said Flynn.

Town Meeting Briefs

Town officials honored

As is tradition, Town Meeting recognized a number of its exiting town board members and elected officials: two who have served six years on the Advisory Committee and two who have served on the School Committee. All four proclamations were received with standing applause and a unanimous vote.

- Vivien Bobo and Roger Hill were each recognized for their six years (two terms) of service to the Advisory Committee.
- School Committee member Steven Fusco was recognized for his service on the School Committee for the past three years.
- Rick Flynn was recognized for his nine years of service to the School Committee (three as chairman) and his six years of service on the Advisory Committee previous to his elected post.

Capital stabilization funded

Town Meeting voted to allocate approximately $348,000 – a combination of debt roll-off and unexpected balances from previous capital appropriations to the capital stabilization fund.

Capital budget Committee member Mark Baker gave a brief overview of what the committee had been working on over the past few years. Using Power Point slides, he said the Capital Budget Committee had conducted a town-wide capital inventory, completed a bylaw revision, established uniform regulations and planning protocols and established a capital funding mechanism with the capital stabilization fund approved by Town Meeting last year.

"The mechanism you have given us is in place and it's working," said Baker.

Both the Advisory Committee and Selectmen recommended approval of the article. Town Meeting took their advice and approved the allocation in a unanimous vote.

Supplemental appropriations

Acting swiftly, Town Meeting approved the appropriation of $219,000 from the free cash account to cover various fiscal 2009 line items facing deficits. There was little discussion on the article and it was approved unanimously. The line items varied from $75,000 for legal services to $5,000 for public works overtime.

Zoning map update will wait

The only article not to receive approval from Town Meeting was a minor appropriation - $7000 for an update of the town's zoning district map — in the grand scheme of things. The map was updated three years ago and does not include the village business zoning district and new parcels. Although the Planning Board and the Board of Selectmen recommended approval of the article, the Advisory Committee unanimously did not.

"We asked the Planning Board presenter how important this need was on a scale of 1 to 10, he answered 3," said Advisory Committee member Tucker Glavin. This admission seemed to sway voters.

With no discussion, a close vote (so close Town Moderator Dan Evans asked for it twice) left the motion defeated.

Another Planning Board article requesting a $7000 appropriation to update the subdivision rules and regulations was adopted by unanimous vote. The last time these regulations were updated was over 20 years ago.

TOWN MEETING

Cat Dam narrowly passes

81 to 77 vote in favor of $17K study

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cat Dam has been a controversial issue since the first time residents packed the Selectmen's office seeking advice and a resolution in the fall of 2007.

At that first meeting and subsequent meetings that resolution never came. Before the Selectmen had a chance to review or approve changes to the operational schedule of the tide gates, it was put into place for two weeks last spring.

The change set into motion an intervention by the Conservation Commission, who has jurisdiction over the town's water resources. The Conservation Commission is requiring the town to file an after the fact notice of intent, which necessitates the hiring of a professional engineer at a cost of approximately $17,000.

Judging from the speakers and the subsequent vote, Town Meeting was of two minds when it came to the allocation. Ultimately, the article was narrowly approved by a difference of four votes.

Cat Dam is a 50-year-old mechanism that limits the tidal flow of water in inner Little Harbor. It is located on Nichols Road. The structure is unique in town in that although it is town-owned it has historically been maintained by the surrounding neighborhood. With the funding for Cat Dam, the town will hire a professional engineer to study, analyze the environment and engineering issues and develop an operations and maintenance schedule for the tide gates.

In a vote taken Saturday morning shortly before Town Meeting got underway, the Board of Selectmen were split in their recommendation — 3 to 2 in favor of the article.

"At its core, this has nothing to do with Cat Dam, the Conservation Commission is asking the town government obey local, state and federal law…everything else is irrelevant," said Selectman Karen Quigley. "I urge you not to get caught up in the details, politics and emotions of the issue."

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer spoke in opposition of the article, "filing of the notice of intent is fine, but doing a study now while (the Little Harbor district is being sewered) is premature."

Much of the discussion came down to these two issues brought up by the Selectmen. Some thought the town should wait until the Little Harbor sewer project was complete in 2012 before doing any studies or making any changes to inner Little Harbor. Others said the town was legally responsible to complete the notice of intent and could face more expensive alternatives mandated by the state if it was not completed.

John Beck, chairman of the Sewer Commission, said the post-sewering Little Harbor would have different baseline data than what is currently available. The sewering of the area, coupled with $1 million in stormwater mitigations, is expected to greatly change the health of Little Harbor.

Jane Goedecke of Nichols Road asked if there was any difference in the way the Conservation Commission could deal with the town because there was no "intent" to harm the water body and the schedule was only changed for a short time and the error was corrected.

"Once (a notice of intent) is triggered, it has to be dealt with at that point…we can't give the town a mulligan on this one," said David Farrag, chairman of the Conservation Commission.

Marjorie Brown of Jerusalem Road said last spring wasn't the first time the schedule wasn't followed, "historically the schedule has been altered many times over the years…it was changed yearly at the whim of some of the neighbors."

After approximately an hour of discussion on the article, Town Moderator Dan Evans called for a voice vote. Initially, he announced the motion defeated, but quickly seven voters stood to request a hand count. The result was just the opposite — the article passed with 81 in favor and 77 opposed.

Voters support Senior Center

Safeguards in place to ensure financial viability

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Community Preservation Committee recommended spending $220,000 for complete engineering and professional design services for the senior center.

A new Senior Center, which was just a pie in the sky idea a few months ago, made significant strides toward becoming a reality. Town Meeting supported three articles concerning the land targeted for the building and $220,000 in Community Preservation funding.

Many Town Meeting attendees left following the vote on Cat Dam so a smaller group addressed the Senior Center articles.

The land articles passed with little discussion. The trio of articles gives the Board of Selectmen the authority to negotiate a land swap or other exchange with the Cohasset Swim Center. The land targeted for the future senior center is adjacent to the swim center's parking lot located off Sohier Street. With the passage of the three articles, the Board of Selectmen now has the authority to use a five-acre parcel of land to negotiate, to accept a gift (or purchase) of land from the Swim Center for the sole purpose of a building a senior center.

The Community Preservation Committee recommended spending $220,000 for a complete engineering and professional design services for the senior center. The funding will also address the inclusion of some type of affordable, age-restricted apartments. However, concerns were raised before town meeting and again on the floor of how the town will be able to fund the capital project (estimated at $2.2 million) and maintain the building in the future.

CPC chairman Stuart Ivimey said the money would be the "seed money" to help the project come to fruition. The CPC recommended allocating the money in two phases. Elder Affairs could use the $110,000 to complete the engineering needed to identify a permittable site. The second half of the allocation ($110,000) would be available contingent to the applicant provides a business plan for the senior center, an updated conceptual plan (including the affordable housing component) and evidence they have a permittable site near the Swim Center.

A second control was added in the form of an amendment on the floor of Town Meeting. The Social Service League of Cohasset would like to significantly contribute to the building of a senior center through the Willcutt Fund they oversee. However, the contribution they would like to give needs approval from the state Attorney General to assure the principal of the trust can be used in that way. Without the Social Service League's approximately $1 million contribution, the town would have a difficult if not impossible time funding the project. Accordingly, the amendment stipulates none of the $220,000 in community preservation money would be used until the Social Service League hears back from the Attorney General.

"The bottom line is if the Attorney General approves the project is eligible for the Social Service League grant, the project can move forward, if not the project will die there," said Ivimey.

Even with the Attorney General's approval of the grant, the Social Service League will require the town to show they have a permittable building site and a capital plan to raise the remaining cost of constructing the building before receiving the grant, said Social Service League president Marita Carpenter in a phone interview.

Additionally, Andrew Willard of Stockbridge Street was concerned with the long-term financial viability and maintenance of the building.

"In general, our town does a poor job of maintaining our buildings…adding yet another building is very dangerous," said Willard.

Jim Hamilton, chair of the Housing Trust, said his committee would work with Elder Affairs to develop the affordable housing units, "this project is a win-win, if all the pieces come together."

In what was likely the most convincing argument for the building of a senior center was the comments from Joanne Donnelly of 60 Elm St.

"I'm asking you to support this because I think we're (seniors) worth it," said Donnelly, adding the seniors who live here have worked in town, raised children in this town and helped make it what it is today. She said the home she and her husband purchased for $42,500 recently sold for over a million dollars.

"A vote today for us is for tomorrow for your children," said Donnelly.

The article passed by a majority vote.

$778,000 in capital purchases approved

Roughly $1.5 million in capital requests came before the Capital Budget Committee and the recommended about half of them be funding through the capital stabilization fund. Capital Budget Committee chairman Steve Gaumer walked Town Meeting through the major expenditures and needs of the town departments as well as how they planned on financing the purchases.

"We are making cash down payments on everything we don't pay for outright in cash," said Gaumer.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia spoke about his department's need for a new pumper truck to retire the 22-year-old truck they are currently using as a back up piece of equipment.

Martha Gjesteby of Old Pasture Road said she had no problems with the items, but was curious if using the stabilization fund money for the purchases freed up money for salary increases and personnel items.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the purchases would have no impact on the operational budget.

"We've tried to isolate capital items from the operational budget," said Griffin.

Leonora Jenkins of Jerusalem Road asked whether the recommended Town Hall IT (internet technology) upgrade would address the integration of the school and town's financial systems "as has been promised over the last decade."

Town finance director Mike Buckley said the IT master plan, also a recommended capital purchase, would look at both the town and school operations for technological efficiencies.

Town Meeting voters approved the capital improvement budget recommendations unanimously.

Easement acceptance

The final article on the town meeting agenda is in regard to an issue hotly debated at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting – Treat's Pond. This time around there was no money involved and the articles, which were the final piece of business taken up by Town Meeting, authorized the Selectmen to accept an easement from six property owners. The easement, which is still in negotiation, allows the town a legal access to Sandy Cove to service the Treat's Pond drainage pipe outfall.

The town currently has an easement for the pipe, but the right of way unused for many years is vegetated. A new easement, if the Board of Selectmen can reach an agreement with the property owners, would roughly follow an established path. The town typically cleans out the pipe 30 to35 times a year. Previously, the town used Lothrop Lane to access the beach and pipe, but residents there opposed the town's regular use of the private road.

With no discussion, Town Meeting unanimously approved the article.

Spring is all around us!

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE SMULLEN

It looks like spring is here or close by at least. Pussy willows are maturing, the birds are singing, and people tell me that little green things are peeking up from the damp earth.

We've been busy as usual at the Center. The vans were filled to transport people to the River Bay Club in Quincy. They had invited us to take part in their celebration of Fat Tuesday, otherwise known as Mardi Gras. Beads were handed out and we were entertained by musicians and a singer. Minda, Mary, and Tillie had a grand time out on the dance floor.

Patty White, Director of the Ombudsman Program at South Shore Elder Services, came to one of our luncheons and explained about the program for long-term care residents and talked to us about residents' rights.

Early in March a number of seniors were bussed to the South Shore Vocational School in Hanover and were treated to an excellent Sunday Luncheon prepared and served by the culinary arts students.

Marjie Murphy, retired librarian of the Deer Hill School, has spent some time with us. She just bounces with enthusiasm. In conjunction with "Cohasset Reads" she is putting together a Freedom Quilt. We were given muslin squares on which we could either draw a picture or write our thoughts on Freedom. These will be bordered and put together for the Quilt. Guests at the Sunrise Assisted Living Complex are also participating in the project.

By the time you read this, we will have celebrated St. Patricks's Day — more about this the next time.

Louse Smullen's column appears monthly in the Mariner.

Senior Center happenings

The following programs are being held at the Cohasset Elders Affairs, 3 North Main St. For information call 781-383-9112 or 781-383-9116.

Monday: April 6, noon to 2 p.m. – Reflexology/Chair Massage.

Wednesday: April 8, at 11 a.m. – "Deciding to Move' Presenters: Lynda Chuckran, community marketing director, at Welch Healthcare and Carol Taylor, marketing director, at Allerton House. Special lunch provided by Welch Healthcare. Donation: $2:50.

'Healing Field' planned for Memorial Day

The Sons of the American Legion is again planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2009 observances.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces. (Those who purchase flags will be able to pick them up after 10 days).

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

Cohasset mom takes marathon challenge

Running Boston for Nephrotic Syndrome

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Kim Spicer and Kathleen Broderick, right, have been friends since their children were in preschool together 7-8 years ago. Spicer is running her first marathon raising money for the Nephcure Foundation. You can make a donation at www.active.com/donate/kimspicer

Local mother Kim Spicer will participate in the Boston Marathon on Monday, April 20, in honor of Deer Hill fifth-grader Will Broderick, the son of Kathleen and Matt Broderick, and the NephCure Foundation. Will was diagnosed with the rare kidney disease called Nephrotic Syndrome when he was 18 months old.

The Brodericks put out a call to friends and family: Would someone be willing to run the 2009 Boston Marathon to help them raise funds to find a cure for their son's kidney disease, Nephrotic Syndrome?

Spicer answered that call. A mother of three and a friend of the Brodericks since their children attended the Carriage House Nursery School together, Spicer has been running for years. She has competed in the Cohasset and Duxbury Triathlons, but has never taken on a full marathon.

" I thought it was important to help bring awareness to Will's struggle with Nephrotic Syndrome and help raise money for the local chapter of the NephCure Foundation, the organization looking to cure Nephrotic Syndrome," she said.

Nephrotic Syndrome and FSGS are conditions that affect the tiny filtering units (glomeruli) in the kidney. The result is that protein needed by the body is discarded. Over time, these conditions can result in renal failure and the need for dialysis or a kidney transplant. The primary cause for most forms of Nephrotic Syndrome are not known and there is no cure.

Since Will's diagnosis, the Brodericks have met other families on the South Shore through NephCure and have begun a local chapter.

"Until recently there was no organization looking solely for the cure for NS and FSGS and patients and parents often did not know even one other family who had the disease, " said Kathleen Broderick. "Now there is finally a national organization called the NephCure Foundation who is committed to unlocking the mystery of what causes NS and FSGS and finding a cure."

Comprised of patients, their families and friends, researchers, physicians and other healthcare professionals, NephCure aims to help science unlock the biological mechanisms that cause these conditions and ultimately find a way to cure and prevent them. The Brodericks feel it's important to be able to identify others who have this disease, not only to raise funds for a cure, but also to offer support to others suffering these debilitating kidney diseases. "It's being framed as we speak," she said.

More than seeing her son's artwork, Vitello was impressed with all the work that had gone into the art show.

"It was obvious the hard work and love that is put into it to make it special for the kids. You walk in and you really feel like you're in an art gallery," Vitello said. "I was very impressed with all the talent; they really bring out the artist in these kids."

Mother Deb Bowen was grabbed by her five-year-old daughter Carly's hand and brought straight away to her art pieces the moment they walked in the door. "She had a great sense of accomplishment."

The Bowens attended the Art Show as a family, which includes Carly's older brother and sister, both alumnus of the Community Center Nursery School.

"The kids take it very seriously, they are so proud of the work they did. I think it's great," said Bowen. Carly has three works in the show each a different art medium: a painted self-portrait, fruit sculptures and a photograph. Bowen said for several of the projects the students made trips to the nearby South Shore Art Center and the Focus Gallery.

"I love that they reach out to the local art community," she said. "The school really takes an integrated view of art and community."

For the teachers and staff at the nursery school, art is a fundamental part of their teaching philosophy and the art show a fitting tribute.

"After working with preschoolers for years we know that children's art is a visible form of language…This really is the best thing we do. It a nice thing celebrate kids' art," Madden said.

Antique Appraisal Day to returns to Cohasset

Skinner, Inc. appraisers, including Stewart Whitehurst, are coming to Cohasset for the third annual Antique Appraisal Day from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Saturday, April 25. People can bring in their antiques to be appraised or for large pieces, several good photographs can be used by the appraiser. Be sure to include photos of any special markings, numbers or other details that may assist in the appraisal process.

The event is sponsored by the Friends of Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs and will take place at St Anthony's Parish Center, 10 Summer St., Cohasset. Appraisals are $12 per item, or $30 for three items. Excluded items include coins, stamps, jewelry and musical instruments. A maximum of three items per individual will be allowed. Snacks and refreshments will be available to enjoy while waiting to meet with the appraiser.

Proceeds will help the efforts to make the dream of a new senior center a reality in Cohasset.

For more information, call Cohasset Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112 or John Campbell, president of the Friends at 617-909-5687.

Lightkeepers elects Avery president

Richard J Avery was elected president of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation at its recent board meeting, succeeding R. Murray Campbell who served as president since 1996.

The nonprofit Lightkeepers Corporation was founded in 1991 by Joe McElroy and a group of Cohasset citizens to renovate and convert a former lighthouse keepers' residence into a community function hall. It accommodates about 250 functions each year.

Lobstering talk in Cohasset April 28

A talk by Dave Casoni, secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts Lobsterman's Association, will take place from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., on Tuesday, April 28, at the Lightkeepers' Residence, 15 Lighthouse Lane.

Homarus Americanus, the American lobster, is the most widely recognized seafood in the world. Times have changed since the Pilgrims harvested 20-pound-plus specimens from the beach for fertilizer. Today, it's a delicacy. The process of bringing the lobster to the table involves industry, science, managers, conservationists and consumers.

Casoni, a commercial lobsterman, will give an insider's view of the lobster industry, from techniques of harvesting a lobster to managing lobster stocks so they will be here in the future. Those attending the lecture will learn everything about lobstering but were too busy eating to ask. Sorry – lobster will not be served.

Organic gardening

On April 18 from 9 a.m. to noon at Holly Hill Farm on 236 Jerusalem Road, the Northeast Organic Farming Association/ Massachusetts Chapter (NOFA/Mass) is holding a workshop on how to start and maintain successful organic gardens. The event is part of the Massachusetts Organic Gardening Workshop Day, which is designed to meet the recent resurgence of energy and action for backyard and community gardening.

The Holly Hill Farm's managers, Hannah Hobbs and Ben Wolbach, will be teaching the workshop.

Overlapping footwear weather

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

This is the time of the year when all of the seniors are hearing back from their last schools.

Hello everybody, and welcome to April, the wettest month of the year. It's also that month that usually overlaps Ugg and flip-flop weather, making my wardrobe decisions more difficult than I need at 6:45 in the morning. The deceptively sunny-but-cold weather doesn't help either. In any case, it's been crazy up at CHS this week with all of the springtime hustle and bustle.

MCAS was this week for the sophomores. The great thing about MCAS is that it is an excuse to not have any homework all week. And of course there's the other added bonus of scholarship money if you happen to do well on it, but that's not really an issue for another few years. I will say this though, kids: do well in school! It pays off when you're a senior applying to college. Although homework is still not necessarily optional, it is easier to get away with, ahem, "forgetting" an assignment here and there. But you didn't hear that from me.

This is the time of the year when all of the seniors are hearing back from their last schools. But with all of the elation of getting into college, comes the stress of paying for it. And let me tell you, 40 or 50 grand a year is not my kind of pocket money. Thank the good heavens for scholarships. Those scholarships were due this week, meaning it was mass chaos in the guidance office. That is, until Mrs. Lewis got her iced coffee and everything went smoothly from there. What may come as somewhat of a relief to some is that the third term ends next Thursday. That being said, grief may also ensue due to midterms. However, after all the fourth quarter begins, we're really in the home stretch. And allow me to mention that I that after today, the seniors only have 30 days left of school! With that, I leave you all to a wonderful weekend! Vaarwel!

Lauren Mack is a senior at CHS; her column appears weekly during the school year.

2. South side of Cohasset beginning on south Main Street.

3. North side of Cohasset beginning on North Main Street.

All side roads and sidewalks will be done during main road sweeping. Any questions, call Cohasset DPW at 781-383-0273.

School budget falls short of needs

Committee looking at ways to cut back in FY10

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"It is starting to make me nervous, there are no more rabbits in the hat."

— Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh

They knew it wasn't going to be easy.

When the School Committee voted on a fiscal 2010 budget in early March they knew a 2.77 percent increase would not meet the demands of a level services budget.

On Wednesday night, the committee took the first step to reconciling their proposed budget and their Town Meeting approved budget. The two budgets are approximately $130,000 apart — and that's not including any cost of living increases for teachers, which is still in contract negotiation.

To add salt to the wound, the schools received word last week that they would not be receiving any federal stimulus money.

"It is starting to make me nervous, there are no more rabbits in the hat," said Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh as she and the School Committee looked at the most immediate budget beginning July 1 and future town budgets.

Town Meeting appropriated $14,713,000 for the school department, a 2.77 percent increase over the fiscal 2009 budget. The School Committee recommended this amount to town meeting, but knew it was not what the amount needed to run a level services school district. The needed budget put forth by the school department was $14,842,757 – a difference of about $129,757.

Walsh identified two line items where the money could be made up, but the School Committee will continue this discussion over the next few months to determine the best ways to cut back.

The first area will be teacher salaries – two teachers, one full-time and one-part time, will not be returning to the district following leave of absences. Those positions will not be filled and as a result class and schedules will be re-organized. The savings is $106,215.

The second area would be a re-organization of a portion of the professional development budget. Currently, there is a professional development budget for each school building, but now it will be wrapped in at the central office level. The savings is $23,542 and together the two adjustments bring the school's budget in line with the town meeting approved budget.

School Committee vice chairman Alfred Slanetz asked what impact the loss of these positions would have on the classroom.

"Obviously, we're committed to class size. We are looking to keep it in the 20 to 25 range," said Walsh. However, she said it is common in other school districts to offer science or social studies electives every other year, rather than every year. "We're going to be making some efficiencies at the high school level."

Slanetz suggested the school and the committee looks at other ways to make up the funds without affecting academics.

"That's something that cuts at the heart of what we're doing as an institution," said Slanetz. He offered finding some efficiency in combining health, physical education and athletic funding. "I'm very protective of what goes on in the classroom."

The School Committee will continue to grapple with the budget and where they can most appropriately cut services or find efficiency. There are also question marks at the state level as to the exact amount of state aid they will receive.

The biggest question mark of all is the teachers' union contract, which is up in June and currently in negotiation.

"Unless it's zero across the board, we're going to have to pay and it is going to be retroactive," said School Committee chairman Rick Flynn. A 1.5 to 2 percent cost of living increase is equal to approximately $200,000. Step and column raises are included in the budget, but not cost of living increases. Once a contract is reached, the schools will have to find the additional money somewhere.

"At some point we're going to come to an agreement and more realistically the shortfall is $329,000," said School Committee member Adrienne MacCarthy.

How the budget got here

The School Department originally proposed a budget of $14,833,172. That budget number included a lease plan to purchase two new school buses and a special education van for $70,415. Town Meeting approved buying those capital items through the capital stabilization fund, essentially freeing up that money in the school budget.

However, because the bulk of unemployment expenses come from the school department, the town moved that expense over to the school side. The schools have budgeted $80,000 for unemployment expenses, bringing the budget's total needs to $14,842,757. Town Meeting appropriated $14,713,000 for the school budget, a difference of $129,757.

Pilgrim Arena offers scholarships

Applications for ten $5,000 scholarships are available at the Pilgrim Skating Arena, 75 Recreation Park Drive in Hingham.

Interested seniors must pick up and sign for the application in person at the arena pro shop. Completed applications must be returned by Wednesday, April 15.

Applicants will be judged by members of the Scholarship Committee of the Board of Directors at Pilgrim Arena.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

In print and on-line

We are in the Internet Age.

Anecdotally, we know that to be the case now for sure. More and more often, octogenarians and even some nonagenarians climb the stairs to our office in Hingham Square and announce their goal is to become computer-literate.

The ways we can communicate through the Internet are always expanding. More and more people are on Facebook, there is also MySpace, LinkedIn, Twitter and more.

In addition to the paper, our website: www.wickedlocal-cohasset.com is another way that we can communicate with our readers.

Here at the Cohasset Mariner we stress the word another.

We are a strong paper with a huge print readership in town. We do not want that to change.

Therefore, our web presence is still evolving. We are making it more interactive with features that you could not find in print, such as Web Jams (a band competition), Local Voices (audio slideshows), blogs and polls with the ability to provide comments.

What we love about our paper is the depth and variety that we can provide with a steadiness that is not present on-line. If you do not have time to read the Mariner on Friday and it sticks around for a few days or event a week – all the stories, photos and features are right where they were when the paper arrived in your mailbox or at the news-stands. No ads "pop up" and the paper does not "freeze" or "crash" even if you spill coffee on it. Print also provides the venue for more in-depth reporting and feature stories.

The Internet is still like the Wild West, a bit untamed and always changing. It can be wonderful, fun, informative, overwhelming, frustrating, and even a little scary.

At the Cohasset Mariner we want to do both well. We want to maintain our print presence and have your visits to our web site also be part of your day and week.

The Cohasset Mariner debuted back in 1978. With 31 years under our belts – we feel we have been able to "match" our readers' needs in terms of what to deliver with a local paper. We feel the Mariner is a true reflection of the town. With that being said, we continue to seek ways to make the paper fresh and new each week.

Our on-line presence is only a few years old and will continue to grow and change rapidly.

We welcome your input on both fronts: in print and on-line!

Let us know what you think!

Take part

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. We promise to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Town Meeting attendance

TO THE EDITOR:

At Town Meeting Saturday, a member of a town board stated "it is a sacrifice to come to Town Meeting especially on a nice Saturday."

Doesn't he know that it is the duty of all voters to be there? The budget, projects, planning, zoning and other items properly, legally to be disposed of occur at the meeting.

The town functions as a whole and not just schools, water, sewer, planning. New voters especially, should understand the function of a town government.

Martha Gjesteby
Old Pasture Road

Stage set for Senior Center

TO THE EDITOR:

Town Meeting on Saturday overwhelmingly supported several articles which will bring a new Senior Center closer to reality. We are grateful to Joe Nedrow, the Council on Elder Affairs and the Friends of Elder Affairs for putting together a first class, innovative concept and an impressive presentation to the Meeting. We are indeed fortunate to have so many talented, dedicated, and resourceful volunteers working on behalf of Cohasset seniors to bring this project forward.

It is clear that the Community Preservation Fund will be critical to making this project work. The leveraging of money from this fund is a terrific strategy that brings tremendous benefits to Cohasset year after year. The Community Preservation Act, and the Cohasset committee established to administer it, have consistently made positive, visible impacts to the quality of life in Cohasset and they have our appreciation as well.

Over the years we have supported many projects that have benefited the children of Cohasset. We are pleased to endorse an endeavor that will benefit the growing and ever vital group of older residents and we look forward to the reality of this new facility.

COMMENTARY

LEE JENKINS

Two percent sounds like such a tiny, innocuous number but this salary increase calculates to $294,260 and represents 74 percent of the total increase of the school budget in these tough times.

In this era of financial meltdown I wondered what the impact would be on Cohasset's annual Town Meeting.

For the lead up to the vote on the Operating Budget, we heard a report of exactly how tight our financial situation is with revenues from taxpayers down, state aid cut. This has caused positions cut or eliminated on the town side among them losing a police officer and a firefighter through attrition, reducing clerical hours at Town Hall and having the Library closed on Sundays. Town department heads are having their salaries frozen and I hated to ask if this extends to the school.

With the talk of reductions in revenues, I expected to hear across the board salary freezes but had to ask whether or not COLA raises and/or step and column raises were included in this budget since we are in a new contract cycle with several unions. Some unions have gotten raises and others on the town side are in mediation. I inquired of the School Committee if their budget included just the steps and columns since they are also in contract negotiations with the teachers and haven't decided on a yearly increase as yet. Outgoing chair, Rick Flynn, said that staff were getting their annual steps and columns and when pressed he indicated that these increases account for only 2 percent of the school budget.

Two percent sounds like such a tiny, innocuous number but this salary increase calculates to $294,260 and represents 74 percent of the total increase of the school budget in these tough times. Can you imagine what this $294,260 could mean in the classroom if it wasn't going to 3.5 percent to 10 percent salary increases? While parents are faced with layoffs, salary freezes and/or salary cuts, the School Committee and administration is doling out raises, increasing fees and wringing their hands over what is not available for the students.

In Article 6, several items were included under the Capital Improvement Budget. Amongst those are IT upgrades for computers. I was curious if this plan finally included the integration of the School Business Manager's computer with our CFOs. This has been in the works for over a decade since the last superintendent severed the link and restoring it has been put off time and again by the school. A date certain was unable to be given at this time.

Also under this article we discovered that there is a ready market for our used fire engines in small Mid-West towns. They gladly take our second spare engine that doesn't have all the bells and whistles to conform to current standards. An example given was two point, as opposed to three point, seatbelts. Our new pumper will be equipped with more life saving equipment in the event it arrives on the scene before the ambulance.

The majority voted under Article 11 to increase water rates for the quarterly charge and the stand-by fire service. This will now have everyone across town paying the same standard rate for these set fees. The Water Department is in a program to phase out meters that are less than 1 inch and replace them town wide. Over Jerusalem Road look'n good.

Jerusalem Road – It's Open! As of last Friday, March 27th at 3 p.m., Jerusalem Road was officially opened to traffic. The many patient residents who were saddled with a very long detour route between the center of town and their homes can now use the newly constructed Jerusalem Road between Steep Rocks and Bow Street. By and large, the inconvenienced residents were very gracious about the one-way traffic that ultimately morphed into a two month period of "Road Closed." Thank you all for your patience and perseverance.

A few small tasks remain to be completed before the road will be deemed to be really completed. The pedestrian railing was completed this past Tuesday and some final paving is yet to be done in the walkway area.

Beach Street Closure – It seems like we open one road and another closes. Next Monday and Tuesday, April 6th and 7th, Beach Street will be closed during normal working hours to complete some work on a small section of gravity sewer in the area near Highland Avenue. Please be advised that for these two days only, you will need to detour around this area. This closure will not stop traffic from using Beach Street after construction working hours. From 5 p.m. until start of work at 7 a.m. Beach Street will be available for normal traffic.

Cohasset Rotary Road Race By-the-Sea – We mentioned this last week, but it bears repeating that the Cohasset Rotary's Road Race By-the-Sea 10 K run will be taking place on Sunday, April 5th. The road race will, as is the custom, will start on the Common promptly at 1 p.m.. If you have friends from out of town coming for the race, the Cohasset Rotary Club tells us that they have made special arrangements to use the Music Circus parking lot. Shuttle vans will be provided, but as you know it is only a five-minute walk to the South Shore Community Center which is the hub for the event. Keep in mind that all of the proceeds from the road race are used for the Rotary Club's charitable purposes.

Also, as a reminder, there will be a walk in honor of Fran Coffey starting at Sandy Beach at 10 a.m. Fran Coffey, a local resident who passed away at a rather early age, was very active in helping the Rotary Club with its past races. All of the proceeds from the walk go to two of Fran's favorite charities. Walkers can choose a long (10K) or a short (about 5K) walking course. So, not only will we have runners around town between 1 p.m. and 2:30 p.m., but walkers from 10 a.m. to about 12 p.m. Please be careful as you drive through town. Some roads will be closed temporarily as a result of the road race to provide a safe course for the runners. We ask your patience as the races progress.

One last thing, as we travel around town there are a lot of debris that have gathered alongside of the road beyond the normal; winter sand pile-ups. It would be great if each resident would just take a minute from your busy schedules to police the area immediately in front of your property so that the town looks a nice as it can for the influx of visitors expected for the race. The Rotary Club tells us that this race is on the pace to set an all time attendance record. Last year they had about 1200 runners register. This year they have 1300 registrants as of early this week. If you know any of the runners, please let them know that the roads are not in "perfect" shape this year due to the Little Harbor Water, Sewer, & Drainage project. The Little Harbor project team has been doing their best to patch the worst spots, but rough spots will still remain.

HEALTH NOTES

It's time to look on the bright side

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

It's time, I think to improve our spirits with some healthy exuberance. After all, it's been a long winter and after a spate of grey skies and even grayer news, we should try to let optimism (a healthy condition) make an appearance. Becoming selective about the news can engender optimism. Did you know that coffee, and more specifically caffeine, is a legal performance enhancer. New studies now show that caffeine mitigates the brain's sensation of exhaustion and also releases calcium stored in muscle providing greater endurance.

Even in little Cohasset optimism abounds: Normal conditions may soon return to our roads. Really: it's again possible to drive on a part of Jerusalem Road which has been closed for over a month, and a very smooth drive it is. If the rest of the Town soon becomes like the Jerusalem Road overlook near Steep Rocks, we'll once again have pleasant driving in Town.

Also, there's good news for elders; a hefty quarter of our population, if all goes well will finally get a senior center. Our youngsters are doing well in school, looking forward to graduating, many getting into the college of their choice. And how can anyone feel gloomy when one sees the flowers and shoots beginning to show themselves: birds making their appearance.

There is some evidence that the media isn't helping, believing that stressing negative elements of reports "sells papers" or gets viewership, concentrates on sensational and negative stories bringing a lack of balance to the reporting going on in our lives. A web page called the Happy News did a survey of the media coverage of basic news releases issued by various organizations and found that for releases having positive and negative information about a topic or product the media was likely to discuss the negative first and the positive to a lesser extent or not at all.

Also, there's good news for elders; a hefty quarter of our population, if all goes well will finally get a senior center.

Not to say that we should boycott news media, but perhaps we should be less credulous about it's content. Surprisingly, if one gives a conscious effort at feeling good rather than concentrating on negative aspects of a situation, the person's outlook will improve and they will feel better.

An English organization called Uncommon Knowledge tells us "an optimistic outlook will make you healthy, wealthy and more popular! Optimism is a neglected topic. Since the advent of positive thinking, it has taken a back seat in personal development and therapy circles. But optimism is easy to assimilate and learning how to do so buffers you against depression and anxiety and makes you more likely to succeed in your chosen pursuits."

The trouble with optimism is that it is seen as something unchangeable. People tend to see themselves as either "an optimist" or "a pessimist" leaving no room for anything in between. In reality, the degree of optimism changes in different situations. What's more, you can deliberately alter your outlook to increase your optimism. Doing so yields proven benefits:

One study of elderly people found:

- A positive perception of their own health would add longevity.
- The immune systems of optimists function better than those of pessimists
- Optimists have greater life expectancy than pessimists.
- People like optimists more than they do pessimists.

So, if the leftover winter blahs are getting to you, try cranking up your optimism, perhaps with a soupcon of enthusiasm. It takes a little practice, and it doesn't come all at once, but if you think optimistic and put a good light on things such as explaining to yourself the good part of taking out the trash or weeding the garden, you may still have to do it, but you'll feel better.

The votes are in!

Two weeks ago we asked our readers to weigh in on the proposal to bring a shuttle bus service to Cohasset. The shuttle bus would connect the commuter rail station with the business centers (Village, Stop & Shop, Shaw's) and major neighborhoods.

The question was "If a shuttle bus ran in Cohasset, would you use it? What would be the most compelling reason for you to take the shuttle bus?"

Voting on our shuttle bus poll has ended; here's how readers voted:

- I wouldn't use it; I would rather drive myself, 41 percent (44 votes).
- To get to the commuter train station, 39 percent (42 votes).
- To lower my carbon footprint, 14 percent (15 votes).
- To save money on gas, 4 percent (4 votes).
- To do grocery shopping, 2 percent (2 votes).
- To do errands, 1 percent (1 vote).

Low turnout expected in Saturday's election

slow; I don't think we'll get any surprises, but you never know."

Polls will be open on from 8a.m. to 6p.m. on Saturday, April 4 at the Town Hall Auditorium. Douglas expects to have the election results shortly after 6p.m.

In 2007, there were no contests for any of the open seats, but an 11th hour write-in campaign for School Committee changed all that. What was predicted as a sleepy election with an exceptionally low turn out brought in 24 percent of the voters. Before that, Cohasset voters have to go back to 1995 to find another Town Election with no contests by the time candidates. That year, turnout was 18 percent — some of which could have been attributed to a write-in campaign challenging the candidate running for reelection to the Board of Health.

In 1993, there was a sole race — for the Board of Library Trustees — and the turnout was a mere 11 percent.

Last year, a Sewer Commission race brought out 17 percent of registered voters.

While a last minute write-in campaign could still surface, Douglas is happy to report each open seat has a candidate to fill it.

In preparation for the slow day at the polls, Douglas has even cut back on the amount of poll workers. Saturday's election is likely to stand in stark contrast to the last election she oversaw in November when 85 percent of the registered voters turned up to vote for a new president.

"Definitely coming out to vote supports the people that are running and taking the time to serve the town," said Douglas.

Current Board of Selectmen chairman and candidate for re-election Ted Carr is more hopeful about voter turnout.

"I think we'll be pleasantly surprised," Carr said in a phone interview. He ventured to say about 20 to 25 percent of the voting population will turn up at the poll.

Despite the lack of a contest, Carr has been on the campaign trail, "I want people to know I take the job very seriously and I show up to work everyday."

He got a list of all the new registered voters over the past three years, either those who turned 18 or recently moved to town, and tried to meet with them. "It's a nice thing to do in a small town."

Friends have held several small parties where he got to meet and talk about town issues and hosted a pre-town meeting pancake breakfast at his home.

"Definitely coming out to vote supports the people that are running and taking the time to serve the town."

— Town Clerk Marion Douglas

Carr dug out approximately 100 of this lawn signs from his campaign three years and dropped them off at supporters' homes this past Saturday. Although this year's campaign stands in contrast to his election to the Board of Selectmen three years ago, Carr didn't want to take a second term for granted.

"I love to campaign, it's a great way to talk about the issues," said Carr.

Polls will be open from 8a.m. to 6p.m. at the Town Hall Auditorium.

Here are the candidates on the ballot:

- Board of Selectmen (one seat, three year position): Edwin "Ted" Carr, 88 South Main St.
- School Committee (two seats, three year positions): Paul Schubert, 155 Sohier St. and Helene Lieb of 18 Deep Run
- Planning Board (one seat, five year position): Jean Healey Dippold, 93 South Main St.
- Recreation Commission (one seat, five year position): Kathryn Lydon, 23 Forest Ave.
- Board of Health (one seat, three year position): Margaret Chapman, 25 Virginia Lane
- Board of Library Trustees (three seats, three year positions): Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St.; Patience Towle, 61 Highland Ave.; Roger Lowe, 100 Beach St.
- Board of Assessors (one seat, three year position): Michael Patrolia, 15 Cushing Road
- Sewer Commission (one seat, three year position): John Beck, 44 Nichols Road
- Water Commission (one seat, three year position): John McNabb, 53 Pond St.
- Housing Authority (one seat, five years): Nancy Barrett, 60 Elm St.

Town mulls over Avalon items

Sidewalks for Sohier and 3A on the table

Now, the town must decide whether to take the amenity or the money.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With a July construction start date in mind the Avalon Bay developers are trying to finalize their plans. It has been over five years since the apartment complex developers received approval from Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals.

Last week, Avalon vice president of development Scott Dale and Zoning Board of Appeals chairman Woody Chittick came to discuss some of the issues that require input from the Board of Selectmen.

When Avalon was issued a comprehensive permit it came with extensive conditions. Among the conditions was the construction of two sets of sidewalks, one along Route 3A and the other up Sohier Street.

"We knew there were some problems with those suggestions," said Chittick. Construction and permitting challenges topped the list.

As a result, the ZBA decision included a stipulation that the two sidewalks and other street improvements could be monetized. If a sidewalk on Sohier Street was not built, the town would get $100,000. If a sidewalk on Route 3A and a signal at Sohier Street did not happen, the town would received $250,000.

Now, the town must decide whether to take the amenity or the money.

In the interim years, Avalon attempted to get a permit for a light at Sohier Street, but Mass Highway denied the application. However, the sidewalks are still a possibility and Dale showed the Selectmen the two draft designs for both sidewalks.

"The permit contemplates a range of alternatives…we are here to get the will of the town, we are indifferent as to the result," said Dale. "We'd like to get something that benefits the town as well as us."

The Board of Selectmen perused the draft schematics of the sidewalk plans.

The Sohier Street sidewalk would be constructed on the Fair Oaks side of the street, but still faces issues with wetlands, steep grading and some private land taking. It would be Avalon's responsibility to permit and construct the sidewalks.

Not ready to make a decision, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer asked for a meeting to be set up for a walk through.

Dormitzer was also interested in how many school age children the 200-unit apartment complex was expecting. Dale did not answer directly, but said that half the units (100) would be two-bedroom where it would be more likely for kids to live. In a similar Avalon complex in Bedford with 140 units, but a higher mix of two-bedroom units, there were 20 school-age children.

"Is this worthwhile for Deer Hill and Osgood School?" asked Dormitzer. Dale said the distance and safety in crossing Route 3A would likely deter walkers. The Selectmen asked what the distance was between the Avalon complex and the schools. Dale did not know off the top of his head.

"At the end of the day I think you'll be pleasantly surprised" at the number of children entering the school district, said Dale. One of the primary concerns during the hearing process for the Avalon development was how the complex would add (and strain) the school system.

After reviewing the sidewalk schematics, the Selectmen felt unprepared to make a decision that night. They asked Chittick for his input.

"There was a sense in the town then (when the comprehensive permit was being contemplated) and a desire by the ZBA that the town apply the funds to amenities to that area…it is a desire, but not a requirement," said Chittick.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said one of the projects requested for that area in recent years was a sidewalk from Sanctuary Pond Road to King Street. A citizens' petition was submitted to Town Meeting on the project last year, but it was ultimately put off due to its $100,000 price tag and outstanding construction questions.

In conjunction with the Avalon project, there will be several upgrades to Route 3A. The road will be widened near the Avalon entrance (roughly across from Good Sport) to provide a formal left turn lane northbound.

The Avalon project was issued a comprehensive permit from the ZBA in November 2003 for 200 apartments. It was approved as a 40-B project. Under Chapter 40B, a state law, a town's zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

Twenty-five percent of the units, or 50, will be considered affordable. The state encourages rental housing, and because all 200 Avalon units would be rentals, all units — affordable and market rate — would be counted toward the town's affordable housing inventory. However, Cohasset currently has 76 units (or 2.8 percent) of affordable housing. The project will bring Cohasset within about 30 units to compliance with 40-B.

Planning Board inching closer to turbine decision make the project financiable," said Sweeney.

Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey had some concerns that the developer would cut a deal to sell energy to abutting properties before the town and then there would then be no excess energy, or not enough to power all the town's buildings.

"The town is always going to come first with the benefits, no matter what we're going to take care of town first," said Sweeney to assuage concern.

Shields Day of Fair Oaks Lane questioned the applicant's property tax number because, he said, there was no precedent in Massachusetts to tax turbines in the same way as commercial property buildings.

Complicating the matter is the regulations on how the state's Green Communities Act are still being developed by the Department of Public Utility. The regulations, which are expected by the end of June, could affect the conditions by which CCI-Energy can sell to the town.

"We don't know what the benefits for the town will be until we sit down with them. Until we get a permit the town won't sit down with us," said Gordon Dean of Palmer Capital of Cohasset, the financier of the project.

Planning Board chairman Al Moore explained many of these details would be stipulated in an order of conditions, if the project was approved.

"The project will be met with a lot of conditions, some that now appear to be up in the air," said Moore.

Vice chairman Charles Samuelson agreed, "there's no way this project is going forward without significant benefit to the town."

One of the primary concerns throughout the process has been the height and the siting of the turbines. The applicant has changed the locations of the turbines three times.

"The turbines are sited in a way that's high enough to capture wind. In Cohasset, that's fairly high up. And they have to be far enough apart to operate property," said Sumul Shah, president of Lumus Construction — he company handling the civil engineering and construction of the turbines. Sweeney added the site of the turbines have been changed to have the least amount of noise and flicker impact on abutters.

Ivimey's primary concern – and one he said would keep him from approving the project – was the proximity of the front turbine to Hingham Lumber. The turbine is sited in a location so if it ever toppled, a portion would hit the Hingham Lumber building located on Route 3A. Ivimey said a lower turbine possibly between 65 and 70 meters, would eliminate this possibility.

Sweeney said turbines typically come in 80 or 100-meter sizes. With the lowered height, output decreases exponentially – with 20 percent lower height there would be at least 20 percent lower output.

Ice shedding

The town's consulting civil engineer John Modzelewski reiterated his concerns about ice throw and ice shedding off of the turbines. Given the height, which places them higher than the Hull turbines, he would like to see a specialized study that quantified the risk.

"The problem we're running into with these towers…is they are rapidly evolving toward densely populated areas" without all the risks being know, said Modzelewski. In a conversation with Hull Light on their turbines they said icing was a problem for Hull II, the bigger of the two turbines.

The contractor for the turbine project described a three-tier safety system being put into place to lower the risk of ice falling from the blades. First, an anemometer that measures wind speed located on top of the turbine will freeze up if in cold conditions. When it freezes up, the turbine then registered no wind and shuts itself off. The turbine will also have a mechanism to detect blade imbalance and if it does it will shut down and ultrasonic ice detection technology.

Sumul Shah, president of Lumus Construction (the company overseeing the construction of the turbines), said the project is taking more precautions than other turbines in the New England area. A safety protocol will not allow the turbines to be remotely started after a shut down. Someone would have to visually inspect the turbines before re-start. In the event there are concerns about ice shedding a safety perimeter will be established.

Noise factor

One of the main concerns about the turbine project has to do with the noise the two towers will generate. One of the stipulations of the wind energy bylaw, which has essentially adopted established state regulations, is any new source of noise will not increase ambient noise levels by 10 decibels or more. In addition, the source cannot produce a pure tone, like fire engine sirens or the whistling of a steam from a vent.

Where the sound analysis stands currently is the project is in violation of the noise standards at the Avalon property line. Avalon has approved plans to build a 200-unit apartment complex on the land. However, the town's sound consultant Jim Barnes said the Department of Environmental Protection is typically fairly flexible with this regulation.

"They evaluate projects on a case by case basis…and are primarily looking to protect the neighbors," said Barnes. With a three decibel margin of error, the data shows the turbines would be violating the bylaw. "We're borderline, it could be above or below."

In his experience, Barnes said the DEP typically evaluates noise from the front door of a residence, not the property line.

Joseph Rosano, who is in the process of completing a new construction, mixed use building at the corner of King Street and CJC Highway, asked how the noise would affect his second floor tenants.

"Noise is subjective, people will hear it but I can't predict how people will react…the levels will be quite modest," said Barnes.

Voices from the meeting

"If DuPont invented invisible paint tonight, this whole issue would go away."
— Al Moore, Planning Board chairman, expanding on how central the concern of visual impacts is to residents.

"The size of these turbines does not seem to fall into the character of this little town."
— Pete Brown, Atlantic Ave.

"There's no way (this project) is going forward without significant benefit to the town."
— Charles Samuelson, Planning Board vice chair

"As far as the view, people either love them or hate them but the problem is we have a bylaw that says they can build them – and build them as high as 120-meters."
– Stuart Ivimey, Planning Board

"The signatures represents 112 streets and they were gathered with velocity over the last few weeks."
— Paul Ognibene, Beach Street, as he presented the board with a petition signed by nearly 1000 residents requesting the Planning Board deny the project.

"Obviously, we could always go lower, but there will be an impact on wind energy."
— Sumal Shah, Lumus Construction

Flynn and Fusco bid adieu

At their final meeting serving as members of the School Committee, Rick Flynn and Steve Fusco both expressed thanks to their fellow board members, school administration, teachers and for being given the chance to serve.

"Nine years goes by really quick, but I think we've gotten a lot done," said Flynn. Both Fusco and Flynn were given gifts to commemorate their time on the School Committee.

"It's been a lot of fun serving with both of you…I think we've worked very well over the past two years and the schools are a better place because of both of you," said vice chairman Alfred Slanetz.

Flynn is completing nine years on the School Committee, three years of which he served as chairman. Fusco is completing a three-year term. Both decided not to seek re-election to the board.

Field and building fees

After spending many months visiting and re-visiting the topic of building and field utilization fees, the School Committee voted on a final policy this past Wednesday.

Non-profit town youth sport groups, which are the primary users of the fields and building in off-school hours, will pay $10 per person per season. This charge is in line with a recreation field policy put into place earlier this year.

"We think it is a good decision, a fair decision," said School Committee chair Rick Flynn. For youth sports groups that use both recreation and school fields, recreation director Ted Carroll and school athletic director Ron Ford will get together to allocate the money appropriately. The youth sport groups will submit rosters to either the school or the recreation department.

Flynn said this policy was much simpler than the previously proposed hourly rates. Non-school, for-profit groups or one-time special events would still pay the hourly rates. Rehearsal or practice hours would be discounted 25 percent of the regular hourly rate.

The policy will be retroactive to fall 2008.

Lunch program turning a profit

The School Committee has been keeping close tabs on the school lunch program for the past two years. At the close of fiscal 2008, the lunch program showed a deficit of $40,000. Some adjustments were made for this school year to increase efficiency, improve menu offerings and increase student participations. Although some strides have been made, as a whole the school lunch program is more or less static.

In December, lunch program staffing was cut back which has helped the bottom line.

During the month of February, participation did increase at the elementary schools – 8.4 percent at Osgood and 3.5 percent at Deer Hill. Middle-High School participation numbers were relatively stagnant.

Overall, net profits were made both in January and February — $4,600 in January and $3200 in February. Recently, staff assignment were re-organized that resulted in a more efficient use of staff time, a reduction in salary costs and shorter wait times at the high school, according to a memo from school business manager Dave DeGennaro. All employees were moved to a 20-hour per week schedule.

"I am cautiously optimistic the lunch program account will have a positive balance as we close out this year, primarily because of reduction in staff hours. We do not however see any sizeable increase in participation," wrote DeGennaro in the memo.

As the schools look to the future, DeGennaro said more ways to reduce costs and increase revenue need to be considered.

The case for wind turbines

COMMENTARY

TOM CALLAHAN

The "character" of Cohasset is not a static thing. Cohasset today is very different from the Cohasset of 1890 as it was very different from the Cohasset of 1770.

This letter was addressed to Cohasset Planning Board.

Having attended the last two sessions of your public hearing on this project, and having read about the petition likely to be presented as part of your record tonight, I am gravely concerned that other than from the applicant, you are not hearing about any support for this project. I would thus like to express my strong support of the project for the record and suggest to you that many, many others in the community support it as well.

What has especially disturbed me is a) the tone of the opponents' rhetoric and implications of wrongdoing on behalf of your board and/or the Alternative Energy Committee; b) the hypocrisy of the preface often given that the opponents otherwise are in favor of wind power; and c) my belief that the signatures were gathered with a biased point of view and should not be construed as representing 800-plus staunch opponents of this project.

Of course, it goes without saying, as my first point, that the Wind Energy Bylaw was passed at Town Meeting, I believe without opposition. I am all too fully aware of the vetting process this and any other bylaw goes through and went through before Town Meeting. The possible locations of a windmill project were both limited and well known at the time. The height was easily determinable then as well. The board and the town thus made the decision to pass this, and if the application meets the requirements of the bylaw, as I understand it does, then I think there is no choice but for it to be approved. I also doubt that any of the opponents will have legal standing to challenge an approval.

With respect to the points of the petition:

1) Negative Impact on Property Values: With the possible exception of something like a toxic waste dump being built next door, in 24 years of real estate and permitting work and of constantly hearing this argument, I have yet to see it proven that any one development has a negative impact on specific parcels of property, especially when located a good distance away. This argument was also raised about the train. As I believe was pointed out at one hearing, impacts on property values, plus or minus, are affected by a variety of factors. In Cohasset, they can be affected by a) the wider real estate and credit markets; b) quality of town services and utilities; c) quality of schools; d) tax rates; e) ambiance; f) access to the ocean; g) availability or lack of modern sewage disposal; h) ease of commuting, and any number of other factors one can think of. I think it evident that in the not-to-distant-future, energy availability is going to be critical to real estate values in ways we have never conceived of before. And I would suggest that a factor one considers a negative may be a positive for someone else, such as the availability to a train for commuting or the beginnings of the creation of a renewable energy grid. To me, for one, I think Cohasset's progressiveness will prove to be a benefit and attractive quality for the town.

2) Threat to health and welfare due to noise and flicker: The bylaw created a set back from residential structures to address these concerns, following, I understand, state guidelines. Having stood many times directly under the Hull I turbine when in operation, I find the noise concern grossly overstated, especially at the distances of the nearest residences. I also find the flicker concern overstated as a "health threat" and if it is some 30-plus hours of flicker out of an entire year we are talking about, then I would suggest that is a de minimis impact.

3) Safety threat to nearby businesses: I note two things: one, I have not heard any opposition from Hingham Lumber. Two, is the suggested solution to this issue to be that you can't build turbines on either residential or commercial properties? Then what is left? The answer gets to the true, NIMBY-driven motivation – wind energy is fine, as long as it is not in Cohasset and is instead off in some rural, unpopulated area. Nonsense. We hear of Cape Wind being opposed for the opposite reason. All communities are going to have to contribute to meeting their energy needs.

4) "Unacceptable visual impact on the natural beauty of Cohasset": Beauty is in the eye of the beholder, and as you are well aware, it is legally questionable to make a decision on purely aesthetic grounds. I happen to think wind turbines are attractive, and the north end of 3A is not. Others may disagree. Are turbines any more unsightly than cell towers? We need those, too. Had we had such arguments a century ago, no transmission poles would ever have been built, and we'd still be reading by candlelight and communicating by carrier pigeon. Did not the visual intrusion of so many poles and lines impact the "natural beauty" of Cohasset as it existed in 1890? In point of fact, those poles, like the cell towers and turbines we have today, tend to blend in over time and go largely unnoticed.

The "character" of Cohasset is not a static thing. Cohasset today is very different from the Cohasset of 1890 as it was very different from the Cohasset of 1770. I myself have used the defense of the character of the town in promoting or supporting past bylaws. The argument definitely has its place. But I would argue that "character" is a much less tangible thing than physical landmarks, and that the character of a town need not be adversely affected by technological progress. The fact is that the world changes, and it is very much going to have to change with respect to energy usage. Until discovery of the "magic bullet" technology, we are all going to have to switch to new forms and new realities, just as Cohasset did at the transition to the Industrial Age. Our needs will not be met if every community screams "not-in-my-backyard" and expects energy needs to be met from some far away place.

One final point, as to the argument that the developer may have had a hand in the drafting of the bylaw. I don't know if that is true, but so what? This may surprise the opponents, but that is how a lot of change happens in communities all around us all the time. We have precedents for this in Cohasset. With proper vetting and oversight of the resulting bylaw, as has occurred here, the stereotypical evil some so cavalierly attribute to developers can be kept at bay. That this is a private project is also not grounds for objection. We live in a society still mostly driven by private capital. I am sure that if this were a town project, the opposition would be the same, and we'll see what happens if and when turbines are proposed for town-owned sites. This developer intends to do a deal with the town, and even if not, any and all introductions of renewable energy to the grid benefits us all.

I have no horse in this race other than as a citizen cognizant of the challenges our society faces and the need to take immediate steps to address them. I urge you to pass this application.

the last two years only 400 residents have been paying the higher fixed rates and this change will spread this cost of providing good water to everyone.

Unfortunately the Planning Board could not get the vote to spend $7,000 to update the Zoning District Maps. It was considered an outrageous expenditure.

One of the most debated articles concerned the proposed Notice of Intent and an accompanying $17,000 study for the operation and maintenance of Cat Dam. After decades of the dam schedule fluctuating intermittently, suddenly someone decided to "drop a dime" on the town for altering the water flows. Personally I was getting confused with opposing opinions from different town boards and even within members of the same board. One of the proponents had a handout with information that totally contradicted the Sewer Commission and the reason we are spending $13 million to create the Little Harbor Sewer District. Apparently abutters have been handling the situation all these years until a dispute arose. I totally lost track of how many studies are now in progress and actually how often the area is currently being monitored. But we do know for certain this area is under a state mandated plan to mitigate pollution from septic leakage and storm water runoff. The result was a close vote – initially the nay's won on voice but on a hand recount the tide was turned 81-77, resulting in spending $17K for another study of the area which is also being monitored by CSCR.

The Senior Center land swap and moneys from the CPC went through easily as expected and everything came to an early close at 1:30.

Good job to Dan Evans who kept everything civil and flowing in another business as usual day.

Sustainable South Shore to sponsor Earth Day festival

The sixth annual Earth Day Sustainable Living Festival, sponsored by Sustainable South Shore, a group of 18 South Shore towns, will take place Saturday, April 18, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., at the DCR Mary Jeanette Murray Bathhouse, 204 Nantasket Ave., Hull

Log onto the Web site, sustainablesouthshore.org, for a list of some of the renewable energy and sustainable living companies — geothermal, solar and wind; green technology; organic gardening and lawns, compost bins, rain barrels; electric and bio-fuel vehicles; nature organizations — that will be at the festival this year. There will also be an all-day kite festival, children's eco-activities, eco-adventure and sustainable transportation, and more.

There will be tours of the Hull Wind Turbine at Pemberton Point every 15 minutes from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

SUMMER CAMPS OFFER FACE-TIME, NOT FACEBOOK-TIME

Unplugged from the constant buzz of computers, television, video games, and cell phones, children find themselves at camp - making genuine connections with other children, rediscovering the fun in physical fitness, learning their own strengths, and finding their own voices.

The world today is completely technology-centric; and children frequently spend as much solitary time "plugged in" to various forms of technology per day as they spend in school. Summer camps offer a refreshing and unique break from that routine.

Camps foster the development of social skills.Campers learn how to engage in-person with peers and adults as they pursue fun and interesting activities and build skills. And research shows that what campers learn can be extremely useful back at school and even at home.

Kids connect with other kids throughout the camp day-during activities, between activities, after activities.

Campers also have many opportunities to interact with those role models and caring adults. It's this person to person opportunity for interaction that helps create "community" at camp, that gives kids the sense that camp is where they belong. Camp offers social networking at its best -- face to face!

Fran Coffey Walk has its own tradition

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Within the weekend of the Cohasset Rotary Road Race by the Sea 10K there is a hidden gem....hidden because it does not start on the very visible Cohasset Common. Located just a few miles away, in the parking lot at Sandy Beach is the start and finish of the 5th Annual Fran Coffey Memorial Fun Walk. It takes place this Sunday (race day) at 10 a.m. and all are welcome and encouraged to take part in this family event.

To understand the Walk, one must look at the history of the road race itself. Sharpless Jones, Fran Coffey and Roy Fitzsimmons founded the race in the 1970s. Running was less about "weekend warriors" and more about competition.

A huge rivalry existed between two local Cohasset businesses, The Good Sport and Cohasset Liquors. Each worked hard to recruit big name marathoners like Bill Rodgers and other top performers of the Greater Boston Track Club.

One of the runners, Andy Hailer had to stop running the race due to an injury, so one year he decided to walk the route instead. Andy, now store manager at Curtis Liquors, a race sponsor, walked again the next year, and was joined by five or six local residents who happened to be out for a Sunday stroll. By year three there were 100 people at the Walk's start line.

As it evolved, the Walk was given an early start of 10 a.m. and moved to the beach. It's a win/win for the Rotary and participants. It's a beautiful route and as with the race itself, all proceeds go to help others.

A few years ago the event was renamed in honor of the late Fran Coffey. His wife, Kit, was an original walker with Andy and is still involved with the event. Walk proceeds go to places close to heart of the Coffey family, including the Bishop Ruocco House in Lakeville, as well as "People in Need" at St. Patrick's church in Roxbury. Funds help those who face everyday challenges like paying the rent, registering a car or even funeral costs.

Registration:

- South Shore Community Center
- Saturday April 4 - 9am-12 pm
- Sunday April 5 – 9-9:30 am.
- 9:30 a.m. until race start at Sandy Beach.

Gather your family, friends, jogging strollers and head to the beach on Sunday and uncover the beauty of this terrific Sunday stroll. For details visit www.roadracebythesea.com

Cohasset to welcome 1500 runners this weekend

April is here and so is the 33rd running of the Cohasset Rotary Road Race by the Sea 10K this Sunday, April 5th. Close to 1500 participants are expected to register for the 10K race, and a sell out field is anticipated. Race begins at 1 p.m. on Sunday. For those who prefer to take their time, there's also the 5th Annual Fran Coffey Memorial Fun Walk on the same day. Walk begins at 10 a.m. and beautiful weather is predicted.

Registration and check in for all runners/walkers is at the South Shore Community Center: Saturday April 4 from 9am-12pm and Sunday April 5, from 9am-12 pm.

Race Parking will be available at the Music Circus and a free shuttle is provided to registration/number pick up at the Community Center. If you haven't registered yet, please do so on Saturday to ensure your spot and avoid the increased same-day registration fee on Sunday.

Visit www.roadracebythesea.com for details or e-mail questions to 2009@roadracebythesea.com. Organizers hope to see you out there as a runner, walker, volunteer, or much appreciated spectator along the route!

Junior Gardeners to meet April 13

Junior Gardeners will begin preparations for the Community Garden Club's flower show, "A Golden Retrospect," which will take place at Glastonbury Abbey next month. This will be a standard flower show to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the club.

The April meeting of the Junior Gardeners will focus on preparing juniors for participating in this show. There will be a special category for junior gardeners and all juniors are invited to submit entries in both the design class and the horticulture section. There is no limit to the number of juniors who can participate.

The preparatory program will take place from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m., on Monday, April 13, in the cafeteria of Deer Hill School. Titled "Designing for Show," the meeting is an opportunity for students to learn about the upcoming flower show, see the schedule, become familiar with flower show rules and get instruction about exhibiting in such a show.

Proud.

Dear Friends and Neighbors,

It's kind of hard to find too many things to get excited about these days. Everything's pretty tough both business-wise and personally for lots of folks. Of course, it would be nice if the media would quit pounding everyone over the head with negative news over and over again. It's becoming a self-fulfilling prophecy. But we felt pretty darn good the other day when, after announcing some pretty tough financial results for the end of the year, Ford still said it sees no need to ask for government loans.

Chief Executive Alan Mulally said, "Right now, I think with everything planned in the fiscal and monetary policy, I am very comfortable that we are going to start to turn things around through the second half of the year."

That doesn't mean they aren't using lines of credit, but they've done it the old fashioned way; they went out to banks and the financial markets and found financing while putting up collateral just like we would all have to do. Now that doesn't mean there aren't some good reasons to help GM and Chrysler, but we're pretty proud of Ford for fighting through this on their own.

With that being said, Ford is still putting out great vehicles. This spring, for example, we'll debut the all new 2010 41 mpg Ford Fusion Hybrid in our showroom. It will be the most fuel-efficient midsize sedan out there; with eight more miles per gallon in the city than Toyota Camry Hybrid.

We're proud that the 2009 Ford Escape Hybrid is the most fuel-efficient SUV on the planet. Ford offers fifteen car, truck and SUV choices that get 25 mpg or better.

We're proud to offer the new Built Ford Tough '09 F-150, the 2009 Motor Trend Truck of the year. It's smarter, more productive and tougher than ever with best-in-class towing and payload; more reasons why F-series are America's best-selling trucks for 32 straight years.

75 Years ★ As A Ford Franchise Dealer

And, just around the corner, is the new 2010 Mustang (designed by enthusiasts for enthusiasts). The Shelby GT 500 Cobra, now with 540 hp. and 510 lb.-ft. of torque, is more than enough horse to out run anything Camaro or Challenger will bring to the track. Mustang, an American legend for 45 continuous years, is now quicker, safer and more refined than ever!

Our vehicles are safe (more top safety-rated vehicles than any other manufacturer), high quality (now in a virtual tie with Toyota and Honda), good looking and fun to drive. In fact, Ford gained market share the last three months of 2008 and January of '09. Ford has said that, despite the economic challenges out there, they're not pulling back on the most important thing of all; product development. There are a lot of leading-edge cars, trucks, cross-overs and SUVs coming soon.

Cohasset falls 7-0

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset varsity baseball team put together some solid pitching and good at-bats on Tuesday, but couldn't get the big one in a 7-0 opening-day loss at Scituate, Tuesday afternoon.

Cohasset left the bases loaded in the first inning, and Scituate's Pat Collins unloaded a three-run bomb in a five-run fourth that put the game out of reach.

Still, Cohasset's first-year head baseball coach Pete Afanisiw likes what he's got.

Afanasiw has history with the team. He was a volunteer assistant the past few seasons and is also the school's head football coach.

"It's still early and we have a very young team," Afanasiw said. "We only have one starter returning and a lot of kids are in new positions. Today we got a good look at them. We had some quality at-bats and had some nice defensive plays and good pitching at times. What we didn't have were timely hits. I don't want to detract from their pitcher, but we had the bases loaded in the first and didn't score. We needed the big hit."

Cohasset Road Race a great tradition

POPPIN' OFF
WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Some traditions grow bigger and better with time, and that seems to be the case with one tradition right here in Cohasset.

For the first time in its history, one the will span 33 years on Sunday, the Cohasset Road Race by the Sea 10K is a sellout, with 1,500 runners ready to battle themselves, friends, family and the road.

I had a taste of the course this week and I can see how there can be some challenges.

Some of the hills are pretty good hills.

I will not take credit for running the hills or walking them.

No, I drove them. A couple of times while I was looking for a game over the weekend.

One wrong turn and I was on the course.

I didn't realize it at the time, but when I looked at a map of the run, I knew I was there.

For anyone taking on the run, it was described by race committee member Linda Fechter as a "Challenging course with undulating hills on Forest Ave."

She also said that by the ocean the wind can become a challenge.

"If you haven't trained, Forest is a challenge," she said. "The locals call it Roller Coaster Road. It goes directly toward the ocean. Sometimes if it's a windy day it can be tough. But if the wind is at your back it can help."

There is another tough one on Jerusalem Road.

"The grade at Jerusalem onto Forest is a good one," she said. "People say it feels like your knees are in your chin."

That spot, by the way, is between mile three and four and is the steepest grade.

You do get a break at the end, with a nice straightaway before the finish.

Fechter said the race is often used as a tuneup for the Boston Marathon, but is geared for anybody.

"People come a long way to run here," she said. "There are some really serious runners. This is one of the first races of the spring. That attracts a lot of people. I've seen kids come down in groups from colleges. Lots of people come out. I love this race."

Personally I love the fact that the start time is 1 p.m.

Through the years I've covered many races, and just about every time I've left the house mumbling about having to get up at 7 a.m. or earlier to get there.

As you can see I'm not a morning person, so I like the idea of an afternoon race.

As the numbers will show, runners must like it too.

It's also fun to hear about people running for the hot dogs after the race.

I can definitely get behind that too.

Now is the time for Cohasset boys tennis

Experienced squad poised for strong run this season

By Willlam Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Cohasset boys tennis coach Brian Hill is more than just a tennis coach for the Skippers.

He's a part of the team's past, present and future.

First there's the past.

Hill played No. 1 singles for Cohasset in 1971.

The present and future is his son, Robbie, a sophomore currently playing in the No.1 doubles position with partner Ivan Sceery.

Despite a pair of losses to open the season, to Hingham and Scituate, Hill is looking forward to a strong season.

There is good reason.

The team has plenty of experience, with three senior captains to lead the way.

In the No. 1 singles slot, senior captain Victor Hartmann is expected to be a key.

"Victor is our strongest player," Hill said. "He has hard hitting ground strokes. As a junior he was pretty good in the league."

Dan Brady fills the No. 2 singles slot.

"Dan Brady is very athletic and he's a competitor," Hill said. "He's new to tennis. He took up tennis after he was injured on the soccer field and was told he can't play contact sports again. He's a good athlete. He wins by grit."

Junior Mike Filbey handles the No. 3 singles.

"Mike is a very steady player," Hill said. "We also have Will Choi. He's a much improved sophomore who can play third singles and doubles. We will play more than one person in a spot."

With that in mind, Hill mentioned senior captain Luke Brewer who will play both singles and doubles, steady sophomore Travers Craven (second doubles) and Garret Canney (second doubles).

Looking forward, Hill feels potential for success.

"I think we have a good chance of doing well in the league," he said. "As good a chance as we've had in a few years."

Skippers skipper breaks down team

Coach Pete Afanasiw provides a detailed look at his 2009 squad

Seniors

John Sturino: CF: The only returning starter in the outfield, and he is one of the fastest players in the South Shore League. Has great range in the outfield. He has really worked on his mechanics to improve his throwing with very good results. At the plate he is an accomplished .300 hitter and a very big base stealing threat. He makes great contact and rarely strikes out.

Derek Schwantner: RF: Derek has the strongest arm out of the outfielders. He is extremely fast and plays with a great amount of intensity. This will be his first season of playing everyday at the varsity level. He is a tremendous competitor, and physically the strongest player on the team. At the plate we are hoping he will provide us with some power in the middle of our lineup. Derek is a base-stealing threat as well. He will be called on to pitch this year when needed.

Adam Berger: LF: Adam is a first year varsity player and has been impressive so far with his defensive play. He has a strong arm and covers a lot of ground. He has a very reliable glove. At the plate we are hoping he can use his seniority to solidify the middle of the lineup and provide us with a good RBI man.

Conor Ofsthun: 2B: Conor is also a first year varsity player. He plays solid defense, with a reliable glove and accurate arm. He is a great student of the game and a very hard worker and very coachable. Conor will be rotating at second base.

Juniors

Brendan Doonan: 3B/P: Brendan is the only returning starter from the infield. He was the team's leading hitter last year as a sophomore and a league all-star. He will hold down the number 3 spot in the lineup, providing us with power and RBIs. One of the fastest kids on the team, Brendan is a serious base-stealing threat. He will also be one of our top pitchers and relied upon heavily to win games.

Andy McKenna: 2B/C.: Andy is a very versatile athlete. He can play the infield as well as catch and will be called on to do both. So far he has been most impressive at the plate, where he will be called on to sure up the middle of the line up, make good contact and drive in runs.

Kevin O'Connell: 1B: Kevin is a first year varsity player who has been most impressive defensively with his sure hands. He has an accurate arm and a very good head for the game. He will hopefully be a major contributor offensively, as he adjusts to varsity pitching.

Dan Sullivan: OF: Dan is yet another first year varsity player, who will be the number one back up in the outfield for the 3 starting seniors. He is a tremendous teammate and has improved incredibly both offensively and defensively.

Sophomores

Jeff Cavanaro: IF/P: Jeff will be one of our top pitchers along with Doonan and Cobin, and when not on the mound he will be found at either 3B, SS or 1B. He has a very strong and accurate arm, and should be a lot of help to our lineup at the number 4 spot behind Doonan.

Anders Goetz: IF/P: Anders will be playing either SS or 2B depending on who is pitching, and he is more than suited to hold down either spot. He has a great glove, and very quick feet with nice range. He has a strong and accurate arm and swings a very aggressive bat. Anders will also be called on to pitch from time to time.

Drew Cobin: IF/P: Drew will be our third pitcher and will also rotate in the infield. He is a very versatile player who will find success as he acclimates to varsity baseball. He is a tireless worker, with a great attitude.

Thomas Condon: C: Thomas will be called on to be the day to day catcher. He is a good athlete and intense player. He calls a good game and works very hard to be a solid backstop. At the plate Thomas has been feeling more and more comfortable and has been hitting the ball well.

Baseball team taken deep in opener

Jeff Cavanaro got the start, going five innings. Derek Schwantner also pitched.

Cavanaro, Andy McKenna and Brendan Doonan all reached base three times.

Pitching looks like it could be a strength this season.

Along with Cavanaro, Doonan, Drew Cobin and Schwantner will all see time on the hill.

In the early part of the season, Afanasiw will be keeping tabs on pitch counts.

"We shut down Jeff after 80 pitches," Afanasiw said. "It's early in the season and with the cold weather arms are fragile. We don't want to burn them out."

Afanasiw said he was planning to hold Wednesday's starter Drew Cobin to about 80 pitches as well.

The first week was definitely a challenge with three games in a row, including a pair against Scituate.

Duxbury outguns Skipper stickers

Cohasset boys finish opening week 1-1

By Dick Trust
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

DUXBURY — A lot goes into winning five straight state championships and six out of seven. Coach Chris Sweet should know. He has been there for the phenomenal run of success realized by the Duxbury High School boys lacrosse team.

"It takes a lot of hard work and dedication on the part of the players," Sweet said. "It takes a lot of luck in terms of staying injury-free, and it takes some lucky bounces of the ball."

In addition to the obvious talent and skill of the athletes, Sweet said "it takes a commitment to be better every day in practice. We look at it as the season is three months long and if we get better every day, we have a good chance of being in another state title game."

Not only have the Green Dragons captured five consecutive Division 1 championships, they have won 94 straight games against Massachusetts public high schools, dating to the 2004 season.

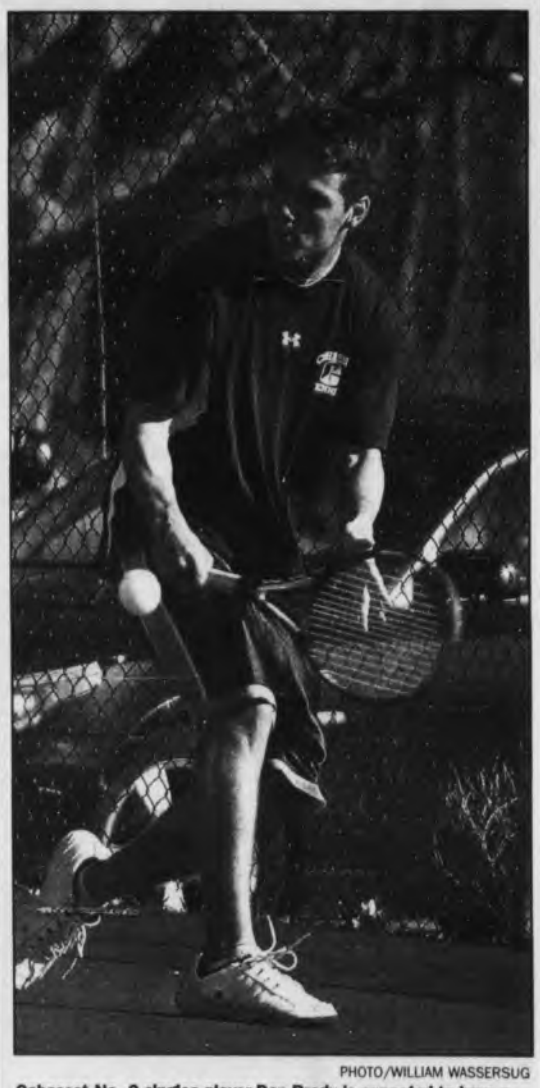
That includes Tuesday's 11-5, season-opening, non-league triumph over 2008 Div. 3 state finalist Cohasset. Senior Hakeem Lecky led Duxbury with four goals, senior tri-captain Jake Harvey had three goals and two assists, sophomore Kane Haffey scored three times and junior goalie Mickey Zaverucha made 10 saves.

Above all, Sweet assessed senior midfielder and tri-captain Quinn Cully as the Dragons' "best all-around player," who had one goal and two assists, "but also had at least a dozen ground balls today."

Did Sweet see anything that would lead him to believe that Duxbury would make it six consecutive state crowns when the 2009 season plays itself out?

"I don't see it yet, but I hope to," said Sweet, in his 11th season as Duxbury's head coach. "It was a good start. A lot of things have to go right to win a state championship. I saw a lot of good things and there were some things we need to work on.

"We'll do everything we can to make (another title) possible. There are no guarantees. A lot of teams are out there, doing their best to keep us from making it happen."



One of those teams is Cohasset, which came in with a 14-0, non-league rout of Hamilton-Wenham under its belt.

"We approached this game with a defensive plan against a very good, well-coached team," Cohasset coach Stu Curran said, "but in the first half (after which Duxbury led, 7-3), they scored two fluke goals – one went off our defenseman and in behind our goalie (junior Jack Murphy, 12 saves) and the other went off our goalie's stick and then off his foot and in.

"We worked hard, though, and we didn't quit. I have no regrets losing to a team like that. My hat's off to Duxbury. They showed why they've been defending champion so many times."

Duxbury never trailed and although Cohasset tied it at 2-2 in the first quarter, the Skippers couldn't come close to their opening-game output of 14 goals. However, junior Dean Driscoll had Cohasset's first three goals along with two assists, earning high marks from Curran. Junior Will Wise scored once and senior Owen Landon netted one goal and one assist.

Curran also had good words for senior Andrew DiPaolo, the coach remarking, "He was up and down the field all day. He worked hard."

Runners take to the street at the start line of last year's Cohasset Road Race by the Sea. The race has already sold out this year, with 1,500 runners ready to challenge the undulating hills on the way to a post-race hot dog.

If you plan on attending the race, as a runner or spectator, there is a satellite parking lot at the South Shore Music Circus with free shuttles from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Serious runners will be pleased to know that this year there will be timing mats at the start and finish lines.

This may seem like a small thing, but Fechter said it is a big change.

"In the past we haven't had start mats," she said. "So people would squish in at the start line. They don't have to do that anymore."

There are also going to be cash prizes for top male and female finishers.

That's another idea I can get behind, although odds are I wouldn't win anything even if I were driving.

Actually I did try that one time when I was covering an IronMan Triathlon in California.

That was one serious race.

I did the whole course, swim bike and run the day before the race.

It was exhausting, and I was in a boat for the swim and motorcycle for the rest.

Six Cohasset ballerinas will perform in "Peter and the Wolf," which will run for two shows only, on Saturday, April 11, at 3 and 6 pm., at Duxbury Performing Arts Center, 73 Alden Road. Tickets can be purchased online at www.bostonballet.org/school or at the door. (Left to Right Front Row: Isabel Buckley, Savannah Althuis, Kiley Crough Left to Right Back Row: Logan Breslow, Faith Porter, Sarah Gruber.)

Local dancers to light up the stage

Peforming in Boston Ballet School's 'Peter and the Wolf'

Six dancers from Cohasset, Logan Breslow, Faith Porter, Sarah Gruber, Kiley Crough, Isabel Buckley and Savannah Althuis, will perform in Boston Ballet School's production of "Peter and the Wolf" at Duxbury Performing Arts Center on April 11. These young ballerinas will join 40 other young dancers from the Boston Ballet School Norwell studio in performing Prokofiev's story of an adventurous boy who outwits the dangers he encounters beyond his garden gate. Boston Ballet soloist and Boston Ballet School Norwell principal Jared Redick and Boston Ballet corps de ballet dancer Boyko Dossev choreographed the ballet. Steve Shannon will narrate the story and the Boston Symphony Orchestra Quintet will perform the score.

Logan, the daughter of Cliff and Elaine Breslow, has been a student at Boston Ballet School for 13 years and presently attends the Advanced Flex ballet class three days a week. Her past roles have included a Doll, a Mouse and a Party Girl in Boston Ballet's production of "The Nutcracker" and a Page in "The Sleeping Beauty." In addition to dancing in "Peter and the Wolf," Logan has been honored to serve as the Student Ballet Mistress on this production. In this position, she has been responsible for rehearsing the younger dancers. Logan will dance the role of Cat at the evening performance.

Faith, the daughter of Jim and Sarah Porter, has been a student at Boston Ballet's Norwell studio for seven years and attends class five days a week in the Intermediate Intensive Program. In 2006, she performed in Boston Ballet's Balanchine production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" as a Bug. In 2007, she was cast as an alternate Reel Girl in Boston Ballet's "La Sylphide," and danced the role of Polichinelle in "The Nutcracker." In "Peter and the Wolf," Faith will dance the role of Bird at the evening performance. In addition, Faith and the nine other members of the studio's Performing Group will perform the garland dance from "The Sleeping Beauty."

Sarah, the daughter of Liz Gruber, has been a student at Boston Ballet's Norwell studio for eight years and attends class five days a week in the Intermediate Classical Program. Her past roles have included a Soldier and a Reindeer in Boston Ballet's "The Nutcracker." In "Peter and the Wolf," Sarah will dance the role of Hunter at both the matinee and evening performances. Sarah will also dance the garland dance from "The Sleeping Beauty" as a member of the Performing Group.

Kiley, the daughter of Kevin and Sandy Crough, has been a student at Boston Ballet's Norwell studio for three years and is in the Elementary Division. "Peter and the Wolf" is Kiley's first ballet performance. She will dance the role of Flower at both performances.

Isabel, the daughter of Peter and Emilia Buckley, also has been a student at Boston Ballet's Norwell studio for three years and is in the Elementary Division. "Peter and the Wolf" is Isabel's first ballet production and she will dance the role of Flower at both performances.

Savannah, the daughter of Arjen and Margot Althuis, was born in Holland and moved to Cohasset this year. She has danced since she was 3 and her first performance was with the Pivolte' Dans Spektakel in Antwerp, Belgium. She has just begun her training at Boston Ballet School where she is in the Elementary Division. Savannah will dance the role of Flower at both performances of "Peter and the Wolf."

All find time somehow for their other interests. When Logan, a junior at Cohasset High School, is not preparing for her Honors and Advanced Placement classes, she rows with Cohasset Maritime Institute and volunteers once a week, as she has since fifth grade, at the New England Wildlife Center. She also is on the Cohasset High School track team. Faith, a seventh-grader at the middle school, enjoys sailing and musical theater. She has appeared in the Cohasset Dramatic Club's productions of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dream Coat," "High School Musical" and "Grease." Sarah, a sixth-grader at the middle school, enjoys playing the piano, singing and cooking. Kiley, a third-grader at Deer Hill, plays soccer and tennis. Isabel, also in third grade at Deer Hill, enjoys soccer, lacrosse, tennis, singing and playing the guitar. Savannah, a second-grader at Joseph Osgood, speaks three languages and plays piano.

"Peter and the Wolf" will run for two shows only, on Saturday, April 11, at 3 and 6 pm., at Duxbury Performing Arts Center, 73 Alden Road. The performance time is one hour, making this an ideal ballet experience for even young children. Tickets begin at $10 for general admission seating. VIP seating is available for $25 and $50. Tickets can be purchased online at www.bostonballet.org/school or at the door.

Deer Hill faculty (walkers and runners) are going the extra mile Sunday to raise money for Camp Bournedale.

Deer Hill faculty goes that extra mile

Running, walking Sunday to support Camp Bournedale

In the midst of this coming Sunday's annual "Cohasset Road Race By The Sea", a small but mighty team of athletes, both walkers and runners, will take their place.

They are special to lots of Cohasset's Deer Hill School students because they are administrators, teachers, and education specialists united in doing something good for themselves, as they promote their own health and fitness, but they are also united in doing something for others.

Many of these teachers have "gone the extra mile" to solicit pledges for their 10K commitment in support of a very special Deer Hill program — the 6th Grade's Camp Bournedale, which students fundraise to pay for while they are in 5th grade at Deer Hill. Camp Bournedale has been a very special part of the Cohasset Education system's elementary school fabric for many years now. It is an environmental education program that takes the entire 6th grade class to an outdoor classroom at Camp Bournedale in Plymouth, for one week each September.

Ask any child who has passed through their 6th grade year, how they liked Camp Bournedale, and the response will be something to the effect of "It was the best week I've ever had."

The camp welcomes students from over 20 different towns in 4 different states to participate in their environmental classroom program in either the spring or fall of each school year. Class work takes on a different flavor for one week, focusing on everything from real-time testing and experiments in marine biology to using trees and the angles with which they meet their landscape to create mathematical equations. It is special. It is a once in a lifetime experience for many kids. And in this economic climate the expense to run this program is more than many can afford.

This year it costs $475 per child to participate for the entire week. Each family is responsible for fundraising or paying that amount for their child. So to help things along, the teachers are giving too.

So to give back, some of the teachers of Deer Hill School are walking and running for their kids, for Camp Bournedale. The pledges that the teachers have taken will be placed directly into the Deer Hill School Activities Fund, specifically earmarked for Camp Bournedale. Those donations, along with the monies collected so far through a recent Kinnealey Meats Fundraiser and individual families' payments toward their children's individual financial goals, will help this year's 5th grade class realize their dream of a week at camp. The class has a ways to go to raise the money for everyone to go to Camp Bournedale.

This year it costs $475 per child to participate for the entire week. Each family is responsible for fundraising or paying that amount for their child, so to help things along, the teachers are giving too.

And, so is the Town of Cohasset! When Jean Roche of the Cohasset Rotary Club, one of the major road race sponsors, heard from Dr. Jennifer deChiara, Deer Hill School Prinicipal, that some of the teachers wanted to solicit pledges in support of this great program, the Rotary Club thought it was such an awesome idea, that they have committed to matching up to $500 of pledges that the Deer Hill Teachers raise. So step out and enjoy a beautiful Sunday afternoon on April 5th starting at 1 p.m. on Cohasset Common, and look for Mr. Kayne Beaudry, Ms. Ann Berman, Ms. Alex Bluestein, Ms. Jen Clark, Ms. Kathy Brooks, Ms. Suzi Corkhum, Dr. Jennifer deChiara, Ms. Emily Gibbons, Ms. Jane Gregory, Ms. Valerie Haley, Ms. Kathy Jordan, Mr. Mike Lewis, Ms. Pam McNamara, Ms. Karen Murphy, Ms. Meg O'Hara, Ms. Erica Parrell, Ms. Katie Penwell, Ms. Jane Thomas and Ms. Jill Kelly, Cohasset 6th grade teacher from the Middle School, one of the teachers who will accompany the class to Camp Bournedale next fall.

You won't be able to miss them because thanks to Ms. Parrell, they have really cool blue t-shirts that say "Deer Hill Staff" on the front and "We Go The Extra Mile" on the back.

Art scholarships are available

South Shore Art Center offers five scholarships to graduating high school seniors who have been accepted to a school of fine arts or an accredited institution of higher learning. Applications and portfolios will be accepted April 25 through 29. Interested students should bring a portfolio of eight original works, no larger than 18 inches by 24 inches (no slides), including a self-portrait or portrait done from life, and a composition drawing or painting using representational subject matter in any media. Scholarships range from $200 to $1,000. Scholarships will be awarded at the opening of the 54th annual Arts Festival on Friday, June 19.

For more information, call South Shore Art Center at 781-383-2787 or visit the Web site at www.ssac.org/wdnew/comntypr.htm.

A taste of Italy's Lombardy region

Alison Arnett
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

FRANCIACORTA, ITALY — The day had been long, and the weather in Italy's Lombardy mountains chilly. After many adventures and many miles, my companions and I were weary.

As we sat around a cozy table at Azienda Aricola Al Rocol in Franciacorta, a creamy vegetable soup with farro sent a lovely warmth down to our toes, and a crackling fire illuminated the room. We wanted to stay the night.

Actually, we could have if our itinerary hadn't led us further into Lombardy. But I mentally booked this bucolic hideaway for my future travel plans.

Agritourismo — farms and wineries in rural regions of Italy that are open to paying guests — is all the rage in Lombardy and offers a reasonably priced option to city hotels. The family that owns Al Rocol makes sparkling wines, operates a small restaurant where the owner cooks and offers cooking classes and welcomes overnight visitors.

To American tourists, Italy often means Tuscany and Florence, Rome and Venice. Mention Lombardy, and you're likely to get blank stares.

But in this northern region, you'll find Milan, famed Lake Como plus five other lakes and handsome old cities such as Mantova and Bergamo. Like so much of Italy, the history goes back to Roman times and then veers wildly through the centuries with tales of shifting Italian politics, treachery and the rise of the trades.

Lombardy is also farm country. Cattle, pigs, wheat, rice and rows and rows of grapes dot the meadows and hillsides.

For budge-conscious travelers, the region is a fine alternative to more touristy areas, offering lower prices and the feeling of discovering a less-traveled area of Italy.

For our small group, which included food writers, this experience included lunching with a count. As we sampled golden risotto flecked with mushrooms at the home of Count Emanuele Medalago Albani, a distinguished-looking man with a courtly manner, he talked of weather, vines and soil like any farmer. His family has been making wine since 1524, he explained, in the hills above the ancient city of Bergamo. The vineyards encompass about 550 acres in Redona, up a winding road from Bergamo.

That morning, we'd roamed the narrow streets of Bergamo Alta, the old city high on a hill, where beautifully preserved Renaissance houses are still festooned with frescoes from when the city was a Venetian holding, and the chapels and Basilica of Santa Maria Maggiore display impressive artwork.

But the count's 16th century cellars — where sausages are hung to dry amid the oak barrels of wine — easily outdid the city. In fact, in this region, every other building seems to be a 16th century monastery or farm turned into a winery with rooms for rent in outbuildings (even the count offers stays at his place).

A trip up winding roads to Valtellina, high above Lake Como, the almost impossibly gorgeous resort area, led us another day to Triaca, a monastery-turned-winery near the Swiss border. Here the wines and the food are hearty.

We watched as a cook kneaded a stiff dough of buckwheat flour to make pizzoccheri, a specialty of the area. She layered the cooked thick noodles with Swiss chard and potatoes, and then sprinkled on plenty of grated Parmesan and a local white cheese called casera before finishing the dish with butter browned with sage. This was a creation for the mountains, a dish that could fortify a hiker or a skier; both activities are popular in these mountains.

Hearty food is a standard in much of Lombardy, in fact. As we traveled through other areas, sampling sparkling Franciacorta wines and sturdy merlots and cabernets, almost every meal began with platters of salumi (Italian for all sorts of sausages). We sampled cottechino (a pork sausage), prosciutto and lean bresaola (a delicious dried, lean beef). Each table included a massive round of Grana Padano, the region's answer to Parmesan. We learned to chip away at the surface of the cheese with blunt knifes to release golden shards, and to compare the different varieties of salumi.

In Mantova, one native explained, the cubes of fat in their sausages are smaller than in Cremona, which makes the sausage more delicate. Another town nearby might pride itself on a slightly different ratio of fat to pork.

These kinds of minute culinary distinctions make all the difference in Italy, a country so dedicated to its regional foods that a distance of six or seven miles can mark a distinct cuisine.

The pride in what is produced is encouraging.

At a cheesemaker, Dede' Alberto & C near Lodi, approximately 10,000 big wheels of Grana Padano, marked "Tipico Lodigiano" to signify the highest quality, rise to the ceiling in a cool room. The cheese is made from milk from the Dede' family's own cows, which feed on hay and grass from their land.

Three generations of the family are involved in the cheesemaking operation, watching over the long aging to produce its fine grain and delicate flavor. The cheesemakers, Alberto Dede and his son Ferrucio, carry on a tradition started in 1945 by grandfather Arturo, and the father and son beam with pride as visitors taste the pale golden cheese and gaze across a muddy yard to cows grazing in a field.

Of the many interesting sights in Lombardy — from a violin museum in the beautiful city of Cremona to the picturesque ruins of a Roman villa on a peninsula on Lago di Garda to the high-fashion shops of Milan — none seemed as close to the spirit of the region as glimpses of farm life.

At Azienda Agricola Al Rocol in the Franciacorta hills, the mother of the family, Daniela Vimercati, leads the kitchen and the cooking classes; daughter Francesca is the sommelier and leads wine tours; and son Gianluigi runs the business.

Settling into one of the agriturismo's 35 beds would give a visitor a base to explore Lombardy and venture farther to Venice, Verona or even Genoa. But waking up to the sound of the farm's roosters, strolling the surrounding hills, and dining on that wonderful vegetable soup brings one to the soul of Italy.

Foodie find in Mantova

There's nothing like seeing — or tasting — a place through the eyes of someone who loves it.

On a tour of Lombardy, we had a little free time in Mantova for shopping or basking in the sunshine. But Giovanna Cornelli, who had lived in the city for two decades and now resides in Boston (running a business giving advice for Italians visiting the U.S.), had other plans.

"Come with me," she said, as she led three of us through streets crowded with midday shoppers. It was quickly apparent that to Cornelli, nostalgia was closely linked to food.

A whirlwind ensued: Tasting exquisite torta elvezia (an almond cake) at the bakery, La Tur dal Sucar; and cottechino (pork sausage) and cherry mostarda (mustard) at Salumi Bacchi, a deli.

And then to Cornelli's favorite restaurant, Il Cigno Trattoria dei Martini, where we were met at the door by Gaetano Martini, the owner. His wife, Alessandra, poked her head out of the kitchen, her domain.

In a dining room filled with light and antiques, and after toasts with white sparkling wine and a taste of frothy red Lambrusco from the region — our meal started with pasta filled with beef — the tender agnoloni, floating in a clear, deeply-flavored meat broth.

Next was guinea hen stuffed with mushrooms and served with the region's most famous mostarda, apples preserved in mustard laced with honey. Pear torta and cake with cream and tiny cups of dark espresso finished the meal.

Sophisticated and subtle, rich yet restrained, this was a meal to remember. Now we, would join Cornelli in thinking of Mantova with fond nostalgia.

LOMBARDY

STAYING THERE: Agriturismos range from full farm stays to farms renovated into bed and breakfast lodgings. Lombardy also serves up more traditional hotels and resorts. Here are three options:

Azienda Agricola Al Rocol, in Franciacorta, is a working farm/winery. Prices are from about $51 for a single to $141 for a quadruple, per night, with breakfast. All rooms have private baths. www.alrocol.com

Villa San Pietro B&B (www.abedandbreakfastinitaly.com), in Monticchiari, is a fancifully decorated B&B not far from Lago di Garda, double rooms with breakfast, $118-$144. Each room is individually decorated; all have private baths.

Iseolago Hotel, on Lago d'Iseo, in the Francicorta area, is a modern resort with a spa, swimming pool and other recreational activities. Double, $182-$234, depending on season. Private baths, restaurant, bar. www.iseolagohotel.it

WHAT TO DO: Many of the wineries in Lombardy are open to visitors and for tastings. For listings of wineries, e-mail the Federazione delle Strade dei Vini e dei Sapori di Lombardia, strade-del-vino@ersaf.lombardia.it ; for Medolago Albani, visit www.medolagoalbani.it — Hiking, skiing, and other outdoor activities are plentiful in Lombardy. Check www.Buonal.ombardia.it or www.podilombardia.it for suggestions.

— In addition to better-known Milan and Lake Como, Mantova, Bergamo, Brescia, and Cremona are all cities with colorful histories, beautiful churches and restaurants. Check out the Roman ruins preserved in the Palazzo Te in Mantova, the violinmakers' shops in Cremona, the medieval Museo Santa Giula in Brescia and the old center of Bergamo.

— Seeing how Italy's wonderful food products are made is a special part of a trip. Many offer tours by appointment. Try Dede' Alberto & C, cheesemaking, (www.consorzioprodottilodigiani.com); Rivoltini torrone candy factory, Cremona, (www.rivoltini.com); Azienda Agricola Manestrini olive oil producer, Lago di Garda (www.manestrini.it).

Fun for the family at First Parish

Weather permitting; the nature program will invite participants outside to get some hands on experience with our beloved planet Earth.

Busy schedules, work obligations, and family commitments can make for a very hectic week! Families often feel torn between Sunday morning religious education classes and the multitude of other activities that interest youth and adults alike. First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset's Religious Education Committee acknowledges these difficulties and will offer a fun filled family alternative.

On Friday, April 10th, the Religious Education (RE) program will hold its monthly "TGIF Intergenerational RE program" to begin at 6 pm in Trueblood Hall located in the Parish House at 23 North Main St. A simple pasta dinner will be provided along with intergenerational prayer and music. Following dinner, Meg Connolly of The Trustees of Reservations and Jaimy George of Mass Audubon's Boston Nature Center will offer a nature program called Signs of Spring! Youngsters and their adult companions will use all five senses to clearly see and welcome the arrival of spring. Weather permitting; the nature program will invite participants outside to get some hands on experience with our beloved planet Earth.

Whether you are single or partnered, whether you have children or not – all are welcome to bring your busy week to a close and start off your weekend in an engaging way with a welcoming, spiritual community.

For more information, contact Jim FitzGerald, Interim Director of Religious Education at (781) 383-1100 or JFitzGerald@firstparishcohasset.org.

Annual Good Friday Walk April 10

For those wishing to make Easter a memorable and meaningful one, Kay Doherty of Sharing Inc. invites people of all ages and all faiths to join her in the Good Friday Walk on April 10. In its 37 years, the Hingham Walk alone has raised and given away more than $2,800,000. The miles returning walkers have completed range from 60 to 600 and counting. Many others have returned year after year to participate in the Good Friday Walk by providing transportation, refreshments or administering first aid to the walkers along the route.

It was in 1972, while living in Abington, that Doherty began to exercise her faith by walking on Good Friday to benefit a farm co-operative in Mound Bayou, Miss. Little did she know that a few years later, this walk would blossom into Sharing Inc., a nonprofit organization that oversees the Walk, and that thousands of people over time would join this different kind of "exercise club." These spirit-filled people continue to demonstrate their faith, earning funds by working or walking on Good Friday and making a difference in the lives of the underprivileged, especially in the lives of the children in the rural areas of Mississippi and west Alabama.

Walkers may begin anytime from 7 to 9 a.m. from the Plymouth River School, 200 High St., Hingham, off Route 228. The route winds for 20 miles from the school, through parts of Hingham and for several miles in Wampatuck State Park. Most walkers complete the 20-mile hike but walkers are not required to walk all 20 miles. All walkers however, are requested to obtain a minimum of $20 in pledges on their sponsor sheets.

Anyone wishing to participate in this year's walk may obtain sponsor sheets by contacting Doherty at Sharing, Inc., P.O. Box 850153, Braintree, MA 02185-0153 or calling 781-843-1676. Hingham residents may contact Donna Austin for sponsor sheets by calling 781-749-8778.

One might say that Doherty, now a 70-plus-year-old, has been walking and working for justice and equality more than half of her life. She currently lives in Braintree and works year round as the administrator of Sharing Inc., which remains focused on rural poverty especially in the southern states. The dues paid by Sharing members support the administrative costs of this work so that Sharing is able to give away more than 94 percent of the money raised on Good Friday. The majority of grants in recent years have been focused on the needs of children by supporting committed, caring groups who are making a difference in the children's lives. A scholarship fund has also been established for students from these rural areas.

OBITUARIES

Paul Carroll

Retired teacher, sports enthusiast

Paul Carroll, 75, of Scituate, formerly of Cohasset, died after a brief illness on March 30, 2009.

Son of the late Richard and Mary (Ryan), he was a U.S. Marine and served in the Korean War. Mr. Carroll completed his undergraduate work at Boston College, earned a master's degree from Bridgewater State College and advanced studies at Harvard University.

Mr. Carroll retired from the City of Somerville School System following 34 years of teaching. His primary teaching concentration was history. During the non-school periods he remained involved with numerous summer programs involving youth theater, sports and other recreational activities in and around the Boston area.

A reading zealot and true sports enthusiast, he had a particular passion for tennis. Following retirement, Mr. Carroll's fervor for tennis had him playing competitively throughout the New England area. He was a member of Cohasset Golf Club, Hingham Outdoor Tennis Club and the Weymouth Club. Until his recent illness, he was an assistant coach for the Cohasset High School boys' tennis team.

He leaves his wife of 53 years, Jeanne (Croke) Carroll; his children, Mark Carroll and his wife, Kathleen, of Kennesaw, Ga., Andrea Silvia of Scituate, Lauren Smart and her husband, Frank, of South Weymouth and Leslie Malerbi and her husband, Gregory, of Scituate; his grandchildren, Amelia and Dana Silvia, Colleen and Kathryn Carroll, Caroline Smart, and Haley, Tess and Thea Malerbi; and many nephews and nieces.

He was the brother of the late Richard Carroll, Marie Artley and Edward Carroll.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Arrangements by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset. Interment in Cudworth Veterans Cemetery, Scituate.

Memorial donations may be made to Scituate Town Library, 85 Branch St., Scituate, MA 02066.

James A. Kearney

Retired from GMAC

James A. Kearney, 83, of East Bridgewater, died March 23, 2009.

Born and raised in Brockton, he was the son of the late Gerald P. and Ruth (Gorman) Kearney. He attended Brockton schools and during World War II was a US Navy aviator. Mr. Kearney was a graduate of Harvard and was employed for 43 years with GMAC. Following his retirement, he had been a volunteer for 18 years at My Brother's Keeper and the Holy Cross Fathers' Retreat House at Stonehill College.

Mr. Kearney was a member of Thorny Lea Golf Club and an avid Boston sports fan.

He leaves his children, James A. Kearney Jr. of Saratoga, N.Y., and Sally Barber and Michael Kearney, both of Cohasset; three brothers, Thomas Kearney of Brockton, John Kearney of Halifax and Gerald Kearney of Eastpointe, Mich.; three sisters, Margaret Legge of Jacksonville, Fla., Ruth Farley of Simsbury, Conn., and Brenda MacGillivray of Halifax; 11 grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews.

He was the father of the late Mary Beth Barnes, brother of the late Mary Powers, and former husband of the late Helen Kearney.

A memorial Mass will be celebrated by the Rev. Joseph Callahan at 11:30 a.m., on Saturday, April 18, in the Chapel of Mary at Stonehill College, 320 Washington St., North Easton. Arrangements by Conley Funeral and Cremation Service.

Memorial donations may be made to My Brother's Keeper, P.O .Box 338, North Easton, MA 02356 or Holy Cross Retreat House, 490 Washington St., North Easton, MA 02356.

Gerald E. Basler

Former owner of Cohasset barber shop

Gerald E. "Jerry" Basler, 67, of Scituate, formerly of Sebring, Fla., and St. Petersburg, Fla., died March 24, 2009, after a lengthy illness.

The son of the late John Arthur and Eleanor J. (Gotreau) Basler, he was born and raised in Scituate. Mr. Basler owned and operated a barber shop in Cohasset, then moved to Florida for several years where he owned and operated Pilgrim Station Antique Mall in Sebring, Fla.

He was an avid sports fan, especially of the Red Sox.

He leaves his children, Jacqui Lyons-Hefferman of Whitinsville and Lois Budesheim of Etowah, N.C.; his siblings, Richie Basler of Fall River and Devon Sciara of Scituate; five grandchildren; one great-grandchild; one niece and many nephews; and his dogs, Baylee and Baxter.

He was the brother of the late Larry Basler.

Services, under the direction of Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home, Scituate, are private.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Life lessons learned from wise guys

Palminteri brings his 'Bronx Tale' to the stage

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Chazz Palminteri stars in "A Bronx Tale" at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston St., Boston, through Sunday.

Starting out in New York, actor Chazz Palminteri did a lot of theater. When he moved to Los Angeles, he landed guest shots on television shows like "Matlock" and "Hill Street Blues." A career-making part just didn't come his way, however, until Palminteri remembered something his father had told him and decided to use to his own life story to create the role of a lifetime.

"I was doing a lot of episodic television in L.A., but what I really wanted was to get into movies, except that the good roles just weren't there. I started to run out of money, so I took a job as a doorman. One night, there was this guy yelling outside the club where I was working. I tried to get him to knock it off and the owner came out and told me the loud man was Swifty Lazar, a big-time agent, and that I was fired. Depressed and distraught, I went home to my dumpy apartment and wondered what I was going to do next," recalled Palminteri last week by telephone from Milwaukee. "I picked up a card my father had given me that had these words written on it, 'The saddest thing in this world is wasted talent.'

"I realized then and there that if no one was going to give me a great part, then I would have to write one for myself. "

Born Calogero Lorenzo Palminteri in the Bronx on May 15, 1952, the son of a bus driver and a homemaker, the Sicilian-American Palminteri — whose film credits include "The Usual Suspects," "Bullets over Broadway," and "Analyze This" — had to look no further than his own childhood for his literary inspiration.

"The first thing I did was decide to write a one-man show that would get me noticed. Armed with five pads of legal-size paper, I remembered that when I was 9 years old I saw a guy kill another guy over a parking space. Once that came back to me, I knew I had my story," says Palminteri, who wrote the play "A Bronx Tale," and starred in it in Los Angeles, and then off-Broadway, 20 years ago. The show, with Palminteri once again playing all 18 characters, was revived on Broadway last season and is at Boston's Colonial Theatre this week on national tour.

The play is a lot funnier than the film. I wanted people outside New York to have a chance to see it, especially people with children who are maybe 12 or 13. Kids have to realize that life is like walking a tightrope."

Chazz Palminteri

"I've always been a storyteller, so writing a play came somewhat naturally to me. The story of the killing and relationships with the wise guys all came from my own experiences, but this is really more of a semi-autobiographical story than anything else. I'd say maybe 70 percent is what I actually went through, from the relationship with the African-American girl to my father being a bus driver and me getting involved with the wise guys. But I had to speed everything up. I wanted the boy in the center with the Mafia on one side and my father on the other."

It wasn't long before the show business movers and shakers who had previously looked past Palminteri were looking right at him.

"We got great reviews and suddenly everybody wanted 'A Bronx Tale.' It became the hottest property in Hollywood. It was very exciting, of course, when the offers started coming in, but most of them required me to hand over full control to someone else. I passed on all kinds of big money offers, because I didn't want to sell to any studio that wouldn't let me write the screenplay and play the gangster Sonny.

"Then the play was produced in New York and Robert DeNiro came to see it. DeNiro told me that he not only wanted to direct the movie, but he also wanted to play the father and have me play Sonny. DeNiro took my script and made it fly. I couldn't have had a better director. It was a no-brainer to sign the deal once DeNiro became involved. He really believed in me and that made all the difference in the world."

The feature film version of "A Bronx Tale" opened in September 1993 and marked the directorial debut of Robert DeNiro. It became a big hit with moviegoers, including one gentleman in New York for whom the story was more than a little familiar.

"My dad loved the play and he absolutely adored the movie. I mean, how would you feel if Robert DeNiro were playing you on the big screen? Before we shot the movie, DeNiro came to stay with my parents, and my father taught him how to drive a bus," says Palminteri, whose father passed away last year at age 89.

It may be set in the Bronx in the early 1960s, but Palminteri believes his story is universal.

"It is really about how the choices we make when we're young shape our lives. The amazing thing is that people 12 to 80 years old love this show. It really transcends any age categories. The play is also a lot funnier than the film. I decided to take this show on tour, because I wanted people outside New York to have a chance to see it, especially people with children who are maybe 12 or 13. Kids have to realize that life is like walking a tightrope. The choices you make when you're young will shape your life forever."

Chazz Palminteri stars in "A Bronx Tale" at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston St., Boston, through Sunday. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-982-2787, or go online at broadwayacrossamerica.com.

Resources available for adult learners

GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Applications to local colleges have increased, as have the number of people using state career centers, reflecting adults' interest in new degrees and new career skills amid a recession.

College and university officials said they are adjusting by offering new course schedules, such as accelerated degrees and more weekend classes at Middlesex Community College. The state Executive Office of Labor and Workforce Development is using money from the federal stimulus bill to ramp up the staffing at its career center.

"One trend that this recession is accelerating is the need to have a higher level of skill, credential or degree in order to be competitive in our job market," said Labor Secretary Suzanne M. Bump.

"We are advising virtually everybody who comes through the doors to find their way into a G.E.D. (English as a Second Language) program or a skills training program or degree-granting program. We had, going into this recession, a need to upgrade the education of our work force and that's becoming more crucial than ever," Bump said.

The trend is also emerging at the undergraduate level. A recent study by Maguire Associates, an education consulting firm, found more than one-third of prospective college students said they are likely to consider changing to a major that will be in higher demand or has a higher income potential.

Among the popular career options for adults returning to school are nursing, radiologic technology and diagnostic medical stenography in the health fields, and management and business, officials said.

"The economy is impacting people's choice about majors, schools and careers to which they're trying to aspire," said Lisa Johnson, associate vice chancellor of enrollment management at the University of Massachusetts-Boston.

Johnson said graduate applications were 16 percent higher last fall – and even more for undergraduates – though the campus has been planning to expand its student body and can accommodate the influx. She said the campus remains committed to serving people from urban areas.

In a similar development, MassBay Community College, with campuses in Wellesley, Framingham and Ashland, has 40 percent more students this spring who have transferred from four-year universities, compared to the spring 2008 semester.

Marilynn Gallagan, Middlesex Community College's dean of admissions, said the college is focusing on accommodating people returning to classes while still working part time.

The college is adding to its number of Saturday courses, introducing Sunday ones in the fall, and starting accelerated associate's degrees in business and early childhood education. The business degree finishes in 24 months, for example, by combining traditional, accelerated and online courses, she said.

Bump, the labor secretary, said the same concern weighs on her mind. She said her office uses the 16 work force boards and 37 career centers around the state to stay current on labor market trends.

The number of people using career centers has doubled in the past year, Bump said, mirroring a similar change in the number of people in Massachusetts who are collecting unemployment benefits.

Historical Society displays paintings circa 1940

In the 1930s and 1940s Cohasset was a changing place. The days of a small village of fishermen, a group of natives and part-time summer residents from the city were quickly becoming the thing of history books. People began choosing Cohasset as a place to live.

Margaret Wilkins Reed, an art teacher at the former Cohasset Country Day School, captured a slice of Cohasset's changing times by painting a great number of children's portraits.

Over the past year, Cohasset resident Mary Hartshorne has spent many hours researching and making phone calls to bring the portraits back to their point of origin. About 20 have been gathered from far and wide to make up a special exhibit at the Cohasset Historical Society.

"This will be the first time all the portraits will be in one place," said Hartshorne, the curator of the exhibit. The opening of the portrait gallery will be held on Sunday, April 19 from 3 to 5p.m. at the Cohasset Historical Society building (The Pratt Building) at 106 South Main St. "Our intent is to

Comcast contract renewed

Local cable access now in town's hands

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For another 10 years Cohasset residents will be able to get Comcast cable service at their homes.

The Board of Selectmen granted the cable company a non-exclusive cable license on Monday night.

But, not everything will stay the same. Comcast is pulling the plug on the TV studio located on Route 53 in Norwell. Comcast has owned and maintained a TV studio for the past two decades. Instead, the company is handing over control of local cable access to the municipality.

Off to see the world

CHS grad to help blind in Ghana

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When Emily Coggins travels to Ghana this summer she'll get the chance to see a part of the world she's never been — and she will help others see that part of the world too.

Coggins, a 2007 Cohasset High grad, has volunteered for Unite for Sight, an international organization dedicated to providing eye care to those in extreme poverty. She will be part of a team that restored sight to over 1,800 individuals in Ghana through surgery in 2008.

As a sophomore at Boston College, Coggins is in a premed program and aims to go to medical school and be a surgeon. Last summer while working at the Newton/Wellesley hospital, she talked to the head of surgery about what she could do during her college years to be better prepared for medical school. The advice was to go in to research or volunteer abroad.

POLICE ALERT

Scammers try to dupe grandparents

Cohasset Police are warning senior citizens to be aware of an emerging telephone scam that is preying on grandparents nationwide. Cohasset Police have recently received reports about grandparents across the South Shore who thought they were aiding their grandchildren by providing money for an emergency situation but were in fact giving thousands of dollars to Canadian con artists.

Police said apparently a senior citizen in Scituate fell victim to one of these scams and recently wired $2,500 to Canada from a supermarket in Cohasset.

Generally, the scam works like this: the grandparent receives a distressed phone call from who they believe is their grandchild. The supposed grandchild typically explains that they are traveling in Canada and have been arrested or involved in an auto accident and need the grandparent to wire money to post bail or pay for damages — usually amounting to a few thousand dollars. While many seniors have reported the scam without falling prey to it, unfortunately, many others have been victimized. One well-meaning grandmother sent $15,000 to scammers, thinking she was helping a grandchild who had been in an auto accident.

Generally, the scam works like this: the grandparent receives a distressed phone call from who they believe is their grandchild.

Law enforcement officials are not certain how perpetrators are obtaining phone numbers for so many senior citizens across the U.S. However, it is believed that scammers are most likely calling random numbers until they happen to reach a senior citizen. The scammers' basic tactic is to pose as a grandchild and let the unsuspecting grandparent fill in the blanks. For example, the scam caller might say, "It's me, your favorite grandchild," to which the grandparent will guess the name of the grandchild it sounds the most like, and then the call proceeds from there.

To protect themselves from this scam, and other scams that may use a distressed loved-one tactic, Cohasset Police are advising seniors to confirm the status of the individual by calling them directly or verifying the story with other family members before taking any further action.

Cohasset Police also advise that any request to wire money through Western Union or MoneyGram should be seen as a "red flag" and an immediate tip-off that the call may be part of a scam. Funds sent via wire transfer are hard to track once received by scammers and are usually not recoverable by law enforcement or banking officials.

For anyone victimized by this type of distressed loved-one call, Cohasset Police recommend reporting the incident immediately to your local police department and the state Attorney General's Office.

POLICE BEAT

Walkers warned to hide valuables

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A caller reported to police that while she was walking with a friend in Wheelwright Park someone smashed her passenger-side window and took her purse. Police urge motorists to put any valuables out of sight or in the trunk while they are away from their cars. Chief James Hussey said that most thieves are opportunists and work very quickly. If they see something in plain sight they might break the window and grab the item and be gone from the area within seconds. Thieves are looking for cash and credit cards or items, such as laptops, that can be sold quickly. The incident was reported at 2:18 p.m. on Tuesday (March 31).

Chief James Hussey said that most thieves are opportunists and work very quickly. If they see something in plain sight they might break the window and grab the item and be gone from the area within seconds.

ID theft

Cohasset Police fingerprinted a Cohasset resident last week after it was discovered that a man in another state had been arrested and had given police there the Cohasset man's name as his own. The fingerprints were sent to the out-of-state police department and should establish that the arrested individual is not the Cohasset resident, police said.

Hit & run

Police were unable to find what may have been a gray SUV that struck another vehicle in the parking lot of the Post Office last week and left the scene. The victim, who lives in Hull, came to the station to report the incident that occurred while she was inside the Post Office. A witness provided a partial plate but police were unable to match it to a vehicle.

The victim's 1999 Toyota Corolla had minor damage, police said. The incident occurred around noontime on Monday (March 30) and was reported about at 5:50 p.m. that day.

Credit cards

A customer found some credit cards in the parking lot and turned them into Shaw's that notified police about the lost cards. Police were able to find the person that lost the credit cards. The owner stated that she had dropped them by accident, police said.

Cell phone

A parent notified police on Wednesday (April 1) that her son's cell phone had been stolen at school the day before. The boy's father called the cell phone number and an electronics store in Boston picked up, police said. Police are following up to see how the cell phone ended up at the store. Chief Hussey explained that some electronics stores will take cell phones as a trade for another item.

MV accidents

- At 9:17 a.m. on Friday (April 3), an accident at CJC Highway and lower King Street was reported. Police said a 2002 Honda, operated by a Hull woman, had started to make a right onto Route 3A from lower King when she stopped suddenly because of a car that was approaching at a high rate of speed. The car behind hers on lower king, a 1999 Ford, driven by a Pembroke man, did not stop in time and struck the rear of the Honda. There were no apparent injuries and neither car had to be towed. The Pembroke man was cited for following too closely.
- At 10:26 a.m. on Saturday (April 4), an accident on Jerusalem Road was reported. Police said a 2000 Dodge, operated by a Scituate man, had turned around in a large driveway around the 700 block of Jerusalem Road, to change direction and pulled out in front of a rental Ryder truck, operated by a Danvers man. The truck was headed south. Both vehicles were towed and both operators complained of injuries and were transported to the hospital, police said.

Illegal dumping

Police are investigating incidents of illegal dumping in a dumpster at the Harborview Apartments behind the police station. Chief Hussey reminds residents that depositing debris or trash in a private dumpster is a criminal offense. Hussey said police would try to identify those responsible for illegal dumping.

Larceny

An employee at business off Route 3A reported that $200 in cash had been taken from her pocketbook last Friday while she was at work. She discovered the money was missing when she went to the bank to deposit the cash.

The incident is under investigation.

Dog bites dog

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy is following up on a report from a dog walker on Sunday (April 7) that another dog attacked her dog while she was walking in Wheelwright Park. The dog that launched the attack bit her dog.

The people with the other dog refused to identify themselves, the woman told police.

Compliance checks

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission Investigative and Enforcement Division in conjunction with the Cohasset Police Department will be conducting minimum-age purchase law compliance checks throughout 2009.

Local cable access now in town's hands

While it is a change, the town's Cable Advisory Committee is excited about the possibilities inherent in having a TV studio right in town and having more control over programming. Where to put the studio is still an outstanding question.

Every municipality can grant non-exclusive television licenses to cable providers. Until recent years, there has been little to no competition in the realm of cable television.

"That era has come to an end," said Town Counsel Robert Hillman. In addition to Comcast, the town has received a license application from Verizon. The town will be negotiating a contract with them in the coming months.

As a result of competition, cable TV providers are approaching local access television, dubbed public, educational and governmental access, differently. For a total of 25 years, Cohasset has utilized a television studio on Route 53 in Norwell (and before that a studio in North Scituate) to film local programming like the popular local talk show "Our Town." Local programming is viewed on channels 10 and 22.

In July Comcast plans to close its Norwell studio in leaving the town without the ability to produce local access programming. With Comcast moving out of the studio business, the town will take over that role — with funding help from Comcast and its cable subscribers.

Under the new contract, which will take effect on April 15, Comcast will provide the town with a one-time payment of $25,000 to purchase necessary equipment to keep the two local access channels live. After that the town will receive quarterly payments from the cable company to support local cable access.

"Prices (for equipment) have come down dramatically and it gives us the ability to do something pretty nice for a small amount of money."
— Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson

According to the Comcast contract, the franchise fee can be used for salaries, operating and other expenses related to public educational and governmental access programming operations, equipment and/or facilities.

"Prices (for equipment) have come down dramatically and it gives us the ability to do something pretty nice for a small amount of money," said Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson.

How oversight of the local cable channels and associated funding from the cable company will be handled is still up for discussion.

In many other towns, the cable licensing authority, which, in Cohasset, is the Board of Selectmen, appoints a non-profit public access corporation governed by an appointed board of directors. The group would have a specific charter to ensure the money was spent appropriately and the town accountant would keep financial records.

Selectman vice chair Karen Quigley had some concerns about an appointed non-profit corporation long-term.

"Right now we have fantastic people involved, but I always try to look to the future 10 or 15 years. We have to be sure every safeguard is in place," said Quigley. Hillman said there were several ways to approach managing the local cable access, but the model suggested is by far the most common. A draft of the charter will be brought to the Selectmen in the near future for review and discussion.

Pat Martin, a member of the Cable Advisory Committee, said the change in local cable access affords the town the opportunity to develop more community programming and involve a greater number of people in the process.

While the Town Hall was originally targeted as a prime location for the local television studio, the uncertainty surrounding the renovation and restoration has put that idea on hold, said Martin. For the near term, Martin envisions acquiring the basic video equipment and updating the equipment already in Town Hall and in the high school community room.

CHS graduate to help blind in Ghana

"I'm not much for sitting in a lab and not working with people," says Coggins, 20, so she began looking for opportunities to volunteer abroad. When she found a link for Unite for Sight, she was immediately drawn to it.

"It's going to confirm my goal of going to medical school and, of course, I'll be helping people."
— Emily Coggins

She was accepted as a volunteer and will travel to Tamale, Ghana for a month-long stay from June 25 to July 25.

The Unite For Sight volunteers, local ophthalmic nurses, and local optometrists, screen for eye disease and operable cataracts in remote rural villages that are located 1-3 hours from Tamale. The volunteers and others on the outreach team are transported by van to the villages in the morning, and then return to Tamale in the late afternoon. Patients in the villages receive an exam, diagnosis, eyeglasses, medication, and treatment.

"Being in the place of a doctor performing eye exams even before I go through all the (medical) schooling is going to be great," said Coggins. "It's going to confirm my goal of going to medical school and, of course, I'll be helping people."

Right now, Coggins in the midst of preparing for her visit. This week, she shadowed an eye doctor and has to complete reading hundreds of pages of manuals and other literature before her trip in June.

As part of her volunteer efforts, Coggins must also raise at least $1,500 in donations for Unite for Sight, but she has set a personal goal of raising $5,000. Every dollar she raises will go directly toward eye care and sight-restoring surgery for those in Ghana. She and her parents are paying for her travel and living expenses.

"Eighty percent of blindness is preventable," said Coggins. "All the money I raise will go directly for the eye care of the blind or going blind. Many of them haven't seen anything in years; then they have surgery and come out of it being able to see. It's a life changing thing."

According to the Unite for Sight website, blindness is commonly overlooked in comparison to more life-threatening diseases, because the importance is not always acknowledged. In Africa, the blind have a four times higher mortality rate.

During 2007, Unite For Sight coordinated and funded 1,594 sight-restoring surgeries in Ghana. In 2008, Unite For Sight sponsored 1,887 surgeries. Additionally, the eye clinic's staff prescribes more than 10,000 donated eyeglasses annually.

As a future doctor, Coggins is looking forward for the opportunity to watch the eye surgeon in action.

"I'm extremely excited for that part," said Coggins. Part of Unite for Sight's mission is to provide opportunities for volunteers to get a hands-on public health experience.

To donate to Unite for Sight and Emily Coggins, visit her fundraising page at http://www.uniteforsight.org/intl_volunteer/pages/index.php?name=Emily+Coggins or e-mail her at cogginse@bc.edu.

Eyeglass collection

As part of her role while in Ghana, Emily Coggins will be distributing hundreds of eyeglasses. She is gathering eyeglasses for patients in Africa who can't afford prescription glasses. If you have used glasses that you have been looking to get rid of but don't want to throw away, Coggins will bring them to Ghana with her to distribute to children and adults. The glasses can be reading glasses, (non-prescription) sunglasses and non-astigmatism distance glasses. Unite for Sight does not accept bifocals or glasses that have cylinder prescriptions. If the prescription is known, it would be helpful to have it labeled. Reading glasses and sunglasses are especially needed. Eyeglass cases are also welcome.

Eyeglass donations can be dropped off at Coggins' home at 57 Elm Street.

What is the importance of your eyeglass donation?

- Over 1 billion people in developing countries need eyeglasses but cannot afford them.
- Over 4 million pairs of eyeglasses are thrown away each year in North America.
- 25 percent of the global population needs eyeglasses.
- 50 percent of children in institutions for the blind in Africa would be able to read normal or large print if they had eyeglasses
- The price for glasses in many African countries can exceed three months' average salary.

BRIEFLY

Federal stimulus

There has been a general request for the town to narrow down a list of 19 infrastructure projects to its top three. On Monday night, selectmen Paul Carlson, Karen Quigley and Fred Koed discussed what the top projects were for them as individuals. Although no official consensus was reached because of the absence of two selectmen(Ted Carr and Ralph Dormitzer), the $6.7 million Town Hall restoration and renovation seemed to top the list for all the Selectmen present.

"You really get a lot of bang for the buck," said Selectman Fred Koed.

The project falls into the categories of infrastructure, historic preservation and energy efficiency. The town estimates the project will create 2,463 person days of work.

Other top projects included the Beechwood culvert (estimated at $1 million), boat launching ramp (estimated at $150,000), modification of the water treatment plant (estimated at $5 million) and various flood control items outlined in the flood control master plan.

"Can't we just have them all?" Quigley lamented.

Selectmen will re-visit the discussion with the full board at their next meeting.

Selectmen reorganize

One of the first orders of business post-election for the Board of Selectmen was to appoint a chair and vice-chair.

Selectman Fred Koed nominated Paul Carlson to assume the position of Chairman. No other nominations were put forth and Carlson was voted to act as chairman for the coming year. This is Carlson's first term as a selectmen; he served as vice-chair previously.

Carlson then nominated Karen Quigley for vice-chairman. The vote was 3-0.

Selectmen Ted Carr, who was re-elected to his second term Saturday, and Ralph Dormitzer were not present at the meeting.

Chapter 90 funds

Statewide $150 million is set aside for Chapter 90 local transportation aid funding for fiscal 2010. The town of Cohasset is set to receive $160,459 in Chapter 90. The allocation is about what the town would expect based upon the size of the total Chapter 90 pool for the state, said Town Manager Bill Griffin in an e-mail.

Antique car owners, vendors invited to join spring show

A spring antique car show and fair will be held Sunday, May 17, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., at Golden Living Center, 1 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) in Cohasset. Craft vendors and owners of antique cars are welcome to participate.

For information, call Bob Rego or MJ Wood at 781-383-9060. Space is limited.

SCHOOL BRIEFS

Buses go out to bid

The school department wasted no time in getting out bids for two new school buses and a special education van. Town Meeting appropriated money from the capital stabilization fund to pay for the items. Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh wants to be sure Cohasset has the buses by September for the start of the 2009-2010 school year.

Last day of school

The School Committee voted to make the last day of school Friday, June 19, 2009. This date includes two snow days.

September start

A late Labor Day holiday (Sept. 7) necessitated the School Committee to move the start of the 2009-2010 school year to before the long weekend. The first day for Cohasset schools will be Wednesday, Sept. 2. Schools will be open that Wednesday and Thursday (Sept. 3), but will be closed on Friday, Sept. 4 to allow for a four-day Labor Day weekend.

If there are no snow days, the last day of school in 2010 will be June 18, 2010.

HAPPY EASTER

Hello Cohasset! How is everyone doing as we head into our Easter Weekend for those who celebrate with family and friends? Although it won't be too warm from what they say, at least knowing that the Easter Bunny will be out and about hopping around lets us know that the warm is coming some day! We have many events and items to share this week in the column so...without further ado, here we go.

BOX OFFICE

Here is a bit of summertime news: The Music Circus box office will open for the season on Saturday, April 18th at noon for in-person sales. The box office celebration will feature a performance by The Dave Foley Band, an appearance by WROR as well as Boston Music Spotlight. The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will be on site featuring food from member restaurants, giveaways from Chamber businesses, and, weather permitting, a fashion show...plus lots of other surprises are in store! For concert updates and new shows added, visit the Music Circus web site at www.themusiccircus.org. Every seat is within 50 feet of the stage. No one seats you closer to the stars!

OUR WORLD

Are you looking for something fun-filled for your child or children to do for the week of April Vacation? Here are some choices that are sure to keep kids happy, safe and occupied in a variety of activities and themes. The Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum will be holding an Earth Day Week Program for ages 2 and up to age 9, Tuesday-Thursday with 3 time options or, a combination of days and times with Miss Jen, Miss Julie and friends. Each day will include art, music and movement, indoor and outdoor play along with some fun surprises and the times are from 9:30-11, 11-12:30 and/or 12:30-2. Please call 781-383-3198 or, 781-923-1473 or send an email to ourworldprograms@comcast.net for more information or to register your family. The cost per time session is $15 per non-member, $12 per member and children may attend one, two or three sessions per day.

ART ADVENTURES

The South Shore Art Center is offering April Adventures in Art, an art workshop for students in grades 1-4, which meets Tuesday through Friday, April 21-April 24 during the school vacation week. Students will explore many different art media including printmaking, clay sculpture, watercolor and much more! Class runs from 9:30-12:30 p.m. and includes a break for snack. April Adventures in Art is $145 for Art Center Members; $175 for non-members. Registration is also available for all Spring courses and workshops as well as summer Art Afternoons for students grades 1-4 and the Art Center's popular professional Visiting Artists Workshops. For a full description of courses and workshops and to register online, please visit www.ssac.org.

COMMUNITY CENTER

Another option to consider is to come join Ruthann, Mary B., Kathy and other staff members for a fun-filled day of gymnastics, sports, bowling, crafts, relay races, face painting, gymnastic demonstration and much, much more. The fun begins at 10 a.m. on Tuesday, April 21 and will run until 2 p.m. Please bring a peanut/shellfish-free lunch and a snack. The cost is $42 for members and $45 for non-members. Space is limited – Call the South Shore Community Center at 781-383-0088 or stop by the office to sign up. Don't miss the fun!

ROAD RACER

COURTESY PHOTO

Garrett Canney, 16 and a sophomore at CHS, came in second in his age group in the Road Race by the Sea on April 5th. For more about the race, see sports.

TOP SKIERS

COURTESY PHOTO

Catherine Gilman, Michaela Braun and Dan Axelson, (not pictured) qualified for the New Hampshire State Ski Championships held at Cranmore Mountain on March 14 &15. Each skier had to finish in the top of his or her division to qualify. All three skiers attend Cohasset Middle School. Good job!

FLIP-FLOP DRIVE

St. Anthony's 9th Grade Religious Education Flip Flop Drive is in full swing. The Hope Found Shattuck Shelter, Jamaica Plain, has indicated the need for flip-flops for the residents of the shelter. They need to wear them in the showers and around the residence. They have asked us to help fund their flip-flop supply, which is running very low. We are asking every resident of Cohasset to drop a pair of nice, new flip flops to St. Anthony's Parish Center by Wednesday, April 15th. There will be a drop box just inside the door of the parish center. The ninth graders will sort and deliver the flip-flops to the shelter as part of their Confirmation Preparation service hours. We thank you for your help and generosity.

MR. SKIPPER DVDS

DVD's of the 2009 Mr. Skipper Pagent are now available to purchase for $20 each. To order a DVD of the 2009 Mr. Skipper Pagent please call Shaun Galvin at 781-424-2197 or email your request to shaun_galvin@yahoo.com The request can also be mailed with a check for $20.00 per DVD to Shaun Galvin P.O. PANCAKES

This Sunday, April 12 from 8:00-9:00 am, you can come and attend an Easter Pancake Breakfast after a beautiful 7:30 am "Sonrise" service at Sandy Beach. This is a come one, come all celebration at the Second Congregational Church. All are welcome and the cost is $5 per person or, $15 per family. Please call the church office at 383-0345 if you'd like to attend.

WELLSPRING ROCKS!

This sounds like a super event being held to support a great center. On Friday night, April 17th, the C-Note, on Nantasket Beach will be rockin' for Wellspring Multi-Service Center! A season-opener featuring The Gratefuls will have the crowds on their feet and dancing, dancing, dancing! Great music and the chance to party for a cause– Wellspring's educational programs and services. Admission to Rockin' for Wellspring is $15. and the doors open at 8:00 p.m. Tickets available at the door or may be purchased in advance by contactingwww.wellspringhull.org or 781-925-3211.

That is all for this week. Send in all of your news and information about upcoming events no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Helping women to help themselves

AAUW CORNER

GWEN SAYIAN

So why is it important, you may wonder, to deal with loss in a healing manner?

One of AAUW's (American Association of University Women) goals is to encourage lifelong learning. In the 2008-2009 season, the Hingham Area Branch of AAUW has hosted programs ranging from education reform in Massachusetts to discovering your inner passion.

This month's program, slated for April 14, at 7 p.m. at the Hingham Public Library, is "Empowering Woman through Life Crisis," lead by Lynne O'Brien of Cohasset. Lynne, who has a Master's Degree in counseling and is an AAUW member, has worked in school settings and has been a realtor for the last five years. Recently I spoke with Lynne about her interest in the human experience of loss. She explained, "Woman do a very good job of taking care of everyone else, but we don't do so well taking care of ourselves through loss." Lynne added, "Loss can be certainly be the death of a loved one, but it's also things like the loss of a house, downsizing, loss of youth, and job loss. Since we women will probably live well into our 90s, we will experience many life crises from death to illness." Some of the latest data from the Center for Disease Control confirms that in general the life expectancy for the US population continues to increase, with the average life expectancy for white women to be 80.8 years, and black women 76.5 years.

Through an interactive process with the group, Lynne will talk about the process of grieving, and the stages most people will experience as they deal with loss, whether it be the loss of a loved one or perhaps loss of self image.

So why is it important, you may wonder, to deal with loss in a healing manner?

Bereavement is a part of life and the longer you live, the greater the likelihood you'll experience it. Grieving is indeed part of the human experience, but depression is not. Unresolved grief can lead to feelings of depression, when anger and guilt begin to turn inward to eat at one's unconscious. To differentiate between the two, grief is transitory although grieving can last for years, but when a person is grieving, they can still find joy, even if only for a short time. They can laugh, go to work, and resume life activities, undoubtedly feeling painful loss while still being able to function even if at a compromised level. Depression, on the other hand, is a weight that never lifts. People who suffer depression will tell you they feel no joy in a day. Daily activities are always difficult and painful to get through. The feelings of hopelessness and uselessness never leave. Grieving people often cry. Depressed people don't care enough to cry.

Join us for this important topic April 14, at 7 p.m. at the Hingham Public Library.

Holders of associate's or bachelor's degrees who live in the South Shore towns from Plymouth to Quincy are welcome to join the Hingham Area Branch. To learn more, call Patricia McKay at 781-337-3375, or email:hollie@gallivan.org. Visit the branch web site at aauw-ma.org and follow the links to the Hingham Branch.

Gwen Sayian is a mental health counselor, Hingham resident and member of AAUW.

Portraits are the pictures of youth

show a group of Cohasset children during a specific period of time."

The subject is close to Hartshorne as Reed painted her at age 10. While she was quarantined for the mumps (which she never got) she sat for five days in order for Reed to capture her likeness. The large portrait has hung in her home on Border Street, the home she grew up in, since it was completed.

Nancy Garrison, one of the exhibit organizers, is also a portrait subject. She recalls sitting for the portrait in the summertime in Reed's Highland Avenue house. Then seven-years-old, Garrison looked out at the garden while her mother read to her.

"She has a style all her own," said Garrison, adding she had a keen color sense. All her portrait subjects seem to be emerging from a dark background.

Garrison said the children in the portraits were all children whose parents were good friends — the mothers would chat and the fathers would go sailing together out the Cohasset Yacht Club in the summer.

"We were all children of the depression, but depression or not our parents wanted this talented woman to paint their children," said Garrison.

Reed was born in Boston and raised in Newton, Mass. She studied painting at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. Her teachers included artists John Singer Sargent, Frank Benson, Philip Hale, William Paxton, Frederick Bosley. Some of her teachers were visiting instructors in the Portrait Master classes. She taught at the private Cohasset Country Day School, which went up to fourth grade, from 1930 to 1942.

Cohasset's Nancy Garrison, one of the exhibit organizers, is also a portrait subject.

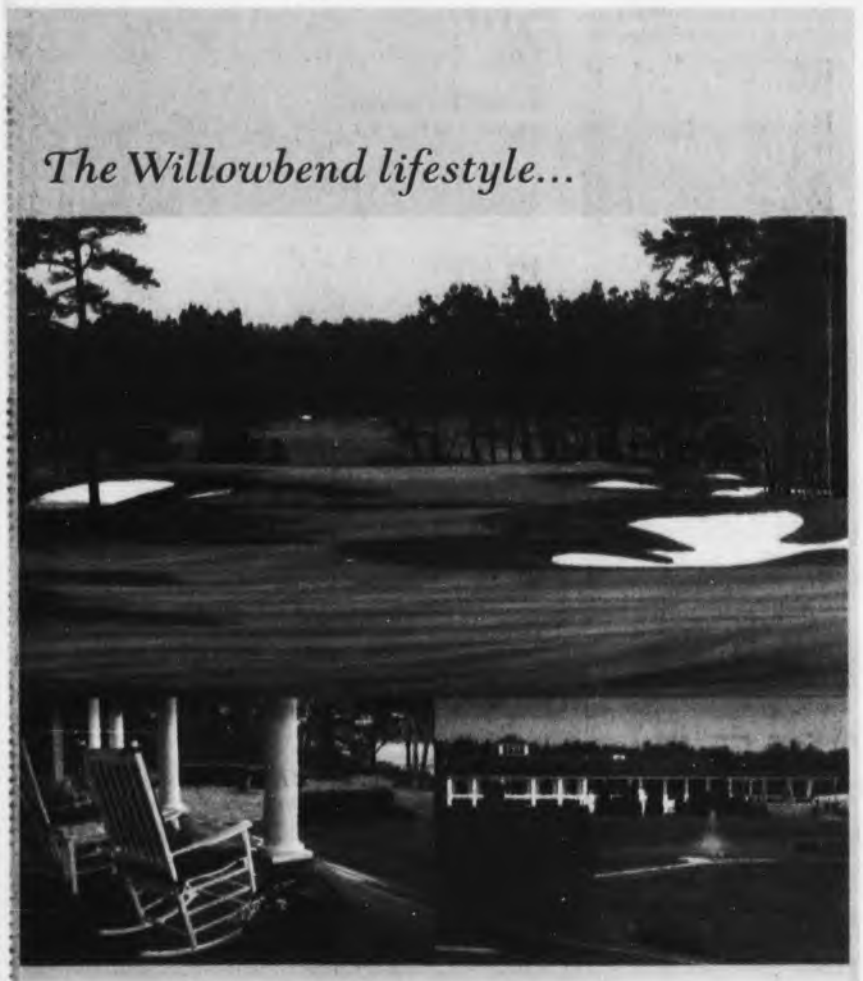
Margaret Wilkins Reed captured Mary Hartshorne of Cohasset at age 10.

Reed was a prolific artist and continued commission portrait painting into her late eighties. Fittingly, the portrait gallery will have photograph of a portrait done of Margaret Reed at age 26.

Tracking down Reed's former students, many of who have moved away from Cohasset and are scattered across the U.S., took a great bit of effort on Hartshorne's part.

"It was simply detective work," said Hartshorne, who has been at the sleuthing for over a year. "It's been the most fun ever!"

Describing the process as a sort of backwards Final Four tournament bracket, Hartshorne says she first made phone calls to her fellow classmates who were still in Cohasset or had recently been in Cohasset. Those first sources gave her different leads as to where people were now living and whether they believed they sat for a Reed portrait. Her detective work led her to call former Cohasseters now living as far away as Florida and Maine.



In many cases, her contemporaries were overcome when Hartshorne called out of the blue.

"Everyone I talked to was warm, receptive and cooperative," says Hartshorne. Without having to make a single follow-up call the portrait subjects agreed to lend their portraits to the Historical Society for the exhibit. Many of them were shipped or brought to Cohasset by the subject's children.

"There was such a loving warmth around this effort," Hartshorne says.

She expects most of the young children starring in the portraits — now very much all grown up — will be in attendance at the exhibit's opening.

The opening will be held on Sunday, April 19 from 3 to 5p.m. at the Cohasset Historical Society building (The Pratt Building) at 106 South Main Street. Light refreshments and tea will be served. Admission is free, but donations are always welcome. For more information, call 781-383-1434.

Five percent election turnout

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A total of 272 voters, a little more than 5 percent of Cohasset's registered voters, made their way to the Town Hall auditorium on Saturday.

The lack of voters didn't make any difference in the election results as each of the balloted candidates was voted to their respective posts without any trouble.

"It was very slow," said Town Clerk Marion Douglas. The poll workers, who knew to expect a light voter turnout, came with books, knitting and plenty of chat. "We thought there might be a rush after soccer, but no. People just came through in ones and twos."

There was little to drive voters to the polls — no contested seats and each open position had a candidate to fill it.

Selectman Ted Carr easily got elected to his second term, and garnered the most votes of any candidate – 235. Margaret Chapman, candidate for the Board of Heath, ran a close second receiving 232 votes. School Committee candidates Helene Lieb and Paul Schubert each received 211 votes.

Both Planning Board candidate Jean Healey Dippold and Carr were campaigning for most of the day on Highland Avenue.

"Of course after the November presidential election it's like one extreme to another," said Douglas. In November, poll workers were out straight for most of the day checking in and recording the votes of roughly 85 percent of registered voters.

On Saturday, 153 voters came out from precinct 1 and 119 came from precinct 2.

This election is one of the lowest turnouts in recent memory. Douglas said she believes only a state primary where about three percent of the voters came to the polls rivals it.

Below are the town officials elected or re-elected on Saturday:

- Board of Selectmen (one seat, three year position): Edwin "Ted" Carr, 88 South Main St.
- School Committee (two seats, three year positions): Paul Schubert, 155 Sohier St. and Helene Lieb of 18 Deep Run
- Planning Board (one seat, five year position): Jean Healey Dippold, 93 South Main St.
- Recreation Commission (one seat, five year position): Kathryn Lydon, 23 Forest Ave.
- Board of Health (one seat, three year position): Margaret Chapman, 25 Virginia Lane
- Board of Library Trustees (three seats, three year positions): Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St.; Patience Towle, 61 Highland Ave.; Roger Lowe, 100 Beach St.
- Board of Assessors (one seat, three year position): Michael Patrolia, 15 Cushing Road
- Sewer Commission (one seat, three year position): John Beck, 44 Nichols Road
- Water Commission (one seat, three year position): John McNabb, 53 Pond St.
- Housing Authority (one seat, five years): Nancy Barrett, 60 Elm St.

Goal line in sight

Deadline looming if turf field is to be built this summer

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In the grand scheme of things, the Cohasset Sports Partnership is almost there.

In a matter of months, the private fundraising group has been able to raise over $420,000 to go toward the construction of a synthetic turf field at the Cohasset High School.

Yet, with a May 15th deadline looming if the field is to be built this summer and ready for use in September, the partnership is vigorously seeking additional donors to meet the target of $550,000.

A total of 290 families, with varying monetary contributions from $500 to $25,000, have given to the effort thus far.

"While we have been successful in the fundraising, especially in this economic climate, we still need to get in front of a lot of people," said George McGoldrick, president of the Cohasset Sports Partnership. "Now that the sun has finally come out and people are back on the fields we are optimistic we can reach the goal line."

The Partnership continues to contact people, "anyone who wants to help, we'd love to have them."

The Cohasset turf field project was endorsed by a majority of Town Meeting voters in November 2009. The passage of the article authorizes the town to borrow up to $500,000 to design, permit and construct the field, but conditions that bond with having $550,000 in private funds available to be raised by the Partnership.

The town's portion of the cost would largely come from a budgetary transfer of current existing operating/maintenance expenses at Alumni Field to pay for the turf field bond. There is approximately $40,000 in maintenance costs, which are currently in the town's operational budget. The annual payments for the bond are expected to be between $46,000 with a high of $50,000. Booster clubs will contribute $6000 annually to the town for the 15-year life of the town's bond for the field.

As a way to recognize those who contribute to the turf field, the Cohasset Sports Partnership will be constructing a "donor field" at the entrance to Alumni Field. Bricks of various sizes based on the donation amount will be laid out in a field pattern.

McGoldrick said donors are inscribing the bricks with creative messages, including their family names, each child's name on a brick, in memory of a loved one, honoring championship teams and individual athletic achievements and company names. The partnership recently held an event at Atlantica to encourage residents to "buy a brick." On a night in March, a telephone campaign was held.

> "Now that the sun has finally come out and people are back on the fields we are optimistic we can reach the goal line."
> — George McGoldrick, Cohasset Sports Partnership

The total cost to design, permit and build the synthetic turf field is estimated to be $1,050,000, including a new track. The Cohasset Sports Partnership has their work cut out for them as they work toward their $550,000 fundraising goal. McGoldrick said if the partnership can't reach $550,000 goal the field would have to wait until summer 2010.

The partnership received approval from the Board of Selectmen to proceed with preliminary engineering services in February in the hopes of being able to construct this summer. The cost of $50,000 was included in the original cost estimates. The project will go out to bid later this month subject to permitting and fundraising.

There have been some detractors for the field given the sour economy and other needs within the town, but no one spoke against the project at Town Meeting in November.

"A new field and new track is a great asset for the town, one that everyone can use. With all the negative news lately it would be a positive event for the town to be able to open the field this September," said McGoldrick.

About Cohasset Sports Partnership

The Cohasset Sports Partnership (CSP) is a private, non-profit organization dedicated to enhancing the athletic facilities and programs offered to students and residents. The focus of the CSP will be to develop resources beyond those traditionally used to support local public athletic programs and apply those resources to projects that might not otherwise exist without outside funding. The CSP is a non-profit 501 (c) (3) organization affiliated with the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund. Donations are tax-deductible to the extent allowed by law and are eligible for corporate matching funds. More information is on their website www.cohassetsportspartnership.org.

Film about making right choices

In preparation for the celebratory graduation and prom season, Cohasset High School is hosting a presentation for high school seniors on the importance of the choices they make now and in the future. On Friday, April 17, a 17-minute film "Choices" will be shown to the Class of 2009.

Lynda Steverman of Scituate lost her son PJ in 1995 after he went missing from a college party. The Steverman family has edited news footage of the search for PJ with PJ's childhood photos into a video, which shows how what seem like small decisions can lead to disastrous circumstances. Lynda Steverman shows the video to students throughout the South Shore and will speak to the students after the video.

The assembly is being presented by the Social Service League of Cohasset through a donation to the Scituate Recreation Center, the chosen charity of the Steverman family.

The "Choices" presentation will begin at 12:45 p.m. on Friday, April 17 at the Cohasset High auditorium. Parents are welcome to attend.

Antique Appraisal Day to returns to Cohasset

Skinner, Inc. appraisers, including Stewart Whitehurst, are coming to Cohasset for the third annual Antique Appraisal Day from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Saturday, April 25. People can bring in their antiques to be appraised or for large pieces, several good photographs can be used by the appraiser. Be sure to include photos of any special markings, numbers or other details that may assist in the appraisal process.

The event is sponsored by the Friends of Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs and will take place at St Anthony's Parish Center, 10 Summer St., Cohasset. Appraisals are $12 per item, or $30 for three items. Excluded items include coins, stamps, jewelry and musical instruments. A maximum of three items per individual will be allowed. Snacks and refreshments will be available to enjoy while waiting to meet with the appraiser.

Proceeds will help the efforts to make the dream of a new senior center a reality in Cohasset.

For more information, call Cohasset Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112 or John Campbell, president of the Friends at 617-909-5687.

Art scholarships being offered

The South Shore Art Center offers five scholarships to graduating high school seniors who have been accepted to a school of fine arts or an accredited institution of higher learning. Applications and portfolios will be accepted April 25-29, 2009. Interested students should bring a portfolio of eight original works, no larger than 18" x 24" (no slides), including a self-portrait or portrait done from life and a composition drawing or painting using representational subject matter in any media. Scholarships range from $200-$1,000. Scholarships will be awarded at the opening of the 54th annual Arts Festival, on Friday June 19. For more information, contact South Shore Art Center, 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org/wdnew/comntypr.htm

OPINION

EDITORIAL

End of an era

The planned closing of the cable-TV studio in Norwell signifies the end of local access television in its original form.

The era, which on a very small scale, could be likened to the onset of cable-TV itself, was something that will likely be chronicled in local history books.

The good news is that towns, like Cohasset, are going to have the flexibility and ability to film in town and have more live programming.

If we turn the clock back to the 1980s when "cable" was relatively new, initially towns were to have their own local-access studios. Our memory is sketchy on this point, but we believe that local benefits were offered because the cable company (which has changed names and owners over the years) was allowed to have a monopoly on the service.

Local access TV programming was in its infancy then, but it was "tons of fun."

Locally we had two popular talk shows: "Pierson to Person," hosted by Wig Pierson of Cohasset, and "The Detwiler Journal," hosted by Bob Detwiler of Norwell.

We remember covering the local cable-TV "Emmy" awards at what was then Hugo's – where Pierson and Detwiler were competing for top honors! The event drew plenty of press and a "red-carpet" crowd with men in tuxedos and women in evening dress.

As "local access" was centralized in the Comcast studios off Route 53 in Norwell (for years, there was a studio next door to Cohasset in North Scituate), Cohasset has continued to be fortunate to have the local show "Our Town" hosted by Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo that keeps us abreast of local issues.

While challenges lie ahead to ensure local access cable programming continues, we are hopeful that more local government and local entertainment will be covered. However, programming will require volunteers of all ages. We envision students, parents and seniors all getting involved!

Competition between Comcast and Verizon is also on the horizon. Competition can be a good thing for viewers.

Many will remember the days before cable-TV, when we basically had three main channels: ABC, NBC and CBS. Some readers may recall when TV was not on 24/7 and a "test pattern" was all that appeared on the screen when there was no programming.

We have a friend who recalls great excitement in his neighborhood in the early 1950s when word spread that the local TV shop had color TV. People ran from their homes down to the town center to discover that the TV shop had draped sheets of tinted cellophane over the TV screens in the window. Nevertheless, the crowd stood and stared at the "colorized" black and white program that was being televised.

Real color TV was still years away.

Earth Day festival is April 18

The sixth annual Earth Day Sustainable Living Festival, sponsored by Sustainable South Shore, a group of 18 South Shore towns, will take place Saturday, April 18, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., at the DCR Mary Jeanette Murray Bathhouse, 204 Nantasket Ave., Hull

Log onto the Web site, sustainablesouthshore.org, for a list of some of the renewable energy and sustainable living companies — geothermal, solar and wind; green technology; organic gardening and lawns, compost bins, rain barrels; electric and biofuel vehicles; nature organizations — that will be at the festival this year. There will also be an all-day kite festival, children's eco-activities, eco-adventure and sustainable transportation, and more.

There will be tours of the Hull Wind Turbine at Pemberton Point every 15 minutes from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear fellow Cohasset Residents,

The Cohasset Rotary Club would like to thank everyone again for all their help, support and understanding to help make the 33rd Cohasset Rotary Road Race by the Sea 10K held on Sunday April 5, a great success. We had a wonderful day, the weather could not have been better, with a record field of over 1600 runners registered and hundreds of spectators.

The cooperation and efforts of the Police & Fire Departments, the DPW, numerous Town employees, the contractors working on the roads in town, the Water & Sewer Departments, The Music Circus, sponsors, merchants, volunteers, all helped this event be so successful.

We especially want to thank all the citizens of Cohasset for their cooperation in helping us thru the joint effort of all, with the short traffic disruptions, we were again able to provide a safe venue in our beautiful Cohasset for the race.

We hear from so many of the runners and spectators how welcome they fell in our town and how appreciative they are of so many residents turning out to cheer and encourage the runners along the way.

LIBRARY CORNER

Independent Film Night is next Thursday

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "The Pope's Toilet" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, April 16. Free admission and free refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Library Book Group – Join others for coffee and discussion of the book "Unaccustomed Earth" by Jhumpa Lahiri at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, April 29. All are welcome.

Facebook for Beginners and Parents – Learn what Facebook is, how children are using it and why Facebook has become the social networking Web site to join. Diane Danielson, chief executive officer and founder of the DowntownWomensClub.com will present this free talk at 7 p.m., on Thursday, April 30.

Library Databases – What do Consumer Report and Fodor's Travel Guide have in common? People can now access these guides on the library's database. Whether looking to replace a kitchen appliance or find information on travel destinations, Infotrac's Statewide Electronic Resources are available 24/7 from one's home computer. Log on with the library's barcode from the Web site at www.cohassetlibrary.org, and click on Research.

FOR CHILDREN

Story and Craft Registration – Online registration will begin Friday, April 17. Story and Craft is for Cohasset residents ages 3 through 6. It will take place in the Story Room from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m. or 1 to 1:45 p.m., on Thursdays, April 30, May 7, May 14 and May 21. To register, log on to www.cohassetlibrary.org, click on Calendar, click on April 30, and click on either the morning or afternoon session and fill out the registration form using the child's name and age.

MamaSteph – Performance at 10:30 a.m., on Mondays, April 13, 27, May 4 and 11, in the Story Room. All ages and communities are welcome. Funded by the Friends of Cohasset Library.

Drop-In Story Time – Tuesdays, April 14 , 28, May 5, 12 and 19. All ages and communities are welcome.

FOR VETERANS

Fee help with benefit applications

Lt. Ralph Talbot Disabled American Veterans Chapter 65 is offering fellow veterans free assistance on Wednesday, April 22, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., at the Weymouth Elks Club, 1197 Washington St., Route 53, East Weymouth.

Veterans who need help with disability applications or requests for rating increases, as well health, education, and survivor information for all veterans, spouses and dependents, are welcome.

Officers from Boston Disabled American Veterans and the state Department of Veterans Services will are expected to attend to provide assistance with federal and state forms.

For more information, call Joe McElroy at 781-383-0505.

Veteran and surviving spouse assistance

Veteran and Surviving Spouse assistance will be offered from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., on Wednesday, April 22, at the Weymouth Elks Club, 1197 Washington St., Route 53, East Weymouth. Lt. Ralph Talbot Disabled Americans Veterans Chapter 65 will be assisted by DAV National service officers and representatives from the Massachusetts Department of Veterans' Services.

Disability and rating increase issues, as well as checking on appeals and health, education, survivor, vocational, housing, food assistance and other types of help will be available. It is suggested that attendees bring documentation such as separation documentation (ex: DD214) and information to support initiation or follow-up on claims.

Questions may be referred to Joe McElroy at 781-383-0505.

Veterans agent hours

Joseph R. McElroy, director of veterans services in Cohasset announces his office hours for the months of April, May and June at the Paul Pratt Library, Study Room B, located at 35 Ripley Road. If possible, call in advance at 781-383-0505.

Closing Border St. for drainpipe work

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Advanced Notice – Border Street Closed Week of April 20 — This past week the Town opened the bids from 11 contractors who bid on a Town project to replace a non-functioning drainpipe at the Border Street cut. According to state laws all capital projects over a certain amount must be bid publicly. Last year this project was placed out for bid, but the bids were all greater than the amount of money that the Town had available for project construction. We sat down with the engineer and were able to redesign the project in small ways that would not compromise the project, yet offered the potential for a reduced cost. Of course, the business climate is also a bit different this year than it was last year. When the bids were opened last week the results were within the Town's budget. So we are getting ready to go to work.

This pipe is located between Parker Avenue and the Mill River Bridge at the end of a marsh that is fed from Cohasset Harbor. At this location there is a "cut" or a small stream that should allow flow, depending on the tides, between the harbor and the Gulf River. Ever since the drainpipe became non-functioning, the small stream in the marsh does not flush well. The water in the cut sometimes stagnates as a result of the lack of flushing. Once the pipe is reestablished, vigorous flow should keep the channel open and allow the salt marsh through which it flows to flourish.

In order to replace this pipe, Border Street will be closed for a one-week period from Monday April 20th through Friday April 24th. The work is timed to coincide with spring school vacation. This schedule was chosen so that the school bus service will not be negatively impacted by this construction. Both the Police and Fire Departments have been involved in this decision and have adjusted their operations accordingly.

Little Harbor Project — We have received numerous calls regarding when paving will be done on the various roads around Little Harbor. As you many remember, the Town is doing all of the paving on this project except for trench patching, which is the responsibility of L M Holdings, the contractor. We are waiting for two big events to happen before paving can resume: The first is the reopening of the asphalt plants. Most plants in the state are shut during the winter months due to the high cost of energy required to produce the asphalt and to keep it at a workable temperature. The second is for the asphalt contractors to call their workers back to work after the winter season lay-offs. We are in communication with the contractors and expect the plants to open shortly. Right now it looks like paving could begin as early as the week of April 20th.

So now, where will we pave? The first paving will be done on the various side roads that were under construction last winter. These, of necessity are the highest priority. When these roads have received their base coat they will be much more passable. Then, the roads that were base-coated last year will receive attention for final paving. To give you an idea of the huge quantity of paving to be done, our plan is to have a paving contractor come to Town two days per week from April through mid-November. Even with this aggressive plan we expect that paving will not be completed in 2009 and will need to be finished in 2010.

One last thing… The Little Harbor Project Team did a marvelous job at putting the roads into decent shape for the very successful Cohasset Rotary Road Race By-the-Sea held last Sunday. The Rotary Club reports an all time high number of runners and that the race went off with out a hitch. We are told that the Cohasset Rotary Club is very grateful to the Little Harbor Project for their efforts.

It happens on Easter

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

In the Binghamton area of upstate New York, where a goodly number of Czechs and Slovaks have settled, they are said to still practice some of the eastern European rites of Easter.

On Easter Sunday, the young men visit the homes of the girls with whips to whip them out of bed. But she is ready with gifts of eggs that she has decorated, or an embroidered handkerchief or two.

On Easter Monday, the procedure is reversed. The girls whip the boys from bed and receive candy, fruit, kerchiefs or a gay skirt in return. But no eggs, for that's women's work in the old country.

Or so the New York Folklore Quarterly says.

The girls boil their eggs hard and cover them with a mixture of shellac, alcohol and a purple dye that does not penetrate the shell. Four or five layers are applied with a cloth dipped in the mixture.

The old-fashioned Easter egg hunt is disappearing from most parts of the country but not so in the little town of Stallo, Mississippi.

When the egg is dry, designs are outlined with a file, then the dye is scraped off within the outline to make the design in white against a purple background. The purple represents the holiness of the Lenten season.

Ukrainians think so highly of decorated Easter eggs that there is a woman called a "pysarka" whose specialty is decorating special eggs for others to be blessed and presented as gifts.

One of the hard-boiled eggs was chopped up and each family member ate a portion to start the Easter dinner and signify the end of the Lenten fast.

The word Easter is believed to have come from the Scandinavian "Ostra" or the Germanic "Eastre," both goddesses of fertility whose festival was celebrated by pagans on the first day of spring.

The egg as a symbol of continuing life predates Christianity, along with the Easter bunny, the most fertile animal the Ancients could think of.

The offspring of German settlers in Pennsylvania looked forward to a visit from "Oschter Haws" almost as much as Santa Claus because, if they were good, he would leave a nest of colored eggs for them, giving rise to Easter baskets.

The old-fashioned Easter egg hunt is disappearing from most parts of the country but not so in the little town of Stallo, Mississippi.

Women and children wait in church while the men of Stallo hide some 300 eggs in long grass in a meadow and the kids are turned loose to find them. The one who finds the Queen's Nest, four or six of the brightest grouped together, wins a prize.

At one time the Stallo egg hunt also gave the women and girls a chance to show off their Easter finery. One resident recalled hers for the Mississippi Folklore Register:

"It was white organdy with many ruffles, and I had new white sandals to match. It had rained the night before, and of course the roads back then were very muddy. I remember walking barefoot and holding my dress up around my thighs.

"About 100 yards from the church, I stopped, washed my feet in a rain puddles, put on my shoes. And entered in style."

HEALTH NOTES

Volunteers are a valuable resource

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

By and large, Cohasset citizens have a wide range of skills. Most are public spirited and very busy. So, it's with some trepidation that those with public service responsibilities request their time for town business. But, we've had some major weather surprises not to mention economic ones, and it's best to be prepared for big surprises. In 2009, Massachusetts had at least five calls for volunteer assistance in towns that could not be handled by regular personnel on duty. In many cases, Cohasset volunteers went to another town to assist, but some emergencies were for general assistance, one such call was for assistance with the Boston Marathon which recruited volunteers from Hopkinton to Boston, not only medical personnel, but administrative and public safety personnel as well as assistants for crowd management, etc. Cohasset has upward of 35 regular medical volunteers, nurses, aides and others, but in a real emergency these numbers would be quickly overwhelmed.

The two agencies that support regular medical safety and other personnel are the Local Emergency Planning Committee (LEPC) and the Medical Reserve Corps (MRC) that support national and community service. The Peace Corps supports such international volunteer goals. MRC units are community-based and volunteers include medical and public health professionals such as physicians, nurses, pharmacists, dentists, veterinarians and epidemiologists, and other community members, such as interpreters, chaplains, office workers and legal advisors. MRC volunteers supplement existing local emergency and public health resources. There is always a need for expert volunteer support to bolster Cohasset's emergency management activities. Call the Board of Health if you are interested.

Perhaps the quintessential volunteers were those who ran and those who supported them in last Sunday's Cohasset Rotary Road Race by the Sea. This year there were 1,500 runners, some 20 percent more than last year and the most ever. To carry off this massive event, more than 150 volunteers of all ages from elementary school through adult, were called on to participate. Some did registration, others worked along the entire route with crowd management and still others handed out water and the other dozens of tasks needed for this hugely successful event.

In a town with some very bright and influential people, there is often a need for specialized skills relevant to specific problems the town may have – and we have several. The Town Meeting addressed one, Cat Dam, which for years has had volunteers scheduling the amount of water flowing into Upper Little Harbor. Town Meeting narrowly passed an initiative to collect baseline data for determining appropriate flow rates into upper Little Harbor that would ensure its brackish waters will support the vegetation growing around it. Finally, the volunteers will have an important tool to actually tell them how much water needs to enter Upper Little Harbor to keep it healthy.

Several articles served to finally enable the town to build a needed senior center. Something our population studies tell us we will desperately need for the Baby Boomers soon to become older, the creation of the Senior Center initiative was also mostly the product of volunteers who formed committees and put together a workable plan involving generous benefactors, gifts of land and abutters willing to make adjustments.

And then we have windmills. Not a subject addressed at Town Meeting, but a perfect example of volunteers stepping in and spending large amounts of time, energy and supplying quantities of data to what end is not certain. In the context of the world's problems, the energy spent on the pursuit of and opposition to wind turbines in Cohasset seems energy better spent elsewhere. The windmill debate has displayed an inordinate spectrum of skills in the presentation of viewpoints before the Planning Board. Would that the possessors of such skills put them to better use. We have had at least three meetings with roughly the same information discussed and no concrete change in outcome. We have been pelted with dazzling financial summaries, citizens volunteering enormous amounts of time and officials on town boards attempting to pursue an orderly process of evaluating a proposal.

Summarizing, Cohasset volunteers all have one characteristic: the desire to help the town in some way and for that they deserve our praise and support.

Pension reform is long overdue

THE HEDLUND REPORT

It's unfortunate that it takes an historic economic collapse, a rash of bad press, and abysmally low approval ratings from the voters to convince legislative leadership to act on something as needed and overdue as pension reform. But that is what's happened, and the end result is good news for taxpayers and should help start to win back some of the public trust the Legislature has squandered away in recent years.

The bill, Senate 2025, tackles some of the loopholes and self-serving clauses that have allowed for the systematic abuse of the state's pension system. This bill isn't about punishing the average state pensioner, who worked hard, played by the rules, and now receives a modest annuity of about $24,000. It is about preventing the high-profile, high-cost cases involving state employees who game the system, drive up the taxpayers' share of pension costs, and solidify the public's belief that state government is dominated by political insiders looking out for themselves rather than the common good.

The Senate bill focuses on cases like that of former State Senate and University of Massachusetts President William Bulger, who was able to use his annual housing allowance, annuity and other perks to fluff his annual pension take up from $179,000 to more than $200,000. Former elected officials, such as James Marzilli, Francis Mara, and Vincent Piro, all of whom were essentially forced from office due to allegations of wrong-doing, wouldn't be able to receive an enhanced pension for failing to win re-election. And legislators who resign shortly after being sworn into office won't be able to receive a full year's credit towards their pensions as former state senator Cheryl Jacques did back in 2004, and as House Speaker Sal DiMasi did this past year.

I take a particular amount of pride in the Senate's pension reform package because it incorporates many provisions that I have supported for several years now. For example, each of the three abuses I just mentioned would have been eliminated under legislation I sponsored in 2007 and this year. The Senate also adopted an amendment of mine that requires legislators who file bills changing the pension system to declare how much the changes would cost and identify the funding source for the changes was also defeated.

I was disappointed that the Senate rejected an amendment of mine to cap pensions at 400 percent of the average pension, particularly considering the Chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee filed a similar bill earlier this session. Also rejected was an amendment contained in my pension reform bill that would eliminate windfall pensions for state employees who are fired or have their positions eliminated. This provision has allowed the former project manager for the Big Dig to start collecting a $72,000 annual pension at the age of 46, while also working as the transportation secretary in Rhode Island.

However, the salary cap issue will be required to be included in a study being conducted by a special pension reform panel, as well as new rules for state employees who work two jobs with different retirement rules.

My Republican colleagues and I were able to convince our Democratic colleagues to include two amendments that would prevent municipal officials who earn less than $5,000 from receiving a year of credible service towards a pension. This would prevent local officials who serve in essentially volunteer positions from later using their time in office to create or pad a pension.

In addition, the Senate reform package also:

- changes the rules for disability pensions for those injured while filling in temporarily for higher ranking employees;
- aligns the MBTA pension system with the state system;
- prohibits public employees who work two jobs from claiming a pension based on the combined salaries.

This latter provision will prevent future cases like that of Charles Lincoln, the Brockton police officer who was able to pad his pension by using vacation and sick days to work a second job at the Plymouth County House of Corrections. In the future, double-dipping state employees would have to meet the pension requirements of both positions — a much higher and tougher burden than simply allowing an employee to pad his income over the final three years of his career.

The Senate may take up another pension reform package this fall once the special commission reviewing the issue finalizes its recommendations.

Nearly $1.4 billion in tax dollars will be spent in the coming year to fully-fund the state's pension system. While these changes won't save $1.4 billion, they will save taxpayers tens of millions of dollars in the long run, plus, more importantly, start to change the culture of abuse in the state and hopefully restore some of the public trust.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund represents the Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Weymouth, Hull, Hingham, Cohasset, Marshfield, Scituate and Duxbury.

Senior Center explored on Our Town

"Our Town," co-host, Pat Martin, goes behind the camera to illustrate the proposed new Senior Citizen Center and how it can better serve Cohasset's senior population.

This special show also catches viewers up with the services the Council on Aging currently provides and details its popular upcoming event, the Antiques Appraisal scheduled for April 25 at St. Anthony's.

Tune in Monday, at 9 p.m., or Tuesday or Thursday, at 9 p.m., all on Comcast Channel 10.

Tax Dinner is April 11

American Legion Auxiliary will host a Tax Dinner at 6 p.m., on Saturday, April 11 at the Legion Post on Summer Street. Cost is $8 per person. Dinner will include pasta, meatballs, salad, bread and butter. Also featured will be raffles and Crusin. Funds raised will support the Women's Auxiliary scholarships and programs.

Got Books! The Carriage House Nursery Schools Green Class reads 500 books!

Reading Challenge met at Carriage House Nursery School

On March 31, the goal of 500 was reached and then went beyond to a total of 628 books read during the month of March.

Carriage House Nursery School's first Reading Challenge began as a natural extension of the annual celebration of Dr. Seuss' birthday and participation in Read Across America. Kelly Kwiatkowski and Lydia Guild, the teachers of the Green Pre-Kindergarten class at Carriage House Nursery School, decided to come up with a Reading Challenge for their 12 eager learners.

The project began by proposing a question to the children, "can we read 500 books together?" The children kept track of the books that were read to them at home with their parents, siblings and babysitters, in their reading logs. Also included were stories that were read aloud at school. A deadline of March 31was set to reach the goal.

Each Monday, the children were ecstatic to bring in their reading log pages. Together, the amount of books read at home were counted and colored in a block on the reading chart. In addition to adding to the total each week, the children were involved in many discussions about reading, including their favorite books and who they read with each night or day. As the total number of books increased the children, along with their parents, became increasingly motivated to read more books and were able to see the results of their work on the chart. Each week they were thrilled as more than 100 blocks were colored.

On March 31, the goal of 500 was reached and then went beyond to a total of 628 books read during the month of March. The children celebrated their achievement with a trip to Paul Pratt Memorial Library to check out a book and to listen to a few stories read by librarian Mrs. Moody.

Along with the confidence that the children have attained from reaching their goal they gained much more from this experience. The time that they spent listening to stories will enrich their potential to learn about the world around them and to express themselves creatively. Early reading experiences provide more than bedtime story entertainment; with these experiences the potential to develop a lifelong love of reading and learning will increase.

Carriage House Nursery School is at 23 North Main St., downtown Cohasset. Applications for the summer program as well as enrollment for fall 2009 are currently being accepted. Call 781-383-9785 or come by the school for more information.

More information needed for wind

Hearing continued to April 22

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Our first objective is to make sure we have everything we need to make a decision."
— Planning Board chairman Al Moore.

Those hoping for some sort of resolution on the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project did not get it Wednesday night. Following a close to three-hour session on the controversial project, the Planning Board decided they needed a few more bits of information from the applicant before closing the public hearing.

"Our first objective is to make sure we have everything we need to make a decision," said Planning Board chairman Al Moore.

The hearing was continued to Wednesday, April 22 at 9p.m. The issue is once a public hearing closes no new information can be submitted to the board, but technical clarifications are permitted during the board's deliberation process.

The application put forth by a private developer, Plymouth-based CCI-Energy, proposes constructing two 100-meter 1.65 megawatt wind turbines off Route 3A behind Graham Waste. The project is the first to apply for a special permit under the town's wind energy conversion facility bylaw passed at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting.

The primary driver behind keeping the hearing open was the submission of an alternative turbine location for the tower closest to Route 3A. The alternative was brought before the board as a result of a statement made by planning board member Stuart Ivimey at last week's public hearing. Ivimey indicated that he would not be comfortable approving a project if Hingham Lumber was located in the turbine's fall down zone. A lowering of the 100-meter tower, a re-location or the removal of the turbine entirely would alleviate the problem, he said.

The alternative location is approximately 40 meters from what had been presented previously. The alternative location moves the tower due west (to the other side of the Graham Waste driveway) and away from Sunrise Assisted Living and the Rose Hill development. Developer Jim Sweeney, president of CCI-Energy, said they wanted to give the planning board the option before the public hearing closed, but were not officially proposing the re-location.

"We would prefer the turbine stay where it is," said Sweeney.

The general consensus of the consultants for the applicant and the town was the relocation of the turbine would not greatly affect the previously submitted data on noise and shadow flicker impacts. However, the town's engineering consultant John Modzelewski and planning board members were not completely comfortable with not having hard data on the new location in front of them.

The board requested the applicant provide new flicker and sound data for the alternative location.

"I'd like to at least have a statement from a professional engineer…that the alternative location will not have a significant impact" on the sound, shadow flicker, ice throw data already submitted, said Modzelewski.

Other minor clarifications including source information on the noise data used to generate the sound models and predicted impacts was also requested.

Questions still remain on how the board will come to a judgment on the shadow flicker and noise.

The town's sound consultant, Jim Barnes, said while he agreed with the noise data submitted on average, he questioned the conservatism in the worst-case scenarios. Particularly with the future Avalon apartment complex the predicted noise impacts are on the border for compliance with the bylaw and state regulations.

One of the stipulations of the wind energy bylaw, and state regulations, is any new source of noise will not increase ambient noise levels by 10 decibels or more. In addition, the source cannot produce a pure tone, like fire engine sirens or the whistling of steam from a vent.

"It is important for use to have a strong sense of comfort that the project will be under the 10 decibel threshold before we approve it," said Ivimey.

There was also some question as to whether to use the worst-case scenario for the shadow flicker analysis, or the number which takes into account the average number of sunny days over a period of years and predicted wind speed and direction. The town's consultant on shadow flicker said best practice in the industry was to use the worst-case scenario.

"There isn't a national standard methodology (for how to incorporate the different variables)," said Modzelewski.

While audience members and planning board members later debated the validity and accuracy of the data, planning board member Charles Samuelson gave his opinion on how the planning board needs to look at the data.

"If everyone is looking for absolutes, they are not going to get it…if you took that approach no one would ever do anything…There is some judgment involved here," said Samuelson. If the board was to approve the project, it would ensure the town would have recourse if the conditions as predicted in the application permit were not accurate, he said.

Ice throw

The Planning Board requested the applicant provide a probability report on ice throw, a condition when ice forms on the blades of the turbine and either drops or is thrown, depending on weather conditions. Atlantic Renewable Energy Services, the applicant, CCI-Energy's consulting engineer, found there would be a low occurrence of ice throw.

Nearby buildings, including Hingham Lumber, would have a probability of being hit by ice once every two years. The probability of a person standing in the area of the turbines being hit by ice was found to be extremely low, occurring once ever five million years.

"The bottom line is there is a very, very low probability of a person being hit by ice," said John Tabaczynski of Atlantic Renewable Energy Services. "With the safety guidelines, the chance of incident is pretty much negligible."

The ice probability study was submitted to the Planning Board office earlier on Wednesday and Modzelewski did not have a chance to review it thoroughly in time for the meeting. He will submit a written review before the next meeting.

Other notables

- Paul Antico, 124 Atlantic Ave., has some concern about the wind turbine manufacturer chosen by the applicant – Canadian-based AAER: "This company has a high likelihood of going bankrupt in the next year." He questioned the validity of the sound, flicker data provided by the company because it has very little real life experience with turbines. "There's no way you can get comfortable that promises will be delivered with the new turbines."
- In response, planning board member Charles Samuelson said the financial and business aspects of the development could not be taken into consideration —"going forward we will make sure the town is absolutely covered."
- Planning Board chairman Al Moore said the applicant has the right to fail, "all we can do is protect the town."
- Jim Sweeney, president of CCI-Energy, said they were aware of the financial problems facing AAER, but were insured for all the unknowns of the project. Sweeney said more established turbine manufacturers including GE and Vestas are not in the market for projects involving one or two turbines.
- Mark Babka of 258 Forest Ave cautioned the planning board to not rush into a decision. "We're talking about a project that our children's children are going to look at — let's get it right."
- Jeff Patterson of 10 Sanctuary Pond said he would like to see a denial as opposed to an approval with conditions, if the planning board feels the project not within the confines of the bylaw, "If (the applicant) overshoots the boundaries of the bylaw, it is not this board's job to bring it down. They should be told no and go back to the drawing board."

Ripples at Ripley Road hearing

ZBA hears first night of testimony

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It's been talked about for over a year and a half, but this week the proposal for a 40-B project at 25 Ripley Road project hit the prime time. The project began the Zoning Board of Appeals process on Tuesday night in its quest for a comprehensive permit.

The Selectmen's office at Town Hall was packed with neighbors armed with myriad concerns from noise to parking to density. The zoning board had their own set of concerns and multiple requests for more information during the course of the night. The public hearing was continued until Tuesday, May 5.

The filing, put forth by Cohasset resident, property owner and developer, Will Charles, proposes transforming the current single-family residence into seven condominium units, two of which would be deemed affordable by state standards.

The project is before the zoning board under Chapter 40-B, the state's affordable housing law, for a comprehensive permit. Under Chapter 40-B, the zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20 to 25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Applications for 40-B projects come under the jurisdiction of the zoning board of appeals; the last 40-B project before the ZBA was 200-unit Avalon apartment complex.

Robert Barrett, attorney for the applicant, said there were 12 other properties in Cohasset that were originally large single-family homes converted to multi-family residences either as rentals or condominiums. As far as the density of the Ripley Road project, Barrett said it was comparable to those other multi-family properties.

"This property is the least residential in character" of them all, he said, because of its location near the library, schools, and Music Circus.

The seven units will range in size from 800 to 1400 square feet and are proposed to be a mix of the one- and two-bedroom units. However, there is a possibility of making all the units two-bedroom. Which units will be the affordable units is yet to be determined, but will need to be determined the public hearings close.

The hearing was stalled at times as the zoning board members and the applicant literally tried to get on the same page. Each zoning board member had sheets and sheets of oversized project drawings and schematics and not all of them were the same. New sets of plans with more details will be submitted to the town in the coming month.

"This project is just too large for a half acre lot."
— Paul Hart of 63 Sohier St

Exterior renovations include the addition of several walk-out (two-foot wide) balconies and a 10-foot wide farmer's porch. The farmer's porch, which the applicant said would be added primarily for aesthetic purposes, will encroach on the Ripley Road 30-foot front setback and require a waiver from the zoning board.

The basement will be converted to a laundry room, an exercise room and storage units.

The zoning board raised several issues with the parking lot (which is designed for 14 spaces, two for each unit), the drainage plan and the septic system. The project will have to file with the Board of Health to address the septic issues and the Conservation Commission to address stormwater runoff mitigation.

With a comprehensive permit application under chapter 40-B the zoning board can grant waivers for local town zoning bylaws in order to accommodate the project. Neil Murphy, the civil engineer for the applicant, said that because the project was 40-B the bylaws don't apply. ZBA chairman Woody Chittick said that wasn't exactly true.

"A (40-B) applicant can request waivers from local bylaw requirements," said Town Counsel Richard Hucksam. The basic standard for the ZBA members to keep in mind was "local concern." If there were issues of public safety, planning/design and environmental impacts then there could be ground for denying a waiver.

"We could always take action afterward," said Murphy, referring to the applicant's ability to appeal a decision of the ZBA to the state.

Chittick requested the applicant to compile a complete list of waivers they intend to seek from the town.

"Our job is to work through these problems and solve them," said Chittick. The ZBA intends to engage the town engineer for his advice and input on various aspects of the project. A lighting and landscaping/screening plan and updated set of plans were among the items requested for the next hearing.

Neighbors speak out

When ZBA chairman Woody Chittick offered the floor to audience members, who mostly composed of neighbors of 25 Ripley Road, they had plenty to say.

The primary concern seemed to be the density of the project – seven units on a half-acre plot. The other issues of parking, noise, traffic, septic stem from the increase of having one family living at the home to having seven families.

"This project is just too large for a half acre lot," said Paul Hart of 63 Sohier St. located directly across Ripley Road from the proposed project. He spoke about the already dangerous intersection of Ripley and Sohier and that the project would add to its congestion and safety.

Hart questioned if the project, which will add two units to the town's affordable housing count, was worth the negative impacts on the neighborhood. With the addition of all seven units to the town's total housing units, Hart said the increase in affordable units would be equal to 1.3 units.

Hart also asked the board to look into the current state of the building, which he claimed was "half condemned." According to the Board of Health files on the property, the health agent inspected 25 Ripley Road in 2004. At that time, Dr. Joseph Godzik cited several concerns for the property where areas of the house did not meet state sanitary codes. In response, the then-owner of the house addressed the Board of Health's immediate concerns and a portion of the house was closed off.

The Board of Health has not been back to inspect the property since September 2004, according to health inspector Tara Tradd in a phone interview.

If the project goes forward and is given a comprehensive permit, the Board of Health would work with the building inspector to ensure the building met all state housing codes before receiving an occupancy permit, said Tradd.

Roger Krafts of 156 North Main St. spoke primarily about the economics of the project. Crafts said he reviewed a profit and loss statement given to him by the applicant Will Charles and did not agree with some of the estimates for both the eventual selling price of the units and the construction costs.

"My concern is this project once started might never reach fruition," said Crafts.

Other residents spoke about the noise increases with the addition of the seven condominiums and safety in the entering and exiting of the property.

History of 25 Ripley Road

The building at 25 Ripley Road has been reincarnated many times over. It was began its life as a single-family residence, but in 1925 was converted into Cohasset Private Hospital. The building was later expanded and housed more than 20 beds. It operated as a hospital until the early 1950s when it was converted to a nursing home. The nursing home closed in the mid-1980s and returned to its beginnings as a single-family home (Information from "Narrative History of Cohasset," Pratt).

In early 2007, the Selectmen appointed Housing Partnership Committee had plans to turn the single-family house into several affordable units. When the Partnership was met with significant neighborhood opposition, they abandoned the project in favor of pursuing other projects. Later that year, Will Charles purchased the property and took up the affordable housing project as his own.

Lobstering talk in Cohasset April 28

A talk by Dave Casoni, secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts Lobsterman's Association, will take place from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., on Tuesday, April 28, at the Lightkeepers' Residence, 15 Lighthouse Lane.

Homarus Americanus, the American lobster, is the most widely recognized seafood in the world. Times have changed since the Pilgrims harvested 20-pound-plus specimens from the beach for fertilizer. Today, it's a delicacy. The process of bringing the lobster to the table involves industry, science, managers, conservationists and consumers.

Times have changed since the Pilgrims harvested 20-pound-plus specimens from the beach for fertilizer

Casoni, a commercial lobsterman, will give an insider's view of the lobster industry, from techniques of harvesting a lobster to managing lobster stocks so they will be here in the future. Those attending the lecture will learn everything about lobstering but were too busy eating to ask. Sorry – lobster will not be served.

Over two thousand runners take off from the starting line in the 2009 running of the annual Cohasset By the Sea Road Race. More than 1,600 runners registered, including 200 Cohasset residents. The winners were both Bostonian's, Michael Chettle, and Kate Klim, who also won last year. For more race photos, see Page 17.

Softball team turning a corner

Offensive firepower, pitching strong points

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

There are two types of moral victory.

There's the type that a team gets from competing with a team it has no business playing with, and then there's the type where a team may not win, but is close enough to see it can happen soon.

For the Cohasset softball team, Tuesday's 4-2 loss at East Bridgewater was the second kind.

After being mercy-ruled twice last season by E.B., this season's re-stocked Lady Skippers played well enough to win this time, and it definitely wasn't a fluke.

Cohasset opened the season with three straight wins, including a pair of blowouts over Hingham, that have the team looking like definite contenders this season.

"It was a heartbreaker," second-year coach Rob Spofford said of the E.B. game. "They scored three unearned runs and we still had the tying run at the plate in the seventh. This was a winnable game. Last year they slaughter-ruled us twice. They're one of the best teams around. They have an excellent pitcher. We'll see them later in the season. I'm optimistic."

East Bridgewater scored twice on one play that handed Cohasset two errors.

"They were throwing errors," Spofford said. "Those are the kinds of mistakes you can fix with practice. It was a tough day to play. It was cold out there. Those kids of days you really have to focus."

Despite the result, there were many positives, including Kelly Naeglin's nine strikeouts in six innings, Carly Salerno's homer and Meredith Kelly's two hits (double and single).

Naeglin, a junior who just came to Cohasset when her family moved from Scituate, was a Patriot League All-Star last year for the Sailors.

She'll be starting for Cohasset now.

Against E.B., she allowed one earned run and six hits with the nine punchouts.

In her first three starts, her numbers were similar, with 42 strikeouts and just three walks to go with eight runs, only one earned for an ERA of 0.35. Opponents were hitting just .105 and had just eight hits in the three games.

When Naeglin needs a break, freshman Hayley Wheelwright can step in.

Last year with the junior varsity as an eighth grader, Wheelwright was 18-1.

Brittany Pinkus was the starter last season, and if called on, the sophomore can deliver as well.

Sophomore Logan Pratt also pitches.

"We have incredible depth in the program," Spofford said. "Even before Kelly moved here we had some depth, but what we have now is just great for the future of the program over the years. We'll be on solid footing for a long time."

Spofford said both Naeglin and Wheelwright played Jr. Olympic softball through the summer, and all work with pitching coaches.

"They're all working hard," he said. "It's a great problem to have. Over the course of the season that dept is really going to help. Our goal this year is the postseason. We missed it last year (Cohasset was 6-14). That was the first time we missed it in four years."

As the early scores indicate, hitting should not be a problem.

"Last year we were able to score runs," Spofford said. "We brought in a new batting style. It's the same style the U.S. National team and University of Arizona uses. We're lucky to have so many gifted athletes that they really took to the hitting concept the second half of last year. They were really pounding the ball."

In those first three victories, Cohasset piled up 31 hits, with five doubles, three homeruns and a .352 average.

"The girls are are really excited about that," Spofford said about the early hitting.

Aside from the pitching, Cohasset will look to Salerno, who has been a steady defensive presence at shortstop.

Kristin Monaco takes the leadoff spot in the lineup.

"Kristin is our leadoff hitter and our catcher," Spofford said. "She's a lefty hitter. We've turned her into a great slapper. She gets on base and has speed. She's also steady as a rock behind the plate."

Senior captain Carley Zappolo starts at second base.

"She's doing a perfect job," Spofford said. "She shows senior leadership and plays well defensively. She and (ss) Carly have played well together for a number of years. They work hard

Cohasset girls basketball team receives special recognition

The Cohasset Girls Varsity Basketball Team has proven successful over the last two years by their 45-4 record and a State Championship, but they have done it in a way that has captured the attention of both fans and officials. The Executive Committee of International Association of Approved Basketball Officials, Plymouth County District- Board 54 has selected the Cohasset Girls Basketball Team as the recipient of the Sportsmanship Award for the 2008-2009 basketball season.

Board 54 believes strongly that the game of basketball should be played with respect and dignity towards players, coaches, and officials. As a result of this philosophy, the Board 54 Sportsmanship Award has been presented to the Cohasset Girls Team for best exemplifying the highest degree of sportsmanship, character and ethics among their players. Executive Board member and Vice–President Richard Lambert presented this award to the girls at their annual banquet in March.

together. It's really great to have such a solid middle infield. There's no replacing that senior leadership."

Another senior is right fielder Brittany Dunn.

"With a solid pitcher, having a good right fielder is so important," Spofford said. "You have so many kids (especially right handed hitters) swinging late that the ball is going there a lot. Brittany has also been our leading hitter. She's hiting .545."

Kelly bats third and plays first base.

"Meredith is just an incredible hitter," Spofford said. "She had two homeruns in three games. Her power numbers are going to continue. Last year as a sophomore she was second on the team in OBS (on base-plus-slugging percentage). She's a natural athlete."

Giving the team another strength is fleet-footed center fielder Christine Coner.

"Christine really embraces hitting and she's fantastic in the outfield," Spofford said. "Against Hingham she made one of the best catches I've ever seen. She ran down a ball that I didn't think anyone could get to. It was to her glove side, but her speed made it happen. She makes a lot happen in the outfield. She's doing a great job."

Freshmen Kayla Orner, Carly Martin, Jen Mullin and Sarah Mavalia have also been working hard to fill out the lineup.

"I've been rotating some kids in from the JV to see what they've got," Spofford said. They've all contributed to both teams. They work real hard."

Along with the two wins over Hingham, Cohasset also beat Nantucket, 6-4.

That was a big win.

"They were a South Sectional Semifinalist last year and they had everybody back," Spofford said. "Kelly struck out 14 and three of their four runs were unearned. That game showed me what the possibilities of this team are. Nantucket had us down 3-0 through four and we never gave up and got six. We know we have the offensive firepower to never be out of any game. We can do it lots of ways. We can play small ball, hit-and-run, move people over, bunt, steal, force defenses to put the ball in play and pressure defenses. Or we can hit for some power. In Hingham Meredith hit a homerun that's still headed for Braintree. We just take what's given and use it."

As a coach, Spofford takes the responsibility for getting the most from his players.

"That's my job as a coach," he said. "To see the girls perform at their highest levels. As a team I know that talent wins games, but teamwork and intelligence win championships. I think this year we can mold together and do something special. We have a nice schedule with 20 games, so there's a long way to go."

Cohasset hosted Abington yesterday and will host a tournament April 24 and 25 with Avon, Pembroke and Randolph visiting.

The team plays at the Barnes Little League Complex on S. Main Street.

Boys Youth Lacrosse Opening Day

Team 3 for Cohasset U13 opened it's season with a convincing win over arch rival Scituate on Sunday. It took just 47 seconds for Patrick Holway to take the face-off, advance the ball down field, hit A.J. Kucinski at the crease with a pin point pass, with Kucinski tallying the days's first goal. Both Kucinski and Holway would finish the day with 3 scores apiece with Holway adding a pair of assists. Martin Buckley also added a pair of assists to go along with his 2 goals while playing both middie and attack. Jack Donohue made a long drive to the cage past several defenders and drove home a score as well. With Sean Mavilia and Cal Robbins playing great ball control at the attack position, Cohasset found itself with the ball at Scituate's defensive end of the field most of the game.

Supporting the midfield as a defensive middie was Christian Kennedy who was tenacious on face-offs and grabbing ground balls as he took 13 for the day. J.P. Adams, Alec Norton. And Hayes Keniley also played strong at the midfield and kept Scituate out of scoring position.

As good as the offense was, the defense was spectacular as Harry Seraikas, Mike Yerardi, Evan Canney, and Steven Iantosca were a stone wall as Scituate managed only 8 shots on goal the entire game. Splitting time in the cage were Wyatt Dominguez and Conor Naughton who together made 5 saves while allowing 3 goals.

Cohasset U13 Team 1 starts the season strong

The Cohasset U13 Team 1 fell behind early by a score of 3-1 and then came charging back against a very big and physical Falmouth team. Falmouth started attacking the Cohasset cage early and often, until the defense of Jack Hoffman, Jack Osten and Max Fitzgerald began closing the door in front of goalie Brian Counihan. Counihan had a great game and made several outstanding saves and cleared the ball effectively.

Once the Team 1 offense started rolling near the end of the first quarter, they could not be stopped. Dan Axelson, Curtis Golden, Ben Buckley, Sam Morris, and Matt Froio all scored at least once and moved the ball very well to find the open man. Richie Kinscherf and Charlie Krumsiek scored their first career goals, with the Krumsiek goal coming on a great feed from Luke O'Brien. Axelson did a nice job moving to defense in the final quarter and Cohasset pulled away for an 11-8 victory.

Girls Youth Lacrosse opens with nice start

The Cohasset Girls U15 Blue team started the season off on a good note as they traveled to Braintree on a surprisingly warm, sunny day. Braintree started the scoring before Cohasset got their game in gear and quickly scored three goals. Kristin Alexander connected with Mariel Teague on a long pass to start the scoring and then Hope Kissick and Kate Bodner found the twine as well. Teague set up behind the goal and made two outstanding passes to Kissick and Bodner as they both scored again.

Cohasset was very strong on the defensive end all day, as Lexa Grasz and Alexander split the halves in the cage. Defensive stalwarts Caitlin Mavilia, Maria Buckley, Kylie Coffman and Abby Carrier made life tough on the Braintree attackers and cleared the ball very well. Grasz would return to her midfield position in the second half and ripped two goals into the net and assisted Kissick on her third of the day. Nicole Farren notched two scores, with the second coming on a great feed from Cassedy Gwynn. Braintree got as close as two goals at one point, before Cohasset pulled away for a 12-7 win.

In Duxbury, the Cohasset seventh grade girls kicked off the season against a talented Duxbury seventh grade team.

Cohasset started off strong, scoring first with a hard shot high in the corner from Mackenzie Axelson off a great feed from Maggie Littlejohn.

The fast pace was set by middies Victoria Bryan, Micaela Durkin, Isabelle Dunne, Christina Tedeschi and Mikayla McGrath who made quick clears downfield with great passing and dodging.

The game was back and forth all day with Cohasset holding the lead for most of the game. Second to score was Maddie Curley off of a pass in traffic from Kathryn Dunn. The action was up and down the field with goalie, Olivia Blackburn, making several good saves. Blackburn had a great game with 10 saves against strong Duxbury shooters. It was an all-out team effort with strong defense by Molly Fitzgerald, Shannon McGowan, Emily Robbins, and Isabelle Seal. Dunne, who was lightning quick throughout the game, scored next off of a pass from Curley. Dunn fired the next one in followed by Bryan scoring with a nice shot off of a penalty to end the half leading 5-4

As the game wore on, Cohasset ran out of steam and Duxbury scored three quick goals to make the final Duxbury 9, Cohasset 7. These two teams will face off again later in the season, which is sure to be another great matchup.

The Cohasset U11 girls White lacrosse team traveled to Duxbury on Sunday and easily outscored the home team in two separate 7-on -7 scrimmages and then also won the 11-on-11 matchup 3-1.

Defense was the key to the white team's success as they were constantly in the passing lanes and showed great hustle and determination by winning many key ground balls. In both the scrimmage and the full field game, the white team showed an ability to make plays via the pass and did a great job of getting open in their offensive zone for clear shots on goal. For many of the third graders, it was their first organized lacrosse game and they showed they have a lot of talent that should make this team tough to beat this spring.

The Girls U11 (third and fouth grade) Blue lacrosse team played their opener on the turf against Braintree and really dominated both 7-on-7 matches. Limited pre-season outdoor sessions didn't hinder Cohasset from controlling most of the ground balls, the time of possession, and the pace of the game. The girls' hustle, determination, and game awareness looked like that of a team in mid-season form.

The combined score of the simultaneous matches was 9-1 in Cohasset's favor. Every individual player on the Cohasset squad contributed in some important way: either through generating goals and assists, maintaining ball control, or communicating and positioning well. But more importantly, they played as a team; talking it up, advancing the ball up the field together, and defending their goal and clearing the ball as a unit. Well done U11 Blue. We have a really strong foundation to work from.

Be proud of yourselves.

Telethon and on-line auction fundraiser

By Claudia McKeon
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Cohasset PSO Telethon and On-line auction fundraiser is a live event broadcast from the Middle-High School Auditorium featuring talented students with a variety of performances. The production is guaranteed to entertain, inform and raise funding critical to the Cohasset Public Schools. The telethon event will take place on Tuesday April 14, from 7 - 9pm on Comcast Cable Channel 22 or come to watch the evening performances at the Cohasset Middle High School.

Call in your Tax Deductible PLEDGE to 1-800-719-3199 to be entered in many exciting raffle prizes. The higher your pledge donation, the more chances you have to win! Phone in your pledges of $100, $75, $50, $25 or more with your credit card information or come down to the Cohasset Middle-High School Auditorium and present your check in person! This year, we are inviting you to be part of the LIVE audience to watch our program. For a mere $5 per family fee, you will have over 2 hours of entertainment and your entry ticket will allow you to be part of special raffle(s)! Each year, we try to do something different to change up the telethon format. Watch and listen closely as this year, we hold special raffles for those calling in pledges at a certain time or for those who paid admission to the event! Also, for the first time ever, our on-line auction will end at 12:00 midnight on the same night as the telethon!
